ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 2nd November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 31st October; and from Calcutta to the 30th October.

THE Viceroy, on his way to Calcutta from Simla, was expected to stop at Aligarh, to visit Sir Syed Ahmed's College.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF has visited the troops of the Hazara Field Force at Oghi, Chermang, Kunhar, and Durband.

THE operations of the Hazara Field Force have resulted in complete success. The Akazais and Hassanzais paying the fines imposed in full, an advance being made to Thakot, and practicable military roads being driven into the heart of the country. Beyond firing a few stray shots at a safe distance from our columns as they moved the tribes offered no further resistance.

THE Chinese Ampa was to leave Lhasa on October 19th, but a report was prevalent that a section of the Llamas was trying to prevent him from starting, being still inclined to oppose the opening of negotiations.

RECENT action on the part of the Chins in attacking a village at Indin, Upper Burma, has resulted in the Government ordering the 43rd Gurkhas to take action against that tribe.

THE latest news from Kabul is that the Amir intends spending the winter in Afghan-Turkistan. He will probably visit Maimana and Herat, returning by Kandahar, thus making a tour of his kingdom. Captain Griesbach accompanies him to Balkh.

THE Madras Government is sending Mr. Garstin, Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, to Orissa, to inquire personally into the distress on the Ganjam coast, with powers to start relief works if thought necessary.

THE effects of the famine at Guzerat are being felt at Bombay, thousands of persons having found their way into that city from the distressed districts.

THE Crawford Commission opened its sittings at Poona on Oct. 23, and since then has sat continuously. Mr. Latram, Advocate-General, and Mr. Jardine appeared for the Government, and Mr. Inverarity defended Mr. Crawford.

THE Government of India have been considering the question of coolie emigration to the French colonies, with the result that such emigration has been stopped.

THE Committee, of which Mr. R. G. Macdonald is president, appointed to consider the reduction of Account work in the offices of Executive Engineers commences work at once, Government desiring their report to be presented by March 1st. Lahore, Allahabad, Bombay, and Calcutta will be visited in succession, and the evidence of local officers of experience taken. This inquiry extends only to the Buildings, Roads, and Irrigation Branches of the Public Works Department.

NOT only is an inquiry to be made with a view to the reduction of Account work in the offices of certain Executive Engineers in the Public Works Department, but Mr. R. G. Macdonald has been deputed to examine, at the same time, into the work done by the Examiners' offices in all branches of the Department. It is alleged that the establishment employed in Examiners' offices is unnecessarily expensive, and the Government therefore wish to ascertain what portion of the work is necessary to efficient administration; what portion, if any, may be dispensed with or simplified; and what reduction can be made in the numbers and salaries of the persons employed. Mr. Macdonald has been specially instructed to direct his attention to the cost of the agency employed in these offices, and to report whether the work required to be done could not, in his opinion, be carried out by a less expensive staff.

MAJOR MELLISS left Simla on the 29th Oct. on a visit to the various Punjab Chiefs, to arrange the preliminary steps regarding the reorganisation of portions of their armies. The actual numbers of men which each State will put on a footing of efficiency will be decided at Lahore during the Viceroy's stay there. Thereafter Major Melliss will go to Rajputana, Central India, and Hyderabad, to gather further information as to the military value of the forces of those States.

THE annual distribution of prizes to the Simla Volunteers took place on the 27th inst. in the Town-hall. There was a fair muster of members of the corps; General Chesney, who subsequently delivered an address to the Volunteers, and several military officers and a number of ladies and gentlemen were also present. Colonel Morton opened the proceedings with a few remarks regarding the year's shooting and the general efficiency of the corps, after which Mrs. Chesney gave away the prizes. After the distribution Major Leigh made a short speech with reference to Colonel Morton's services to the Volunteers, and the loss that the corps would sustain in his departure in February, and Mrs. Leigh then presented Mrs. Morton with a silver salad-bowl, subscribed for by the members of the corps.

THE Simla Municipality have just been officially informed that the octroi tax upon petroleum must no longer be levied, as the oil is already taxed for Imperial purposes. This means a loss of Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 6,000 a-year, to meet which it is proposed to levy octroi upon piece-goods, brass, and hardware.

THE court-martial upon Lieutenant-Colonel Bulkley, Commandant of the 17th Bombay Infantry, commenced on Oct. 22nd at Mhow. The charges are numerous, but they all relate to misappropriation of regimental money or deficiencies in the regimental accounts, and fall under five main heads. The first has to do with a sum of money paid to the credit of the regiment for charpoys made over to the 30th Bombay Infantry, part of which sum, it is said, was paid in to Colonel Bulkley's private account, and retained by him. Secondly, deficiencies are alleged in the half-mounting fund amounting to Rs. 5,000. Again, Colonel Bulkley is charged with having on different occasions drawn cheques upon the regimental band fund, aggregating in all Rs. 3,800, and appropriating the money to his own use. The hutting allowance accounts are also alleged to show a deficiency of Rs. 2,815; and, finally, the charge-sheet states that, exclusive of the above deficiencies, Rs. 10,085 is wanting from the regimental cash balances, and unaccounted for.

THE appointment of Colonel R. P. Nisbet, Commissioner of Rawalpindi, to succeed Mr. Plowden as Resident of Kashmir, which was looked on as practically settled, has fallen through.

A RESOLUTION on the working of the mints shows that the net imports of gold into India during last year amounted to Rs. 2,99,24,810, as against Rs. 2,17,70,652, the previous year.

THE mints are worked at an annual loss of over four and a half lakhs.

ANOTHER resolution on the working of the Indian Companies Act during last year shows that at the close of the year there were 910 companies possessing a nominal capital aggregating 3,025 lakhs, and the actual capital, so far as reported, 2,233 lakhs; the greatest number of these are registered in the Bombay presidency; the number of companies registered during last year was 125.

THE first cotton passed through the Aurungabad mills on the 26th October, but the formal opening is deferred, pending the reply of his Highness the Nizam, who was invited to preside at the ceremony.

A PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE has been held in Bengal to discuss the subjects which are to come before the Allahabad Congress.

A PROVINCIAL CONGRESS is to be formed in Bombay.

It has been decided to send an expedition in the beginning of December against the Sawlapaw Chief in Eastern Karenni, who has been invading Mokine, one of our Shan States, and who refuses to pay allegiance.

A COLUMN, consisting of 100 Europeans and 150 Native troops, will march from Papun, in Lower Burma, and co-operate with a column somewhat stronger from Upper Burma. The Western Karennis, who are very friendly, will doubtless co-operate.

A SMALL survey party will, in all probability, be sent to the Chittagong Hills this winter.

THE alignment of the proposed Delhi and Kalka railway has been begun. The line will connect Calcutta with Kalka.

A SMART encounter with dacoits is reported from Burma. The dacoits lost three men, two of whom were cut down by Lieut. Atkinson, who was severely wounded. A native officer and eleven Sepoys were wounded and a havildar killed whilst storming a strong position of the Setkya pretender.

BOH THADO, a noted dacoit chief of the Pakoko district, was wounded in an encounter with the military police, and being unable to run stabbed himself with a knife, the effect being fatal.

THE following are the final arrangements for the Viceroy's tour:—Nov. 13th, leave Simla; 14th, arrive Lahore; 15th, halt; 16th, leave Lahore; 17th, arrive Patiala; 18th and 19th, halt; 20th, leave Patiala, stop at Aligarh to visit Mahomedan College, and in the evening arrive at Etawah; 21st, leave Etawah and arrive at Boghanathpur; 22nd, leave on board the Rhotas, and sail for Dacca; 26th, arrive Naraingunge, visit places of interest, and take train for Dacca; 27th, halt; 28th, leave Dacca; 29th, arrive Goalundo 2.8 A.M., Calcutta 4.3 P.M.

HER MAJESTY's troopship Serapis left Bombay on Saturday en route for Portsmouth.

THE recent fight at Tashkurgan, in which Ishak Khan's forces were dispersed, shows in a striking manner, thinks a contemporary, what dangerous possibilities there are in a country like Afghanistan. The action was one in which the defeat of the Ameer's troops would probably have made the Pretender undisputed master of the country north of the Hindu Kush, and for some hours it looked as if nothing could avert that defeat. With the Khinjan column completely broken and the majority of troops forming it taken prisoners, with his camp looted and his line of retreat threatened, Goolam Hyder, the Ameer's General, must have felt himself in desperate straits. He had no reinforcements to fall back upon, and he had to trust entirely to his Ghazni troops to retrieve the right. This they did, thanks to his pluck and resolution in taking the offensive even after his colleague, Abdulla Khan, had been hopelessly beaten; and his success in the end was unquestionable. He was, however, in the position of a man fighting a desperate battle, for no help could reach him from Bamian on the south, as the Hazaras had beaten back a contingent sent from Ghazni, while to the north no diversion had been made from Maimena, though this would have been of material assistance. How disastrous a defeat would have been to the Ameer's cause has been shown by after-events. The fugitives from the Khinjan column fled southwards, bearing the news that Ishak had gained a great success, and disquieting rumours circulated at once in Kabul, Ghazni, and even further towards our frontier.

NOTES.

THE fear that India, especially in the Madras Presidency, was on the eve of another famine is happily being allayed, according to the news to hand by the present Overland Mail. Heavy rain had set in along the Madras coast on October 31st, and the latest accounts gave reason to hope that it would go sufficiently northward and westward to relieve some of the Deccan districts, which are most in need of it.

THE reports of partial famine on the West Coast, of which one of the Madras papers speaks, are to be received with caution. The West Coast, as far as Goa, has had an abundant rainfall, while further north, between there and Bombay, it has not been short enough to give ground for fears of famine on the coast. Large quantities of grain, we are told, are being forwarded by rail to Calicut; so large, indeed, that the Madras Railway Company find it difficult to meet the great demand for trucks. In the Nizam's dominions the prospects are discouraging, but the Hyderabad paper says that it is fully established that nowhere is the scarcity general. An occasion, however, is likely to present itself for putting into operation on a large scale the scheme of irrigation works which, if carried out on sound principles, will prove to be one of the most useful features of Sir Asman Jah's administration.

THE local Press says that the situation is not without anxiety, for the finances of Hyderabad, though in the main on a sound footing, are in a transition state, and a serious loss of land revenue this year would cause inconvenience to the Nizam's Government. It is fortunate for the State that Mr. Mehdi Ali, who did it such invaluable service during the famine of 1877, has returned, and that if a time of scarcity is at hand, his Highness and his subjects will be able to profit by the experience of that skilled financier and revenue administrator.

THE news from Orissa, however, is not favourable, as writers on the spot declare that a famine there is inevitable, although the distress may be mitigated by early rain. A correspondent, said to be of long experience in that country, asks how is Orissa to meet such a strain? And he explains the situation thus:—"The Rooshookulia project, intended to ward off famine, has been barely commenced, although planned now twenty years ago. The Chilka Canal, which would enable grain to be brought to and from the coast, is no nearer to the coast than twenty years ago. The pier which it was hoped would enable rice to be landed in spite of the surf—which in 1866 kept cargoes of rice in the roads for days from want of means of crossing it—is found to be inside the surf, and is useless even in ordinary weather, when the boats can ply with no difficulty. Should rain not fall and the stocks fail grain must be speedily imported as a reserve for the poor, otherwise Government must be prepared to hear of a heavy mortality—even with rain now distress must be severe." In fact, until a railway is opened up from the Central Provinces to Gopalpore, distant only 200 miles, the coast district will never be safe from famine. It seems far more important to push on this than the Rooshookulia project, which will cost lakhs, for a much less certain result.

LORD DUFFERIN has been fortunate enough to please Bombay, and so the verdict on the four years' achievements which have earned the Marquisate is a favourable one. "The defences of the Bombay Harbour," says a local eulogist, "have been undertaken in a serious spirit. Two great railway lines, which will bring to Bombay the produce of two great areas of hitherto unopened country, have been undertaken, and are now far advanced. In the direction of foreign affairs Lord Dufferin's service to India is indisputable." There will not, says the Pioneer, be much quarrelling with that last remark; but from the place it occupies in the descending scale of the Viceroy's deserts it is evident that foreign policy would not have counted for much with the critic unless a happy accident had linked it with a railway for Bombay. There is something that is very nearly touching in the simplicity of the local spirit when in perfect unconsciousness it betrays itself in such remarks as these.

THE Press of Upper India had appointed, in the usual off-hand Press way, Colonel Parry Nisbet Commissioner of Rawalpindi to succeed Mr. Plowden as Resident of Kashmir, but the appointment has fallen through on the question, it is said, of salary. The Allahabad journal, though generally the constant supporter of all Government measures, does not give its approval in this instance, but protests pathetically:—"When an important Native State is in such case that its ruler pressingly needs the advice and assistance of a British officer, and a man whom he trusts, who possesses, moreover, exceptional qualifications for the post, is found, we begin to understand how severely pinched is the Indian exchequer when the State loses such a man on a relatively small question of pay."

It is also down upon the Supreme Authority in another personal matter:—"Every now and again the Government of India seems to take a pleasure in showing how mean it can be. Two or three years ago, when the Archæological Survey was remodelled, the appointment of Major Keith as a Curator of Public Monuments was summarily abolished, contrary, as we understand, to the term of his nomination. Major Keith had worked indefatigably at a congenial task, so much so that his health has given way under his labours; and the value of his services had been testified to both by Sir Lepel Griffin and by the Government of these Provinces. After a long delay the Government have acknowledged his claim to compensation, and have offered him—the choice between £40 and six hundred rupees."

It may be remembered that some short time ago the Echo gave considerable space for many evenings to Mr. Cumberland's "Reminiscences of a Thought-reader." In one chapter Mr. Cumberland recorded his experiences in India, and he did so in his usual manner of not effacing himself. He is again performing in London, but his thought-reading in the Echo has reached India, and he may perhaps like to see what a Calcutta journalist says of him. Here is Mr. Robert Knight's (Statesman) reminiscence of Mr. Cumberland—"Mr. Cumberland's unfavourable opinion of the "Baboo" is not unnaturally traceable, we suspect, to the fact that the self-assertiveness and conceit of which he complains are so offensively conspicuous in his own manners, that he could hardly fail to detect the resemblance, while his amour propre would fain make him regard it as a caricature. The impudent familiarity of the man in his public thought-reading performances in Calcutta was to ourselves intolerable, and we felt humiliated at seeing high officials of the State entrapped into appearing on the platform with him as his assistants. His affectation of having been admitted to the intimacy of half the crowned heads of Europe, who had treated him with mere politeness, was intolerable. We could not better hit off his vulgar assumption, perhaps, than by saying that it closely resembled the bearing of that unfortunate class of Baboos who have brought so much ill-will upon the Bengalee amongst Europeans generally. But Mr. Cumberland's generalisations will be estimated at their true worth by all who know the man."

THE record of joint-stock enterprise in India during the past year shows that the advantages and opportunities afforded by the Companies Act of 1882 continue to be understood and appreciated, though perhaps in a more sober and restrained fashion than in previous years. At the beginning of the year there were 888 companies, with a nominal capital of 2,913 lakhs. Of these 103 collapsed, but 125 new ones were registered, so that there was a net gain in the year of 22 companies. The great majority of the concerns are formed to work mills or presses for cotton, jute, wool, and silk; and it is significant of the commercial energy and activity of the Western Presidency that of the 960 lakhs invested in this way it has subscribed 663 lakhs, or about two-thirds. Another noticeable feature is the increase in the number of companies formed on the limited liability principle to promote retail stores and shops; a phenomenon which is probably to be accounted for by the large profits reaped in recent years by one or two firms engaged in the import of miscellaneous stores and general bric-a-brac, but which at the same time may be expected to give to that trade an additional stimulus. There can be little doubt that the operation of the joint-stock principle in India will thus assist the diffusion of European goods for general consumption at cheaper rates than would otherwise have been possible.

THERE is a definite prospect of the proposed acceleration of the Calcutta-Bombay mails being effected. Early next year, the train from Calcutta will start before the usual mail time, and will have a dining car attached. It will run at a somewhat higher rate of speed, and curtail the time occupied by stoppages. In this way it is proposed that twelve hours should be saved on the journey each way, thus enabling Calcutta to reply to English letters a week sooner than at present, and putting an end to the great and discreditable anomaly of the Indian postal system.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 18.

The Viceroy left Simla on the 13th inst., and reached Lahore on the following day. Replying to a municipal address, he said:—

"We are in course of putting the whole North-West Frontier into a reasonable state of defence. The Black Mountain campaign has been brought to a successful termination, and the reckless and cruel tribes who, on various occasions, have invaded our territory, burnt and raided our villages, and murdered our fellow-subjects have been made to feel that, though long-suffering and slow to avenge, the British power to punish offences is irresistible."

"As long as I live I shall always retain a most affectionate remembrance of the brave and high-minded races of the Punjab."

On the 15th inst. addresses were presented from four Mahomedan associations. In the course of his replies the Viceroy said it was matter for satisfaction that the frontier defence policy was approved, and that the necessity for the annexation of Burma was fully appreciated. He had aimed at discouraging racial animosities and at securing a community of sentiments between the different great nationalities in India. He then delivered a short address in Persian. Later, the Aitchison Hospital was opened by Lady Dufferin, and in replying, on behalf of his wife, to a vote of thanks, the Viceroy said that the task of carrying on the work would devolve on Lady Lansdowne. On the 16th Lady Dufferin received a deputation representing all classes, who presented an address with 50,000 signatures, testifying to the general appreciation of her efforts to promote the happiness of the people of India. Addresses were also presented by the Native ladies.

On the 12th inst. the Commander-in-Chief proceeded from Quetta to the Khojak Pass, and inspected the railway works at Shelabagh, and thence by the rope incline to the top of the Khojak. The railway works show great progress. The General arrived at Hurnai on the 15th, and commenced the march to Dilkuna.

At a recent trial of the new magazine rifle by a party of the Worcestershire Regiment, in the presence of Sir F. Roberts, the percentage of hits at 1,100 yards on screens representing companies was 54. The rifle was approved as an effective and handy weapon.

The Crawford Commission has reached the 22nd day of its proceedings, and will probably sit for another fortnight. The evidence given by Native officials in the judicial service discloses an extraordinary system of bribery and corruption. These confessions of criminal conduct have been given in evidence by the witnesses on a reported undertaking of the Government to hold them harmless. A rule has, however, been issued in the Bombay High Court by Justices Jardine and Birdwood, calling upon certain of these Native judicial witnesses to show cause why they should not be prosecuted on their own confession for having trafficked in public appointments and paid illegal gratifications to a public servant.

The Mahomedans throughout India are uniting in support of the opposition to the native Congress agitation. At a recent meeting in Scinde the chairman, in the course of his speech, expressed an opinion that the agitation, if permitted to proceed, would eventually result in a second mutiny. The Maharajah of Benares, writing through a private secretary, remarks that it is notorious that the Congress leaders openly state throughout India that all taxes are to be abolished by the Congress, and persuade the ignorant people to support the movement by purchasing cards ranging in price from one anna to 1,000 rupees. He wonders the people have not already risen against the Government. The movement has lately been greatly discredited by the discordant nature of the views expressed by certain of its leaders. A large number of the more respectable Bengalees disapprove the extreme opinions recently promulgated by the most advanced party. There is very little real earnestness in the agitation, and, as the novelty has now passed away, Native feeling on the subject is rapidly growing cool.

BOMBAY, Nov. 18.

Lord Dufferin, continuing his tour prior to his departure from India, held a durbar at Patiala, at which he made an important announcement regarding the offers of the Native Princes to assist in the defence of India.

His Excellency said that the Government would not avail itself of the offers of money, but would ask the chiefs having already good fighting material in their armies to raise a portion of them to such a pitch of general efficiency as to fit the men for service with the Imperial troops. For this purpose British officers would be appointed to advise and instruct the Native officers, drill instructors would be lent, breechloaders presented, and each Punjab chief would be given a battery of four guns.

The festivities in honour of the Viceroy's visit to Patiala were on a grand scale. The State troops paraded in large numbers, and in the evening a display of fireworks took place, and the city was illuminated. There was also a grand military display.

An alarming fire broke out last night in the Viceregal camp, by which Lady Helen Blackwood's tent was destroyed. The flames were, however, got under control by one o'clock in the morning. No wind was blowing at the time, otherwise the whole camp would have been destroyed.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 18.

It is doubtful whether the Chinese Ampa has yet left Lhasa. The Foreign Secretary will proceed to Darjeeling to confer with the political officer on the spot. A force of 1,000 men will garrison Chumbi, and 500 will be stationed in Gantok. The new road from Kopku to the Jalep is now open for mules.

A severe earthquake occurred in Sikkim on the 9th inst.

About 6,000 Tibetan troops are between Choombi and Phari, and the Tibetan commander at Galing has posted strong pickets at Yensakha, Choombi, Pema, and Rinchagong. The British patrols have advanced to Nethang, a point commanding the two main roads, one from Rinchagong, the other leading past Gambak-Gampa.

Huts of a more permanent character are being constructed at Gnatong. The sappers and pioneers camped at Byuton are making a road beyond the Jalep, and a telegraphic wire has been laid to Byuton. Major Maxwell commands the wing of the Sherwood Foresters (Derbyshire Regiment).

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 18.

It is doubtful whether the Ameer will proceed to Turkestan. A large quantity of Snider ammunition was recently sent from Peshawur to Cabul.

Ishak Khan is at Kurcha, near Tajora. He has a large military body-guard, and is reported to have collected a large amount of treasure and to possess a very considerable amount of property.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 18.

All the troops constituting the Hazara field-force have returned to British territory. General McQueen, in his farewell orders, states that the Hassanzai, Akazai, and Pariari Sayads and the Jikariwals have tendered full submission. The Machai Peak, Thakot, Pokal, and the principal villages of the Allais were visited by the force, while the construction of roads along the Indus valley to the Chagarzai border, and to Thakot from the Agror valley, will afford ample scope for the rapid movement of troops in the future. He congratulates the troops on their exemplary conduct, and the soldierly spirit exhibited throughout the campaign.

General Channer returns to his command at Julinder. He was the moving spirit of the campaign, and earned universal approval by his splendid dash and energy, and the inexhaustible fertility of his resources in every emergency.

The Kyberree levies exhibited such fine soldierly qualities, and proved such invaluable allies for mountain warfare of this description, that it is strongly urged that regiments should be formed from the tribes.

BURMA.

RANGOON, Nov. 17.

Major Raikes will join General Faunce as chief political officer at Kale.

Mr. Hodgkinson, Commissioner of Pegu, has made a tour through his division, and has examined the villagers personally as to the reason of the late outbreak. It appears that the chief causes of discontent were the bad crops, the cholera, the disarmament, and the punitive police-tax. The villagers asked that their guns might be returned, or the price of them paid. Mr. Hodgkinson admits that he did not feel justified in refusing to entertain this request, since it was accompanied by a statement that the authorities had directly encouraged the people to arm. Complaints of the police-tax were made at Zeegone and Tharrawaddy, but they were most numerous at Gyobingouk and Minhla. Mr. Hodgkinson argues that the tax could not have been felt, as it amounted only to a little over one rupee per household. He also told the villagers that they did not need guns in order to defend themselves from dacoits. However satisfactory his arguments are on paper, it appears that there was marked discontent on these two grounds. Further, though the Government may only have got a small amount per household, probably the tax-collector levies a great deal more. Mr. Hodgkinson concludes as follows:—

"It is difficult to obtain the candid opinion of Burmans on our policy and administration. When it is obtained, there is no disguise that the removal of the King, the representative of the nation and head of its religion, is resented even by those who have been long our subjects. There is a strong belief among the common people that sooner or later the kingdom will be restored."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

IN WONDERLAND.

(Pioneer.)

"Will you walk a little faster?" said the whiting to the snail,
"There's a porpoise just behind us, and he's treading on my tail;
See how eagerly the gudgeons and the whip-tailed rays advance:
Will you, won't you, will you won't you, won't you, come and join the dance?"

The Interminable Muddle had advanced one step further towards the Embarrassing Jam. Far away in the West, Sir W. W. Hunter spread his wings on the blast and skimmed the new-found path of Earnestness which his enemies called his Milky Way. "Treat them, Oh, treat them seriously," fluted Sir William, and the echo of his cry came back, a hundred-fold multiplied, from the ever silent spaces of the East.

"Treat us, Oh, treat us seriously!" clamoured the Proprietors of the Interminable Muddle. "We love you with a love that threatens to destroy our reason, but at the same time we desire nothing more than your complete reorganisation, subversion and effacement—always by genteel measures. Just, worthy, sublime, oppressive, brutal, unsympathetic Government of India, extend to us the shadow of your protection while we go about to improve you! Oh, thou, sitting upon the hilltops adorned with red-tiled roofs, girt as to the loins with a girdle of red-tape and daily drunk upon ink, be kind to us! We desire only freedom of discussion. Let no man be permitted to disagree with us, or bloodshed will ensue. Those holding contrary opinions are chamars and the sons of bungis, grey-muzzled apes and eaters of forbidden flesh. Above all things, do we desire temperate discussion. We will discuss, and thou, advancing with the clatter of a thousand office boxes, shining painfully on account of the C.S.I. and the C.I.E., do thou keep thy temperature! Wise, merciful, tyrannous, far-seeing, and most easily to be hoodwinked, protect us while we govern thee!"

This was the Prayer of the Proprietors of the Interminable Muddle, and it went up day and night amid squabbles, altercations, recriminations, abuse, tears and whimperings. But loud and clear above all rose the voice of Sir W. W. Hunter, crying:—"Be of good cheer. Give the drum a oner!" and each cry was followed by a new boom.

The Government of India said no word for good or bad, though it was credited with evil actions, intrigue, fraud and wrong. So the cry went up afresh:—"We will distribute the fruits of the land; we will clothe the widow and the fatherless and bind the sickness with green withes. We will cause the bunna to lie down with the bazugar, the nat with the Nawab, and the B.A. with all four; and we will give to each a Maxim gun and two revolvers. We will secure to all the privilege of saying to the Viceroy:—"Well, old man, how are things in office to-day?" We will make a new heaven and a new earth, for we are the crested jay-hawks of Aryavarta one and indivisible, if the Government whom we adore will only keep the lathis down; but we are certain that it intends privily to destroy us, and is even now arranging disturbances to discredit our Holy Mission. Pigs, we preach you love! Dogs of the bustees, our watchword is Brotherly Affection!"

And the Government made no sign.

It sat with its chin on its hand and murmured: "Same old people, same old bandobust. Same old everlasting suspicion. "Must borrow a hazur-ki-parwasti even when they want to turn us upside down. Leave 'em alone, and they'll go Home dragging their tales behind them."

And this was exactly what the Proprietors of the Interminable Muddle did. The brutal Anglo-Indian shut his left eye and said:—"Connu," so they fled afar, screaming like gulls, westward down the Line of Least Resistance, straight to the bosom of the Holy British Elector who knows everything, believes everything, and does—nothing.

But before ever they launched themselves upon the Black Water they caste a jibe at the Man of Feeling who controlled the destinies of Bombay. "You're another of them—a hide-bound bureaucrat!" they groaned, and departed, leaving the Man of Feeling disconsolate.

Alone of all the Stewards of the State, he possessed an Educational Policy worthy of the name; and therewith culture to the tips of his finger nails. "Oh Heavens!" gasped the Man of Feeling; "Have they known me for three and a-half years, and am I still misunderstood? Lend me an ink-pot!" Wisely, profoundly and unreservedly did the Man of Feeling indite a manifesto-setting forth how he approved of Principles, advocated Theories and honoured Notions; and by those Principles, Notions, and Theories considered the Interminable Muddle an excellent Idea, partaking of the nature of the Lyceum Augustus Harris's pantomimes (and this was truth) and an Alhambra ballet. "How dare you think of fearing me. You ought to love me, man," wrote the Man of Feeling, and the Manifesto was made public.

Sir S. B.—y, Sir A. C.—n and Sir J. B. L.—l read it at breakfast together. For a while nothing was heard save the heavy breathing of the red khitmatgars behind their chairs. Sir A. C.—n whistled the Nunc dimittis softly, being of a devotional frame of mind. "God gie us a gude conceit o' oorself," said Sir S. B.—y. He was thinking of his darling Municipality. "Hakim do jane-valon men ek anjan," said Sir J. B. L.—l, for he had been a Settlement Officer in his day, and knew the wisdom of the country side. There was another pause.

"Well?" said Sir S. B.—y, wearily; "You see what that means? Climb down and take sides, mes amis. Sail into it—ahem—bald-headed!"

"Never!" said Sir J. B. L.—l, with a shudder.

Sir A. C.—n read the Manifesto a second time. "For the Man of Feeling excellent. For his Excellency the Governor a little premature, eh?" said he; "What one might call Hunterian. Is it possible that he thinks that a Governor has a character? He governs."

"No, he does not," sighed Sir S. B.—y, "he is governed. They will be asking a pronouncement from you next, C.—n. They will ask you to declare on oath whether you really hid lathials in—what's that reeking village in the centre of Allahabad?—Colonelgunge, or suborned a Telegraph clerk to mutilate the Congress telegrams. You will have to write manifestoes on politics, and such politics!"

Sir A. C.—n dipped his fingers daintily in the "bowly glass" and dried them carefully. "I hope not," he said simply: "I am supposed to look after a Province. It's quite a big province, and you have no idea what a lot of things have to be done in it from day to day. Strange as it may appear to you, I'm, to put it shortly, a Governor."

"I too had some dignity once," said Sir S. B.—y; "I wonder if that will help me when they request my reasons in writing for not shouting 'Congress ki jai' from the top of the Ochterlonny Monument."

Sir J. B. L.—l took up the Manifesto. "He thinks he is misunderstood after three and a-half years. I think they understand their man perfectly. They have taken the measure of his foot to a fraction. On my word it's a beautiful draw!"

"You can laugh," said Sir S. B.—y, though Sir J. B. L.—l was doing nothing of the kind. "Your Province doesn't cold suttee with one hand and constitutionally light fireworks with the other. It will be some years before we see you on the hustings."

"It will," said Sir J. B. L.—l. "By the way C.—n, I hear that the boys in your Muir College are upset with this little business, and are working badly in consequence. Is that true?"

"Can you ask?" said Sir A. C.—n. "Can you object? When Governors—Governors who are supposed to be responsible to some one or other—throw themselves into the scrimmage—why in the world should schoolboys stand out of it? As B.—y says, take sides, gentlemen, and d—n administration. Off with your coats and come into the arena! The Man of Feeling has been three and a-half years in the country, and he sees the wisdom of it. Why should we, mere Civilian hacks with only thirty years' service, be wiser than he?"

"Because," said Sir S. B.—y slowly, "we are not fools."

"H'm," said Sir A. C.—n, "there's a great deal to be said on both sides. They called Dickey the Apollo Bandar; what can we call the Man of Feeling? I want some objectives."

There was a twinkle under the penthouse of Sir J. B. L.—l's eyebrows, as he entrenched himself behind a chair.

"Call him?—why The McCaucus? Reaysus, of course, and keep Sterndale's hands off me."

The sederunt broke up in confusion before the only jest that the Warden of the North had ever perpetrated in his long and meritorious career.

A PANEGYRIC ON THE MAHRATTA COUNTRY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Sir George Birdwood's article in the Asiatic Quarterly Review on the "Mahratta Plough" tells us a good deal about that most useful implement, but it tells us much more about the Maharashtra whose fields it furrows. And the telling is done with a power of description and a warmth and a wealth of fancy which should make this article, to Indian readers, by far the most acceptable thing in the magazine literature of the month. For Sir George is a child of Maharashtra; he confesses that that fair land is to him his dear native country, and he tells of its beauties with a more than filial enthusiasm. It is of the ethnographic rather than of the political Mahratta country that he speaks. He excludes from his survey the kingdoms which grew up under the fostering care of the Peshwas, and then went their own way. The exclusion of the Mahratta kingdoms of Guzerat and of Central India from the survey deprives it of few characteristic features, and gives it an ethnographic unity that it would not have had if Sir George Birdwood had taken in the whole of the territory on which the Mahratta power had made itself felt. The Mahratta Ditch at Calcutta and the field of Panipat even farther away are reminders of the wide extension of the military energies of the Mahratta people. But the Maharashtra which inspires his affectionate admiration is a country more easily defined and much narrower in its limits. It is, for the most part, a country of surpassing beauty. In speaking of it as the "great basaltic kingdom of Maharashtra" Sir George Birdwood brings into view in one short phrase the natural features by which it impresses itself most deeply upon the imagination. If we cannot all of us proclaim, as he does, a knowledge of it from Belgaum to Indore and from Surat to Assirgar, most of us from the heights of Mahableshwar, of Khandalla, and of Matheran, have seen the more majestic of its beauties. The basaltic kingdom everywhere asserts the peculiar character of its kinship. The prevailing note in the harmonies of its landscape is a grandeur just marked enough to overshadow the fantastic formations of its peaks and plateaux and mountain spurs. And the wealth of its beauty is sustained and continuous. The panorama seems never to end. Where it fades away into mystery it is only like the dying away of the day's light, which survives through its survival, is beyond the range of vision. No one who has drunk at all deeply at the fountains of delight which spring in the mountains of Western India will wonder at the enthusiasm with which this latest interpreter of their beauties descends upon them. The only wonder is that not only the love for them, but the power to depict them as graphically as Sir George Birdwood has done, should remain with one to whom they are a distant memory. We are half inclined to ask if his glowing descriptions of the mountains and upland valleys of Maharashtra, of its streams and forests, of its sunrises and its sunsets, is the work of to-day or of the time when he was living in the midst of it, under the full and prompt inspiration of the splendours that were spread around him. It is difficult to accept as a simple treasure of the memory this admirable picture of a sunset as seen from Mahableshwar:—"At first the hills and dales of the Konkans seem to be suddenly transmuted into silver, shining, as with its own light, in dazzling brightness along the ridges of the hills, but with a softer lustre in the dales, where their ethereal illumination is subdued by the lengthening shadows of the sinking sun. In the twinkling of an eye all is changed to radiant gold, clear as topaz on the hill tops, with the sea on the left ruled in long levelled lines of chrysolite; and when the day closes upon the Eastern hemisphere, the rapidly-falling mists pass from a glowing purple to dense indigo, and the cleared sky at last reflects back from the darkened landscape the deep transparent sapphire which is the proper tincture of an Indian night." This may have been written in London last month, but we do Sir George Birdwood no injustice in half-suspecting that the picture was painted in situ some time in the seventies. If some of his pictures have been thus treasured up they were worth the treasuring. The depth of his affection for the scenes and phenomena of the Mahratta land finds expression too, not in glowing pictures alone, but in at least one passage which reminds us very strikingly of what in Cardinal Newman's writings would be recognised as expositions of the sacramental theory of nature. There is a sentence in the "Apologia" which is at once brought to mind by Sir George Birdwood's conclusion that "before natural scenery of such spiritual expression and significance men have ever recognised that this outspread green earth, with the revolving circle of the sun and moon and stars above, are but the marvellous contexture of the veil dividing between the world we see and the unseen, inscrutable life beyond." Do the Mahrattas with the wealth of inspiring phenomena that abounds in their pleasant valleys—praying carpets, spread out before the high altars of the mountain land, as another eloquent interpreter of the Indian landscape has called them—do they more consciously than their neighbours see through the diaphanous veil that parts the seen from the unseen? It pleases Sir George Birdwood to declare, as it will please his readers to learn, that they do, and that the pantheism that runs through the daily ceremonial of the village life of Maharashtra is an intensely real and living thing. And so their patriotism is in the warp and weft of their religion; their country is sacrosanct; and Sivaji, when he treacherously slew the Bijapur General Afzul Khan was an Aryan imitator of Joel, the wife of Heber the Kenite, "and it will be a bad sign for the Mahratta people if they ever come to think less of Sivaji for it." Perhaps so; and yet we shrink in these days from a conclusion which starts from the somewhat fierce assumption that the presence of a Mahomedan in Maharashtra was not merely an intrusion, but a profanation and a sacrilege. Unfortunately, the condition into which Sivaji's grave was allowed to fall by his countrymen makes it doubtful if even the nobler exploits of his life have been remembered as they should be. Sir George Birdwood's Conservatism covers his view of many other things than Sivaji's place in history and in popular tradition. He shows a strong predisposition in favour of the Hindu ideal of womanhood. In a passage which might have been taken from one of Mr. Ruskin's ethical discourses, he extols the stay-at-home virtues of the Chit-pavan women of the Konkan, their outward and visible charms faithfully mirroring the innate virtues of their pure and gentle natures—"perfect daughters, wives, and mothers, after the severely disciplined, self-sacrificing Hindu ideal, the ideal also of Solomon, Sophocles, and St. Paul, remaining modestly at home, as the proper sphere of their duties, unknown beyond their families, and seeking in the happiness of their children their greatest pleasure, and in the reverence of their husbands the amaranthine crown of a woman's truest glory." This beautiful piece of figure painting we must hand over to the criticism of Mr. Malabari, in the hope that it will not be rudely defaced by a publicist so obstinately given to the realistic view of things. It is, after all, a part, which fits very well into its place, of Sir George Birdwood's general estimate of the constitution of society in Maharashtra and elsewhere. India, he holds, has much less to learn of us than we imagine. We used to think that we could improve the plough of the country, albeit that it came from Mesopotamia and the lands adjacent which a respected member of Lord Beaconsfield's Ministry once promised to civilise by the steam-plough. Well, we tried to show the Chief of Jamkhandi what the steam-plough could do, and now the executive parts of the machine, duly daubed with sacred red, are installed in some temple in that tiny State, as not by any means good enough to turn over the soil of Jamkhandi, but quite good enough to serve as a minor god, probably of the mischievous order. We thought, too, that we had found out the Indian cultivator in a glaringly wasteful stupidity when we saw that he burnt the manure of his cattle-shed, and put only the ashes on the soil, until careful experiment showed that he was right, and that those who wanted to teach him his business were wrong. Sir George Birdwood would have us believe that it must be the same with every attempt to improve the mechanism of Indian agriculture. The Indian plough here regards as a part and parcel of a fixed crystallised life, and he warns us against any attempt to disturb it. So, then, we are to accept the agriculture of India as a thing incapable of development, and we are not at all sure whether such attempts as are being made in Northern India to send Indian produce to market cleaner and better prepared than it has been hitherto, by means of steam-threshing engines, will be regarded as an invasion of the sacro-sanct field of agriculture. In Sir George Birdwood's estimation it is all "Happy India;" and looking down from the heights of Maharashtra in these October days upon the green mavals that are scattered around them, while the watercourses are still running and the fields are green, the toiler from the city can scarcely help echoing the phrase. But we should have something else to say if, for a change, we sought our October rest in Guzerat and Central India, where, if all accounts are true, things are in preparation that will turn those pleasant words, and that "Civitas Dei" into which the winter has transmuted them, into sadness and mockery. Meanwhile, Sir George Birdwood's panorama is before us, and we shall do ourselves an injustice if we do not make the most of so remarkable an aid to our appreciation of the country around us.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION

(Pioneer Correspondent.)

Probably no one of the numerous expeditions which we have from time to time despatched against the tribes on our frontier has ever been organised at such short notice as was the Hazara Field force. The orders were issued on 7th September, and on the 30th the whole force was concentrated at Oghi or Darband. Large numbers of transport animals had to be collected and supplies stored during this period of three weeks, and that no breakdown or failure occurred anywhere shows that the lessons inculcated during the earlier stages of the Afghan War have not been thrown away. Everything worked with perfect smoothness, and by the 3rd of October, the date on which the terms of our ultimatum expired, all was ready for an advance. On the morning of the 4th October, the 1st Column, consisting of the Northumberland Fusiliers, Hazara Mountain Battery, 3rd Sikhs, and 5th Goorkhas, and half a company of Sappers and Miners ascended the Kiarkot ridge and occupied Mana-ka-dana. The opposition was very slight, and there were no casualties on our side. A lucky artillery shot, claimed by both the Hazara Battery and two guns of 3-1 South Irish (who had been sent to the Hata spur to cover the advance), fell amongst a knot of the enemy, killing three and, it is believed, wounding five or six more; in fact, the enemy themselves acknowledge that number. One man also was found killed by musketry fire. The same day the 2nd Column, under Colonel O'Grady Haly, consisting of four guns, 3-1 South Irish and two Gatlings, the Suffolk, 40th Bengal Infantry, and 45th Sikhs, ascended the Barchar spur, bivouacking at old Barchar. General Channer, commanding the 1st Brigade, accompanied this column. Part of the 3rd Column, under Colonel Sunderland, consisting of two guns 3-1 South Irish, the Sussex Regiment, and 14th Sikhs, ascended the Sambalbut spur and bivouacked at the village of that name, while the remainder of the column, consisting of the 24th Punjab Infantry, under Maj. Young, and two guns of No. 2 Battery, Punjab Field Force, bivouacked some little distance up the Chatter spur. Our first night's experience was an unpleasant one; a dense fog, followed by a heavy drizzle, and the unwonted sensation of reclining on mother-earth (said mother being in an extremely damp, disagreeable, and uncomfortable frame of mind) rather murdered sleep. That some of us did sleep, however, was evident from the sounds, resembling those of a foghorn, which proceeded from certain quarters, but which everyone angrily disclaimed next morning. At daylight we were all up and on the move again, and about 8 A.M. the 3rd column (with which I was) having joined with Major Young's column at the junction of the Chatter and Sambalbut spurs, opened the ball by firing a few rounds of common shell against the position occupied by the enemy, to cover the advance of the Sussex Regiment under Colonel Wardroper, which led the advance. The position selected by the enemy was one of great strength; but they seemed to be few in number, and not to have any intention of making a stand anywhere, otherwise there might have been wigs on the green at this particular spot which seemed intended by nature for defence. A few hundred Afridis would have made it very unpleasant for us. However, the Royal Sussex and the guns soon turned the enemy, such as they were, out of their position, and once having got them on the run they were kept moving until at 10.45 A.M. we had gained the crest of the ridge with a loss of only three of the Sussex and two of the 14th Sikhs wounded. The 24th Punjab Infantry had been left at Tilla (the place where the guns opened fire) to bring on the baggage and form the rear-guard. In the meantime the 2nd Column, under General Channer—cr should I say under Colonel O'Grady Haly? With this system of both brigade and column commanders it is rather difficult to say who is in actual command of the troops. There is an old story of the late Lord Clyde when Sir Colin Campbell was commanding a brigade containing amongst others a Highland regiment. This regiment he was for ever inspecting in season and out of season, finding fault with this and that, to the no small indignation of the Colonel. One day, seeing the regiment drawn up on parade, he galloped up to it and began as usual to find fault, calling out, "Who the devil commands this regiment?" On this occasion a quiet voice behind him replied: "Weel, Sir Colin, I don't just exactly know, whiles its me and whiles its ye." This was the Colonel of the regiment who had just come on parade, and seeing Sir Colin going round the ranks, had quietly followed him. The bearing of the above observation lies in the application of it, as Captain Bunsby was wont to remark. However, the 2nd Brigade, under Colonel O'Grady Haly, and led by General Channer and staff (who, leaving the troops to come on afterwards, boldly assaulted the enemy's position, thereby very nearly getting shot for their pains) ascended the Barchar spur, and at about eight or a little after became engaged with the enemy. We could hear their guns and the growl of the Gatlings. They too, met with little opposition, and reached the crest-line without a casualty. I should have mentioned that during the advance of the 3rd Column General McQueen accompanied the fighting line, and the pace at which he led the way up the steepest parts of the ascent taxed the powers of many of us younger men to keep up with him. In the meantime the first column had established itself on Chitabut, with the loss of one man of the Fusiliers killed and four wounded. We were soon in heliographic communication with them and with Oghi, and learnt the news of General Galbraith's action of Kotkai and the lamented death of poor Beley. I was much struck with one remark I overheard an officer of high rank make regarding Beley; he said: "He carried an introduction in his face;" and those who knew him will appreciate the truthfulness of the expression.

The Khyber Rifles meantime had ascended by the Chigri spur, a very steep spur between the Barchar and Sambalbut spur, and joined our column at Nimmal. The whole of the rest of the day, and the night too for that matter, there was a continual fusillade. Our position, surrounded on all sides by forest, allowed the enemy to creep up very near us unobserved. It was astonishing to find they could afford to waste so much ammunition, as their firing did us no damage, and I sadly fear that our own had a similar result. A man of the 14th Sikhs was shot early next morning at an advanced picquet on Akhund Baba, but this was in broad daylight. The original intention had been to push on to Seri on the 5th, but the baggage and rations were so far behindhand that the further advance was postponed till next morning. On the morning of the 6th, therefore, General McQueen advanced with the 14th Sikhs to a place called Kaima, about half-way to Seri, while the Sussex Regiment, and subsequently the 24th Punjab Infantry, were engaged in making the road for the baggage animals. The spur is exceedingly steep and difficult, and every foot of the way had to be made; the consequence was that it was nightfall before the baggage had arrived of a portion of the force, and the 24th were accordingly left at Akhund Baba to protect the remainder. This was a very unpleasant day and night. The enemy buzzed round us like bees, and three of the Sussex and I think four, if not five, of the 14th Sikhs were hit. Finding the country so difficult, and the baggage such an encumbrance, General McQueen resolved to return next day to his former position on the ridge, and to strike out thence with small columns lightly equipped. The column accordingly retraced its steps, the 14th Sikhs and a half-company of the Sussex forming the rear-guard, personally superintended by Colonel Sunderland. The enemy followed up very closely, screened by the wooded slopes of the spur, and kept up a brisk fire during the whole of the retirement. Fortunately the trees and rocks intercepted most of their bullets, but the 14th Sikhs had three men killed and two wounded, and most of us had some pretty narrow shaves. The men of the Royal Sussex Regiment, who formed the extreme rear party, and who were personally directed by Colonel Sunderland, worked most intelligently and shot remarkably well. They were all, or nearly all, marksmen, and they accounted for some ten or a dozen of the enemy, some of their shots being really wonderful. A tribesman's head above a wall at 270 yards distance is not a large mark, but it was a sufficiently good one for one of the Sussex men. In the meantime, while this retirement was being carried out, a reconnaissance was made by the 24th Punjab Infantry under Major Young towards Punjgali, and the Khyber Rifles were subsequently sent to cover his retirement. This, also, was closely followed up, and our loss amounted to three killed and three wounded of the 24th Punjab Infantry, and two Khyberis wounded. I must here digress to pay a tribute to the Chyber Rifles under Alsam Khan. They are the perfection of troops for this kind of warfare, their activity and previous mountaineering experiences specially fitting them for a campaign of this nature, while their dexterity in the destruction of property leaves nothing to be desired. They have been lent Sniders for this business only, but they have been so useful that I hope that, as a reward, they may be allowed to retain them.

When the 3rd Column advanced towards Seri on the 6th, their place had been taken by the 2nd Column under Colonel Haly, accompanied by General Channer and the Brigade Staff, 1st Brigade. They were now settled at Nimmal, an open grassy plateau, which had been held by the Khyberis the previous night. The 3rd Column camp was now shifted to Akhund Baba, the highest peak at this portion of the range being 9,150 feet high. The Headquarter camp is a little below this, on the neck connecting Nimmal and Akhund Baba, and which is called Kehigalli, but has incorrectly become known as Kaim Galli. Our retirement from the Seri spur and establishment of the 3rd Column at Akhund Baba marks a distinct phase in the campaign, and with it I shall bring this, my first letter to a close. With this day, viz., October 7th, the enemy's activity ceased. They had begun to realise their losses, and although our retirement from the Seri spur, and also the retirement of the reconnoitring party, had undoubtedly temporarily emboldened them, as our reasons for doing so had been misunderstood by them, yet when they found us next day as active as ever, and that we could go where we pleased over their country, their resistance collapsed; and where on the 7th one could not show one's head without the chance of a bullet through it, on the 8th one might pass unmolested.

A word about the country we are in. The eastern slopes of the hill up which we advanced are for the first 2,000 feet or so bare granite rock with scanty patches of cultivation here and there and without a tree. As one reaches about 6,000 feet, however, the country alters, and we have forests of magnificent paludas and briar with chestnut, walnut, sycamore, &c., intermingled. The sides of the hill are desperately steep, and this steepness is the cause, I presume, of our difficulties about water, which have been great. The crest of the ridge is narrow, widening occasionally into grassy open spaces, surrounded by trees, which, if it were not for the scarcity of water, would offer a succession of the most splendid sites for sanatoria. On the western side the slopes are even more precipitous than on the eastern side, but are marked by a series of long spurs running down to the Indus, the crests of which are our chief highways. The fall to the Indus is sudden. The distance from the top of Akhund Baba to the river as the crow flies cannot be much over five miles; but in that five miles there is a descent of about 8,000 feet. This will give some idea of the nature of the country we have to operate in. It is further broken into numberless gorges and ravines, affording cover for the tribesmen, but which, it is to be hoped, will be thoroughly explored and traversed by our troops before we leave the country. In my next letter I propose to deal with what may be termed the punitive phase of the expedition, which will bring matters up to the present date.

P.S.—I find I have omitted the doings of the 1st Column on the 6th October. A large body of the enemy having taken up a position on Dodar Peak, the 5th Fusiliers, 3rd Sikhs, and two guns of No. 4 Mountain Battery were sent against them. They drove them off in splendid style, with a loss to them of about fifty killed and wounded, our casualties being only two men of the 3rd Sikhs wounded.

THE CALCUTTA ANGLO-INDIAN AND EURASIAN ASSOCIATION.

(Delhi Gazette.)

When the surprised investigator stumbled on the historic fly in amber, and wondered how the dickens he ever got there, he did not come across a wonder of less dimensions than that which attaches to the society whose name stands at the head of this article. Why in the wide world this institution should continue to encumber the earth with its presence were matter for great controversy, if the subject were worth striving about. Here is an institution, said to have been inaugurated by the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian fraternity in order to guard their interests and further their cause, and yet it is allowed to go to sleep month after month, without having affected the very smallest results. The few schemes that have from time to time been advanced are utterly impracticable and unworthy of the great community which the Society is supposed to represent. Pettifoggery will never assist the Eurasians out of the back slums, and elevate their character as a people. Such schemes as those already devised will not help the poor, but tend rather to depress them. What is needed is some plan which will open up new avenues of usefulness, and increase the earning power of the poorer members of the community. If the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association only start out on a large colonization scheme, secure large estates on one of the nearest hill ranges, and go in for a thorough European and Eurasian settlement as they have managed at Whitefield in Southern India, then they will earn a name, and secure the praises of all future time. Instead of doing this, they are busy adjusting petty differences, and fooling away precious time and opportunity. Jealousies, love of popularity and a hundred other meannesses, will never make a community great and prosperous. There must be mind, and mind must manifest itself in leading power. Given the presence of a leading mind, and the right purpose, and much will be accomplished.

In Southern India one leading mind has accomplished all that has been effected in the rescue work which stands out as a noble monument to the name and fame of Mr. David White. This man might have taken post with the few Eurasians of the best class—by best we refer to the well-to-do-class—and, boxing up with the European, might have ignored his country and the claims of his countrymen, and ended his days as a “miserable mediocrity.” Instead of this he refused to yield to the promptings of false shame, started out on a philanthropic and patriotic effort, and has proved the truth of the possibility of a resurrection, in the grand raising up of the lost and the fallen. Under the kindling of his energetic patriotism, and manly defence of his countrymen, Eurasians in Southern India have learnt to respect themselves, have emerged from the dark night of degradation and despair, and have commenced a career which is bound to lead them to independence and self-reliance. What Mr. White has effected the men of Calcutta ought to be able to do, if they would only unite and be more unselfish in their aims and objects.

The only feature of the South Indian Institution which has been copied by Calcutta is perhaps the least beneficial to the Southern Eurasian. We refer to the Deposit and Loan Branch. Of course this branch has developed abnormally, and has done good in saving men, compelled to borrow, from the Native money-lenders, who shylocked them out of half of the loan, and made them pay heavy interest besides. But, while this negative good is admitted, it is a fact that the establishment of loan societies is a direct encouragement of a general failing. Indebtedness is the curse of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian community, and to furnish them with helps to borrow is to demoralise them. The intention that led to the starting of the Loan Branch was doubtless a good one, but a good motive sometimes leads to an ill deed, or the deed may not be half as good as the motive. Like the Madras Society, Bombay has worked the Loan business up to a financial success, and Calcutta too will find heavy indents made on the Loan Bank. But it would be far better to conserve energy for developments more in accordance with the public welfare.

Then the Calcutta Society really must measure up to the responsibility. It has a community to raise, a large number of degraded men and women to elevate, and it cannot effect this unless there is unanimity, self-surrender, and enthusiasm. Hitherto Calcutta has done nothing, and the record has not any deeds worthy of being enshrined in the memories of men. But there are still opportunities for usefulness. Let all energies be bent to attaching Eurasians to the soil. Let the Association move Heaven and earth to get out into the farm and the field, and then it will achieve undying success.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 30.)

DURING the Pujas the rush to Darjiling was something altogether exceptional. The strain upon the Eastern Bengal State Railway, with its heavy regular traffic, was specially severe, and it is gratifying to learn that the management was fully equal to the occasion, and that the arrangements were uniformly excellent. From the 5th to the 11th inst. no fewer than 25,784 up-passengers, with 3,875 maunds of luggage, were despatched from Sialdah.

THE Calcutta Turf Club seems determined to act up to the letter of its new rules as regards objections where matters of fact only are concerned. It has been sensibly laid down that in such cases the local stewards of a race-meeting are the persons best able to give a decision, and that consequently the Calcutta Turf Club will not interfere if reference is made to them. A case in point has just occurred: the stewards of the Umbala Races overruled an objection lodged against Shamshad, but the case was carried further to Calcutta. The answer given from the headquarters of racing in India was that the decision of the local stewards was final on all matters of fact.

THE following notifications appear in the Calcutta Gazette:—Mr. St. John Leeds' services are placed temporarily at the disposal of the Government of India in the Home Department. Mr. H. E. Ransom is transferred to Patna in his place. Mr. W. F. Meres is promoted to the first grade of District Judges, and will continue to be employed on deputation in Burma. Mr. C. W. Bolton is appointed to act as Magistrate of Mozufferpore. Mr. F. S. Hamilton, Officiating Joint Magistrate, Hajepore, Mozufferpore, is appointed to act as Magistrate of that district, while Mr. H. J. McIntosh is to have charge of the Hajepore sub-division. Mr. R. H. Renny, Hazaribagh, is transferred to Lohardugga, and is to have charge of the Palamow sub-division. Mr. G. W. Place, Joint-Magistrate of Gya, is transferred to Lohardugga. The services of Mr. H. G. W. Herron, Patna, are placed temporarily at the disposal of the Government of India in the Home Department. The Rev. H. O. Moore is to act as Senior Chaplain of St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta. Mr. W. D. Blyth, Inspector-General of Registration, Bengal, has been granted an extension of furlough for one month.

MADRAS.

It is notified in the Gazette of India, with reference to the Notification of the 16th February, 1887, that the order conferring upon K. Kunjan Menon, late Subordinate Judge of Mangalore, Madras, the title of “Rai Bahadur,” as a personal distinction, is cancelled. This, of course, is consequent on his conviction for bribery at Tellicherry.

ALTHOUGH there was an increase in crime and a decrease in its detection last year in the Madras Presidency, the local Government appears to be fairly satisfied with the condition of the police. The inspection work done by all classes of officers, from the Acting Inspector-General downwards, is said to have been remarkably complete and satisfactory. Better results are, however, looked for in the future, and the Government feels assured that the active measures which the Inspector-General of Police has taken to remedy matters will not be ineffectual.

COLONEL T. TABUTEAU, Commandant 28th M.N.I., writes from Vizianagram:—“I received at 4.10 P.M. on the 20th ult. a telegram from the Acting Collector of Vizagapatam requesting that a company might be sent at once to keep order. At 6.30 the same evening the F. Company 28th Regiment M.I. left in marching order (not a man being absent), and arrived at Vizagapatam at 8 A.M. the next day, having marched the distance of thirty-six miles in thirteen and a-half hours. I am sure that my brother officers of the Madras army will agree with me in being proud of the sepoy of the Coast army after such good marching.”

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 2.)

VISITORS to Bijapore will be interested in learning, from a note which the Rev. P. R. H. Bartlett, Chaplain of Dharwar, sends to the Bombay Diocesan Record, that the beautiful little church which has been fitted up in the Gagan Mehal Gateway will shortly be consecrated by the Bishop of Bombay. The gateway, Mr. Bartlett remarks, is an interesting building connected with the ancient Audience Hall of the Bijapore kings. This palace is said to have been built about 1568 by Ali Adal Shah I., and for many years was the royal residence. The gateway opens on the main road of the Ark-Killah, opposite the Anand Mehal or Joy Palace. It was cleared out in 1884, and has since been furnished with an altar and other church ornaments. It is square, with a front and depth of three arches, in all parts elaborately ornamented in plaster work. Some of the designs are exquisite, and show to perfection the inventive genius of the workmen of that day. It has already been used for divine service, and for two baptisms and a burial.

THE Bombay Races, writes the Secretary of the Western India Turf Club, will commence on Saturday, 2nd March, and continue on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday following. The prospectus is delayed to allow of the terms of some races (the prizes for which are to be presented) being inserted. The first entries will be 1st December. The date of the races has been fixed rather later than usual to allow of horses that have been running at the Civil Service Cup meeting time to return, and also to avoid clashing with military inspections.

IN recognition of the kindness and hospitality afforded to the 21st Hussars when they passed through Poona in December, 1887, that gallant corps has sent a very handsome cup and a photo in a very pretty frame of several of the officers, warrant officers, and sergeants of the regiment, the latter bearing the following inscription:—“Presented by the members, 21st Hussars, to the members Sergeants' Mess, 2nd Durham Light Infantry, in recognition of their kindness and hospitality to the 21st Hussars and their wives when they passed through Poona from Colchester in December, 1887.”

AMONGST the passengers who landed at Bombay on the 22nd inst., from the steamship Thames, are the following:—Miss Florence E. Leonard, from Bristol, England, to itinerating evangelistic work in the villages around Ludhiana, in connection with the Society for the Promotion of Female Education in the East. Mr. Robert McCollough, from Kingston, New York State, U.S.A., who goes to Ahmednagar, Bombay Presidency, to be Professor of Natural Science in the College of the American Board at that place. Mr. McCollough intends to add Native evangelistic work to his duties as Professor as soon as he has acquired the vernacular. Miss Margaret M. Rumsey, from Chippenham, England, to rescue work in Bombay, in connection with Mr. Gladwin's Mission. The Rev. S. S. Alnutt, of the Cambridge Mission, Delhi, returns to his work after a vacation in England, as also do Miss Andrews and Miss Pogson of the Society for the Promotion of Female Education in the East, Ludhiana. At the last meeting of the Free Church of Scotland General Assembly, held in Inverness in May of this year, Professor T. M. Lindsay, D.D., of Glasgow, and the Rev. J. Fairley Daly, B.D., of Renwick Free Church, Glasgow, were appointed as deputies to visit the Missions of the Church in India. Mr. Daly has just arrived in Bombay, but Dr. Lindsay failed to connect with the mail at Port Said, so will not arrive until next week.—Bombay Guardian.

DEATH OF MRS. DORA M. GLADWIN.—The Bombay Guardian, in announcing the death of this lady, says:—Widely known as she has been, as wife of the Pastor of the M. E. Churches at Cawnpore, Agra, Nagpore, and Secunderabad; then as one of the pioneer leaders of the Salvation Army in India; and latterly as the friend and succourer of the outcast and the fallen. Mrs. Gladwin was the sixth daughter of the late Mr. Henry Miles, of H.M.'s Customs, Bombay.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB. (Oct. 31.)

WE are heartily glad to hear, says the Civil and Military Gazette, that the long series of undetected thefts of arms has apparently been broken at last. On the 24th the Railway Police at Peshawur recovered thirteen Government Martini-Henri Rifles. The arms are said to belong to the West York Regiment at Mooltan, and were, it is supposed, stolen from that Regiment a short time ago. The bale of goods in which they were discovered had been booked from Channu to Peshawar; and Channu Station is only about fifty miles from Mooltan. The police also arrested the person who came to take delivery of the goods; so that they are very possibly now on the track of an extensive illicit trade in arms across the frontier.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

IRISH PICTURES.*

It is no disparagement of other charitable societies, which embrace in their sphere of action the dissemination of sound, wholesome literature, to assert that the Religious Tract Society stands facile princeps, whether as regards the inherent interest of their text or the profuse and magnificent series of illustrations with which the letter-press is in many cases adorned. It would not be easy to find, for instance, amidst the endless array of works which herald the glorious days of "good King Yule," a single volume which can compare in beauty to Mr. Lovett's most enchanting account of Irish scenery and Irish charms. The eye is fairly dazzled with the wild, ragged loveliness of this most lovely of islands; where Nature has decked the works of creation with lavish beauty and exquisite grandeur, but where, alas! there has grovelled in the mire of discord rebellion, intrigue, and crime. Ireland happily peopled, happily governed, happily reaping where she sows and gathering where she plants, happily free from the crime of the professional agitator—a serpent in the dust, who leaves a trail of ruin which all parties should endeavour to avert and not to encourage—would be a paradise on earth; for surely never was given to man such miniature scenes of grandeur, of solemnity, of splendour, of quiet repose, and of attractive verdure. Look at Mr. Lovett's book; open it anywhere, everywhere! What can be, what could be, imagined within the limits of fancy to be more sweetly superb than the Lakes of Killarney, of which a most sweet and soothing picture is given at page 105! Look at the Vale of Avoca (page 62); the mind, the power of ideal conception, fails to picture anything more truly exquisite. If sublime might and majesty be required, turn to the engraving of Carrigan Head, Donegal (page 182), of "Carrick a Rede," and Giant's Causeway (pages 214 and 215). This done, this "feast of eye" finished, no reader need grudge on mental fare of such surpassing richness the small dip into the pocket which, thanks to the liberal enterprise of the Religious Tract Society, is so comparatively trifling as to bring this volume within the reach of the many who want, at this season of the year, to make others share the happiness of food for the mind no less than diet for the body.

RURAL RAMBLES.†

Seldom is it the good fortune of a reviewer to meet with a more charming subject of criticism than is afforded by "Rural Rambles." The poetry is excellent, the pictures are most delightful, and the "get-up" is tasty in the extreme. Altogether it is a fit and suitable "Christmas card" for those who are prepared to spend a couple of shillings in this direction.

EMINENT WOMEN SERIES.—ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.*

"Elizabeth Barrett Browning," says Mr. Ingram, "is one of England's purest as well as greatest poets." This is high praise, so far as the former portion of the dictum is concerned. Few will gainsay the truth of the contention. She herself was the purest of the pure, and her poetry was a reflex of her own high qualities; but that she was one of the greatest of those who have gained a niche in the temple of fame is somewhat questionable. Admitting that her finest work, "Aurora Leigh," is replete, to quote once again the words of Mr. Ingram, "with magnificent aspirations, glowing thoughts, brilliant scintillations of genius, innumerable gemlike passages of pathos, passionate rushes of language, and daring assaults upon time-honoured customs," is not his further criticism both true and destructive? "When the glamour of perusal has passed off, and the reader begins to take a calm survey of the whole story, he is astonished at the extent of its shortcomings."

Still, taken as a whole, Mrs. Browning's works are of a very high order of merit. The more they are read the more they are liked; not, perhaps, from a purely artistic point of view, but because they reflect such fire, such enthusiasm, such exquisite sentiment, such delicate sympathy, such contempt for wrong, such love of right! Her verse is so sweet, so melodious, so stirring, and yet, withal, so gentle, that the verse is loved no less than the woman who wrote it.

The task of writing her biography was not easy. So much as to early details is obscure, so much has been said amiss as regards truth, so much is supposition, so little fact, that the task of weighing, sifting, and reducing to a level of plain, sober truth must have presented no inconsiderable difficulty. But Mr. Ingram has evidently undertaken the work as a labour of love. His criticisms are so genuine, so appreciative, that when he blames he always reserves a few words of approval to break the severity of the harsher judgment. And the result is a most interesting and valuable biography of a lady whom all love, all admire, and all lament.

HAZELL AND SON, BREWERS.†

This is a temperance tale, and, of course, there is the due and proper amount of invective against breweries, public houses, and "drinkerics," and drink of every sort. Equally, of course, all the ills in the tale arise from "cursed alcohol" and intoxicating fluids. This is all very well; and, perhaps, as the object of the work is to aid the cause of sobriety, which the author has so much at heart, the reader must swallow the "goodie-goodies" as part of the performance. Apart from this defect of faddism, the book is not badly written.

Messrs. Blackwood and Sons have issued a new and cheaper edition, in nine volumes, of Kinglake's "Invasion of the Crimea." It is only necessary to say that the type is clear, the paper good, and the price moderate. No review is needed as to the text of a history which is a standard work in the English language.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—Several works published by the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge and the Religious Tract Society. "The Wife's Help to Indian Cookery," by W. H. Dawe (Elliot Stock); "Miss Baxter's Bequest," by Annie S. Swan (Oliphant, Anderson and Ferrier); "Cloudy Days," by Francis Bourdillon; "The First Wiltshire Rifle Volunteer," by Major R. D. Gibney (W. H. Allen and Co.); "Life and Opinions of Major-General Sir Charles Macgregor," two vols. (William Blackwood and Sons).

THE SECRETARY OF STATE, in a letter to the Government of India on Sir Alfred Croft's report on State aided education and the Government Resolution thereon, concurs in the suggestion that the general report on educational progress asked for by Lord Kimberley should only be submitted once in five years. The Secretary of State has read the report and the resolution with much interest, and notes that the Mahomedan community have made marked advance in regard to education. With regard to technical education, he agrees in thinking the subject of such importance that it is necessary to take what ever steps may be practicable to encourage its development.

Derangement.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the Hygio-Electric Belt, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigny's Medicated Pumilio-Finor Belt. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d. ? Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

Send for New Pamphlet, entitled "Electro-Therapie," post free to any address.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1888.

THE NATIVE ARMIES OF INDIA.—I.

ACCORDING to the telegrams from India published this morning Lord Dufferin has at length openly defined the policy of the British Government towards the Native States with regard to the armies which they maintain under treaties with the Paramount Power. His Excellency, on his way from Simla to the Plains, paid a visit to the Maharajah of Patiala, and at a Darbar held there on Friday last, in the presence of several Princes and Chiefs of the Punjab, he declared what the relations were in future to be between the ruling Power and its feudatories. He is reported to have said:—

The feeling shown by the feudatory chiefs, both Hindus and Mahommedans, three years ago, when war was threatened, could not be misunderstood.

He was convinced that their attitude in the crisis not only created a favourable impression in England, but produced a very striking effect in other countries. The Government had resolved not to accept the pecuniary assistance so liberally tendered, but they would enlist the co-operation in other ways of those Chiefs with specially fine fighting material at their command.

They would be asked to reorganise a portion of their armies, making them thoroughly efficient, while each would remain a purely State force, recruited in the territories of its Chief, and serving within them. Their troops would be gradually raised to such a pitch of efficiency as would enable the Imperial Government to use them as part of its available resources to meet external danger.

British officers, with their headquarters in British territory, would be appointed to advise and instruct the Chiefs, and Native military drill instructors would also be provided. Breechloaders would be presented to them, while each Punjab Chief would receive one battery of four guns. The Government would in no case ask a Native State to maintain larger forces than would afford support, or would it take undue advantage of its loyalty.

The speech, we learn, was listened to with marked attention, and loudly applauded. In conclusion, the Viceroy said: "I trust that the Chiefs selected will, in any case regard the acceptance of their offers as an honourable distinction, while those whose armies it is not found possible to utilise in some manner will understand that, if they cannot usefully contribute to the fighting strength of the Empire, they can in other ways render services equally meritorious, and equally sure to win the approval of the Queen and Empress."

No one of Indian experience will deny that the policy now laid down is a wise one. It is a bold attempt to solve what has hitherto been one of the most difficult problems of the many with which the Paramount Power of England has had to contend in its administration of India. The question of the armies of the Native States has been a two-edged sword to handle. Recruited, as they mostly were from not the most law-revering portions of the population, they have always been viewed with considerable distrust, and even when the loyalty of their Chiefs was unquestionable, with considerable doubt as to their possible efficiency if ever called upon to aid the British Government in defence of the Empire. Indeed, it is little more than a month since one of the leading papers in India thus described them:—"The armies of Native States as they exist at present, except in a few exceptional cases, are mere armed rabbles, more an object of dread to their Chiefs than anything else, comprising, as they do, all the turbulent rascals in the State, and finding occupation for men who would otherwise be discontented robbers preying on the outlying villages. These so-called troops are many in number, but, practically, untrained, and quite unused to anything like European discipline, that strong chain which binds together into a resistless and unbreakable bundle what would otherwise be weak and disconnected sticks. These troops are rather a source of danger than of strength to the Chiefs themselves, for they could not be led against a foe if they were unwilling, and could not be restrained if they wanted to fight."

It requires no military education to understand that such an army must give cause for considerable anxiety to the ruling Power, especially when rumours are rife of approaching dangers from without. When the danger came from within, as in 1857, the mischief done by the "armed rabbles" was widespread and great, for they harried the peoples whose friends they were supposed to be as well as the foe they pretended to desire to drive from their country. And then it happened also that the very troops (the Gwalior Contingent, for instance) which had been drilled by British officers, having deserted their own ruler, became the most troublesome enemy which we had to encounter, as witness the grasp they got on Wyndham at Cawnpore. When the Mutiny had been put down, and peace everywhere restored, the question of what to do with the armies of the Native Chiefs was continually before the minds of successive Viceroys, but the difficulty of finding a satisfactory answer to it was perplexing in the extreme. It was considered too hazardous an experiment to do what is now about to be done—drill and discipline them by British officers. The memory of the struggles we had had with the Gwalior Contingent did not encourage a repetition of the experiment. And so nothing was done, and the position remained unaltered. The Government at home were not without warnings that such a state of things was a standing danger to the stability of our rule in India. Confidential reports were called for, and furnished; but the matter blazed almost into flame when a secret despatch from the then Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier of Magdala, found its way to publicity in the columns of the Times. Lord Napier's views were strong and alarming, and he expressed in no doubtful or halting sentences his distrust of the wild soldiery which, under agreements which we were afraid to break, we allowed the Native Chiefs of India to maintain and foster. The idea of increasing the efficiency of such soldiery by giving them British officers and drill instructors, and furnishing them with arms of precision and field batteries, was not then hinted at as even a possibility of the future. To-day we learn that a great change has come over the minds of our statesmen, and an experiment is about to be tried which will be watched with the closest attention by Europeans and Natives alike. The experiment is a bold one—hazardous it may seem—but we hold it to be a wise one. It will show to the Natives of India that England is giving them her full confidence, and calculates upon the emulation that will be created amongst the Native States as to their capacity for a united defence of the Empire. It is a stroke of strategy that crowns well that policy of protection against any foreign foe which Lord Dufferin has been devoting his energies and talents to carry out, and we believe that it will bear the test of trial should the hour of trial come.

WHITEHALL, Nov. 12.

THE MERCHANDISE MARKS ACT.—The Subodha Patrika says:—The Merchandise Marks Bill lately introduced into the Supreme Legislative Council is calculated to meet an evil which has lately attained to enormous proportions, and has in consequence called for an emergent remedy. False or colourable trade marks and false marking of quantities has become so common as almost to prevent all honest trade in the goods concerned. The wholesale dealers and retail traders are, as a general rule, in the secret. The victims who are cheated and defrauded are the customers who actually use the goods, and they are generally powerless to seek their remedy under existing law. The new Bill proposes to render such practices penal and prevent the importation of such falsely marked goods. Generally speaking, a legislative enforcement of trade morality is of doubtful advantage. But in the present case the Bill is recommended by the experience of the United Kingdom, and has, indeed, been demanded by the public opinion of the very class of persons who, if anybody, must from the nature of the case suffer all the inconvenience likely to arise from it.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—NOVEMBER 12.

PROPOSED RAILWAY FROM CHITTAGONG TO DIBRUGARH.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Government of India had before it a proposal for the construction of a railway from Chittagong to Dibrugarh; whether one of the conditions of the proposals was the concession of land and of certain coal and petroleum rights; and whether he could state the full particulars of the proposal, and by whom such proposal was made.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has received two such proposals, which have been sent to the Government of India for consideration and report. Until a reply has been received it is undesirable that the particulars should be made public.

THE INDIAN POLICE.

In reply to Sir G. CAMPBELL,

Sir J. GORST said: There are rules regarding the appointment of Europeans to the police in the various provinces. The Secretary of State has no reason to doubt that the appointment of Mr. Hay as an assistant superintendent has been made in accordance with them. No rules proposed by the Civil Service Commissioners are anywhere in force. There is no preliminary examination for admission to the Burma police, but an officer would lose his appointment if he failed to pass certain examinations in the Burmese language and criminal law within a prescribed time.

THE OUTSTILL SYSTEM IN BENGAL.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the attention of the Government had been called to an official minute recently published by the Government of Bengal, in which it was admitted that the working of the outstill system in Bengal of late had been such as to stimulate the consumption of intoxicating liquors; and what steps, if any, would be taken to give effect to this decision of the Government of Bengal.

Sir J. GORST: The minute referred to is published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 17th of October, 1888. The Government of Bengal find that, owing to the neglect of the rules prescribed by the Bengal Education Commission, certain outstills licensed early in 1887 in the Hooghly and Howrah districts have become a nuisance, and have caused the price of liquor to be cheapened. The Lieutenant-Governor has ordered that the existing arrangements shall be thoroughly revised, and it is intended that the rules shall be so enforced as to prevent undue cheapening of liquor. Steps will be taken in concert with the Revenue Board for ascertaining whether similar laxities in the outstill system have been permitted in other districts.

SIR J. GORST AND THE AFFAIRS OF HYDERABAD.

In answer to Dr. CLARK,

Sir J. GORST said: My attention has been called to an article in the Pioneer of Allahabad, which I understand to insinuate a charge that I have employed Mr. Palmer as an intermediary either in the affairs of Hyderabad generally or in reference to the Hyderabad Committee of this Session in particular, is wholly false. It is not my intention to take any action in regard to such statements. Perhaps the House will allow me to add that in the winter of 1883-84, before I had ever held office, I acted as legal adviser to the Prime Minister and Senior Regent of Hyderabad. Since that time I have had nothing to do with the affairs of Hyderabad, except recently as Under-Secretary of State for India. In that capacity I have acted under the direction of my noble friend the Secretary of State, and through the regular officials of the India Office. (Hear, hear.)

THE DECCAN MINING COMPANY.

In answer to Mr. KELLY,

Sir J. GORST said: The Secretary of State is aware that proposals relating to the Deccan Mining Company are now under the consideration of the Nizam's Government at Hyderabad, in consultation with the Resident. No terms have been yet submitted for the approval of the Secretary of State in Council; but, of course, no alterations detrimental to the interests of the Nizam will be sanctioned.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Maharaja of Kuch Behar proceeds to Lucknow to be attached to the 17th Lancers for duty.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL C. T. HEATHCOTE, C.B., who has been acting for General Gillespie at Mhow, has returned to Bombay, and resumed charge of his district.

HOSHUNGABAD having been transferred from the Nagpur Brigada to the Nerbudda District, will in future be garrisoned by Bengal troops. The regiment at Jubbulpore will find the detachments which ordinarily consists of two companies of Native Infantry and the relief will be carried out annually by rail.

A TROOP of the 16th Bengal Cavalry will march by road from Jullundur to Umballa for employment on orderly duty on the departure of the 9th Bengal Cavalry until the arrival of the 10th Bengal Lancers. A troop of the 17th Bengal Cavalry from Ferozepore will march to Lahore for duty on the departure of the 5th Bengal Cavalry.

THE 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade will leave Dinapore on the 2nd and 3rd of December for embarkation at Calcutta on the 5th of December in the Indian Marine steamer Canning for conveyance to Rangoon. The depôt of this battalion will be quartered at Shahjehanpur, where it will remain until required to rejoin the headquarters at Bombay next trooping season for embarkation to England.

THE 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment, proceeding to Burma, will leave Lucknow in sufficient time to arrive at Calcutta and embark on the 19th of November in the Indian Marine steamer Clive for conveyance to Rangoon. The depôt of this battalion will be quartered at Sitapur in the same barracks as the depot of the 2nd Norfolk Regiment, where it will remain until required to proceed to Bombay for embarkation for England next trooping season.

PRIVATE THOMAS CONROY, of the 1st Battalion of the Worcestershire Regiment was recently tried by a court-martial and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment on a charge of assaulting his superior officer, in that on the 12th of October he struck with his fist Bombardier Freeman, on the face, while in the execution of his duty. Six months of the term of imprisonment were remitted by the General Commanding, while confirming the finding of the Court.

THE Commander-in-Chief has just issued a circular directing that the saddles used by all Bengal and Punjab Cavalry regiments are for the future to be of one uniform pattern. This pattern is very similar to the universal pattern saddle about to be introduced into British cavalry. It offers the advantages of a very considerable reduction of weight, great strength, the arch being constructed of angle-iron, and a roomy seat; and brings the rider much closer to his horse. The circular further directs hunting stirrups are to take the place of the round ones now in use, experience having shown the former to be much less tiring to the feet. Besides this, a fixed pattern of cloak with cape and hood is for the future to be worn by all regiments.

THE following places have been fixed as regimental centres for Bombay and Madras Native Infantry under the territorial scheme of 1886:—Madras—First and Second Pioneers, Regimental Centre, Bangalore; 2nd, 29th, and 33rd Infantry, Belgaum; 3rd, 23rd, and 31st, Trichinopoly; 5th, 16th, and 27th, Berhampore; 6th, 14th, and 21st, Bellary; 7th, 19th, and 24th, Belgaum; 8th, 12th, and 17th, Bangalore; 9th, 11th, and 28th, Madras; 10th, 25th, and 32nd, Secunderabad; 13th, 20th, and 22nd, Pallavaram; 15th, 26th, and 30th, Secunderabad.

BOMBAY Presidency—1st, 8th, and 9th, Ahmednugger; 2nd, 12th, and 13th, Poona; 3rd, 5th, and 10th, Satara; 4th, 23rd, and 25th, Bombay; 14th, 16th, and 17th, Ahmedabad; 19th, 20th, and 22nd, Nusseerabad; 7th, 24th, and 26th, Mhow; 27th, 29th, and 30th, Kurrachee; 21st, Bombay; 28th, Kirkee.

POSTING FOR PLACES ABROAD.CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR SEASON.

Senders of letters, parcels, books, &c., desirous of availing themselves of the facilities offered by the Post-office, to despatch Christmas and New Year's presents to relatives and friends abroad, are reminded that to reach their destination on or about the desired date, all such letters, parcels, &c., must be posted some time in advance. In the following table the latest dates are shown on which packets or parcels of all kinds can be forwarded from London so as in due course to reach their destination about Christmas or New Year's Day, as the case may be. For the Continent of Europe, letters, books, &c., must be posted not less than from one to seven days; and parcels, not less than from three to ten days before Christmas Day or New Year's Day, according to the locality:—

* In these Cases no sufficiently reliable information can be given transmission being by means of steamers sailing from Foreign Ports.

It must be clearly understood that the dates given above are those on which the Mails are made up and despatched from this country, and that, in order to be included in these Mails, letters, parcels, &c., must be posted in the United Kingdom in time to be forwarded to London or the port of departure, as the case may be, generally by the Night Mails of the day preceding that of despatch, but—to prevent disappointment—care should be taken to make inquiry in good time at the Local Post-offices. On almost every occasion of the despatch of a Mail for abroad, letters and other articles reach the Despatching Office too late to be included in the outgoing Mail although obviously intended to go by such Mail, and more or less disappointment is necessarily the consequence; in most of these cases posting has been delayed until the days appointed for the closing of the Mail or for the departure of the steamer, and the packets consequently reach the Despatching Office too late to be forwarded.

THE loss of revenue this year to his Highness the Nizam's Government from the scarcity owing to the deficient rainfall is roughly estimated at some twenty to twenty-four lakhs, says the Deccan Times. If we have even now a good fall of rain, this estimate will be diminished considerably, but a deficit there must be even upon the most favourable supposition.

† The dates of this voyage are subject to alteration if the Serapis proceeds out via the Cape.

In the Khyber a story obtained credence which was so circumstantial in all its details, that it really seemed, for the moment, above all suspicion. This was that Goolam Hyder's force had been defeated and he himself slain; his body was said to have been carried to Cabul and buried there with all honours; and Mir Ata Khan, Herati, was formally appointed to succeed him, being sworn on the Koran, as his loyalty had once been in question. This story was absolutely without foundation, but it was believed for the time being until the truth was made known regarding the affair of Tashkurgan. In the Ghazni direction the disaffected sections among the Ghilzai tribesmen, and the local Hazaras, hailed the news of Ishak's success with particular satisfaction, and immediately began to give trouble. It was not known to what extent this rising has spread, but the denuding of the Ghazni district of troops will, no doubt, encourage its leaders to some extent. Fortunately the Ameer has been able to give clear evidence that the fight at Tashkurgan ended in Ishak's defeat, and thus the dangerous possibilities to which we have referred have passed away for the time being. Abdul Rahman is too strong a ruler to let them be revived very easily, and he will doubtless take the necessary steps to check the petty disturbances which have occurred in the direction of Ghazni.

CONGRESS TACTICS.—The Lahore paper of Oct. 17 contains the following:—"The Mahomedans of Peshawar at the meeting which was announced for the 14th passed resolutions against the Hindu Congress; and, so far as the Musalmans of the Punjab from Delhi to Peshawar are concerned, the Congress bubble may now be regarded as having been very effectively pricked. The tactics by which the Congress agitators have sought to deceive the public into believing that the Mahomedans, now in this city, now in that, had assembled to support the Congress, have been more than once exposed, and will, as the truth becomes more widely known, do the Congress movement elsewhere considerable injury. We have known many agitations in our time, but never one in which such discreditable means were so shamelessly employed. Even without this trickery, the contrast is sufficiently striking, between the Congress meetings in which Mahomedans were not permitted to express their opinion and the anti-Congress meeting at Peshawar, when the wandering Mr. Bhimji was allowed to speak for two whole hours until the long-suffering president felt obliged to stop his talk. Conscious in the strength of their position the Mahomedans have given every advantage to the Congress agitators, and the result amply justifies their confidence."

THE Government of Bombay, observes a contemporary, does not sympathise with the aspirations of the Municipal Corporation, and the titles which were submitted for approval, offering a choice of alternatives, have both been rejected. It is painful to speculate on the reason which caused this decision. To have asked for "Honourable" might have been peculiarly offensive to those who enjoyed the title as an exceptional and precious privilege, and who were calculated to regard this shoddy and municipal imitation with indignant feelings. But "Worshipful" is comparatively an innocent title, of more applicability, and treading on nobody's toes. Its rejection would seem to show that, in the Government mind, such innovations are either unnecessary or ridiculous, and the hope of overcoming such a feeling is little. The collapse of the attempt is only an illustration of the doctrine of the vanity of human vanities.

BROAD ARROW AND*NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KATE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally dulle and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is especially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR

CHOLERA, DYSENTERY,

DIARRHŒA, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,

REPORT that it ACTS as a

CHARM, one does generally sufficient.

Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell St., W.G.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. — We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assumes PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE — Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons do so, and purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE — Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. BOURNEMOUTH, HANTS. — A Limited number of PRIVATE PUPILS, requiring special care and attention, are received by Mr. C. CARUS-WILSON, in connection with Arnold College High School, Address, "ALTHORPE," West Bournemouth. Highest Terms, 100 guineas.

TO INDIAN OFFICERS AND CIVILIANS.

A LADY offers a good HOME to SIX CHILDREN, special care being taken as regards bodily health. She will have the assistance of competent Governesses, and Visiting Masters for instruction in English subjects, Languages, and Accomplishments, but will herself be responsible for the training of children entrusted to her.

No expense will be spared to give every advantage and comfort. Necessary clothing can be supplied. Entire charge all the year round, if desired.

The house is situated on gravel soil, within ten minutes' walk from Beckenham Junction, and twelve miles from London.

If preferred, children might attend a High-Class School for Girls, or a well-known school where boys are prepared for the great Public Schools.

Inclusive terms, 100 guineas a year.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 9th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 7th November; and from Calcutta to the 6th November.

THE Commander-in-Chief of India, accompanied by General Elles, General Chapman, and his Excellency's Personal Staff, passed through Lahore on Nov. 1st, and arrived at Karachi on Nov. 3rd. His Excellency visited the new forts and defence works in the afternoon. On the 5th he reviewed the troops, distributed prizes to the Volunteers, and was the guest of the Sind Club at dinner in the evening.

LORD CONNEMARA, continuing his tour in the Madras Presidency, has visited Dharwar, Bellary, Cuddapah, and Tirupati, where he received and replied to various addresses that were presented to him.

THE Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Provinces and the Misses Colvin, attended by Captain J. Colvin, arrived at Lucknow on Nov. 1st. His Honour, prior to reaching his Oudh headquarters, visited Budaon, Bareilly, and Shahjehanpur.

COLONEL WACE has taken over charge of the office of First Financial Commissioner of the Punjab from Mr. Elsmie. On relief by Mr. Elsmie Colonel Gordon Young returns to the Commissionership of the Jullundur Division, Mr. Mackworth Young taking three months' leave.

THERE are to be but few changes in the Financial Department during the coming season. Mr. Westland, on the expiration of his special duty with the Provincial Governments, in all probability takes furlough, which will leave Mr. Sinkinson in his place as Finance Secretary, and Messrs. Gay and Atkinson in theirs at Calcutta. Mr. Tupp comes out during the present month, and returns to the Accountant-Generalship at Allahabad, and Mr. Rawlins, arriving about the same time, goes to Madras, leaving Mr. Jacob as Accountant-General at Bombay, and Mr. Logan at Lahore.

COLONEL PARRY NISBET has accepted the post of Resident in Kashmir.

DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL R. LIDDERDALE, M.D., late Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal, now on furlough, is retiring from the Service. Deputy Surgeon-General A. Eteson, late Sanitary Commissioner, Assam, also on furlough, will retire on the expiration of his leave.

MR. L. M. THORNTON, Under-Secretary to the North-West Provinces Government, takes two and a-half months' leave by this mail to Europe. Mr. T. M. Holmes, Assistant Magistrate, officiates during his absence.

CAPTAIN DURAND and Dr. Robertson have returned from their visit to Gilgit, the former proceeding to the Punjab, and the latter remaining in Kashmir for some shooting.

THE youngest daughter of Mr. Fitzparick, the Chief Commissioner of Assam, died of typhoid fever at Shillong on the 27th ultimo.

LIEUT. E. W. T. OSBORNE, of the 2nd Battalion King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, succumbed to an attack of enteric fever at Poona on Nov. 1st.

BAPU SAHIB JADU, Firozgunj Bahadur, has been installed by Colonel Bannerman as President of the Gwalior Council of Regency.

THE Headquarters Column of the Hazara Field Force has been having rather a hard time of it during the last few days. On November 1st it had to clear the Gorapher Pass of the enemy and spend the night at an elevation of 9,000 feet, without food or bedding, and amid a dropping fire from the surrounding forest. Lieut. Ewart, of the Seaforth Highlanders, had at this time a narrow escape, being severely wounded in the forehead. On the 3rd inst. General Channer moved out and destroyed Pokal, the chief village of the Allai Chief, with a trifling loss. This measure had a good effect, as the Allai jirga arrived in the camp at nightfall, Arsala Khan himself having fled across the Indus. The authorities have decided to summon the Chagarzais to send in their formal submission before our troops leave the Mountain.

THE Amir has taken with him from Kabul, to accompany him to Afghan-Turkistan, four regiments of cavalry and two batteries of Artillery, numbering altogether about 2,000 men.

BY the reliefs of the current season the military garrison in Burma will be further reduced to the extent of one battalion each of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras Infantry, and two Native cavalry regiments—the only two now remaining.

THE inquiry into the irregularities alleged to have been committed by Lieut.-Colonel Bulkeley in connection with the regimental accounts of the 17th Bombay Infantry was continued at Mhow. The prisoner has made his statement in defence.

THE Crawford Commission sat during the whole of last week. The hearing of the charge in connection with the acceptance of a bribe from Sindekar having concluded, the Commission then proceeded with the matter of Balwant Narayan Dabir, from whom, while head karkoon at Chopda, Mr. Crawford is alleged by the prosecution to have received a bribe of Rs. 3,000.

THE platelaying on the main line of the Indian Midland Railway is completed, and through trains to Bhopal have commenced running.

A CYCLONE visited Madras on October 31st, and was one of great violence, and accompanied by torrents of rain. Much damage has been done to property. The British India steamer Bhundara, which put out to sea, was towed back in a disabled condition, five of her coolie passengers having been killed and twenty severely injured.

LORD DUFFERIN's new second title has set to work the punsters of the Civil and Military Gazette. "Not Ava bad title!" they say. "Wondered what he'd get Avaterwards!" "a title. . . thanks! the Burmese Ava — — tar!" "More titles! Ava! —avast! an Avalanche of honours! Don't stop at six, but Av' another."

A TRAVELLER from beyond the Cashmere border has brought some fresh news about Dad Mahomed Khan, the murderer of Mr. Dalgleish. This man, together with the others implicated in the crime, was in Kashgar for some days after the murder, but the Chinese authorities, though aware that the crime had been committed, took no steps to arrest any of the party. There is a strong presumption that they were bribed not to notice it. M. Peterhoffski, the Russian Consul in Kashgar, has taken steps to have Dad Mahomed arrested if he passes into Russian territory.

THE MARQUIS OF AVA.—The Indian Daily News writes:—"For a long time past the Viceroy has been subject to systematic vilification and personal abuse by some portion of the Native Press, and the Mirror has been conspicuous in this respect. May not this mark of Her Majesty's favour, so exceptionally conferred, be the answer to the carping and ungenerous denunciation of Lord Dufferin? It is not to give importance to the fag-end of his term of office, but to mark emphatically, by its exceptional bestowal, Her Majesty's approval of Lord Dufferin, and her implied censure of the gross personal attacks upon her representative. There was no waiting for the period of his retirement; and as if to mark the honour more emphatically, Her Majesty commands his Excellency to assume at once the titles and the dignity they are intended to confer. This is a more reasonable interpretation than those suggested, and in that view it has a significance that cannot be very comforting to those who have persistently sought to disparage Lord Dufferin and his administration."

NOTES.

THE news from India up to yesterday received by wire is brief, but satisfactory. The Sikkim field has broken up, but garrisons will be maintained in Gnatong and Gantok until the peace arrangements are finally settled.

LORD DUFFERIN'S reply to an address from the Oriental College at Aligarh, in which he told his hearers that the Government hoped to put a stop to State aid except for primary education, leaving higher education to the support of the public, will, of course, raise further animosity against him and British rule amongst those enlightened patriots of Bengal and elsewhere who consider that their sons should be educated at the expense of the State, no matter what the parents' means may be. Such gentlemen, if "ashamed to beg," have never been too proud to accept the favour of a gratuitous high-class education, which they are now turning to account by misrepresenting and vilifying the donors of it. The Viceroy dwelt, no doubt, forcibly and eloquently on the importance of "self-help;" but the Bengali Babú interprets that phrase only in one way, viz., that he should help himself whenever he has the opportunity to anything good that the Paramount Power may offer him, reserving to himself the right of vituperating that Power ever afterwards.

MANY may grieve, but few who knew him in India in later years will feel surprised that Mr. A. O. Hume has thrown himself thoroughly into the Congress agitation, and has become the guide, philosopher, and friend of the "blatant and seditious." It is always wrong to attribute selfish motives to a man when he poses before the world as a philanthropist, and Mr. Hume has been doing this for some time; but to Anglo-Indians who have had even less than Mr. Hume's experience of Oriental character it must be difficult to understand how any Englishman—and, above all, an Englishman who has taken part in the British rule of India—can now play the part he is doing. He has the boldness to say in a long letter to Sir Auckland Colvin that the object of the Congress propaganda is, "by quiet teachings and preachings," and by the distribution of "elementary tracts," to bring the people "to recognise the many benefits they owe to British rule." Sir Auckland Colvin fails, however, to see any trace of these excellent motives.

ON the contrary. In a trenchant reply to Mr. Hume he writes as follows:—"Of the India of to-day, as we know it; of India under education; of India compelled, in the interests of the weaker masses, to submit to impartial justice; of India brought together by road and rail; of India entering into the first-class commercial markets of the world; of India of religious toleration; of India assured for terms of years, unknown in less fortunate Europe, of profound and unbroken peace; of India of the free Press; of India finally taught that the end and aim of rule is the welfare of the people, and not the personal aggrandisement of the Sovereign, there is not a syllable of recognition; but a hideous caricature is forced upon the people in which the British Government and English officials are depicted as unjust, inconsiderate, ill-informed, and reckless of the consequences of their action, the whole being an unrelieved picture of a starving, oppressed, and brutalised India, groaning under an unsympathetic and oppressive rule."

Which picture is the correct one? Mr. Hume cannot, in the light of his own experience, say the latter; yet this is the picture which he approves of being presented to his countrymen at home. Surely to win "notoriety" by such a course is hardly the "ambition which hinges on virtue."

FORTUNATELY, a reaction is setting in in India itself, and according to the Times telegram from Calcutta, published this morning, the landowners of Oude, Hindu and Mahomedan, have formed an Association against the Congress propagandists, and have memorialised Government for legislative interference. We doubt, however, if the Government will take such a step, for we doubt whether matters are really so threatening as the prayer of the Memorial, according to the Times correspondent's precis of it, makes them to be. We hardly think that the views of the Congress have so permeated the masses of India that they are ready to revolt against our rule, and are only kept from doing so by the strong hand of power. We prefer to think that India is thoroughly "loyal," so far as loyalty can be honestly expected from conquered races. The millions of India, easily moved, as they are, by trifling and contradictory impulses, are not so ignorant as to be unaware that under the British raj they have had for years peace hitherto unknown to them. Why should they rebel against that Kismet which they have for so long patiently accepted? Besides, a revolt would require leaders, and where are these to be found? Not certainly amongst the orators of the Congress. Those "hereditary bondsmen" may spout about their desire to "be free," but they will never of their own accord carry out the poet's truism, that to be so, "themselves must strike the blow."

It is to be hoped that the agitators will not find a home leader in Sir Charles Dilke, who has arrived in India, and who, it is said, intends to make a study of the frontier defences. Sir Charles and Lady Dilke arrived at Kurachee in the steamer Locksley Hall on Nov. 6, and were met on board by Sir Frederick Roberts. In the evening his Excellency and Sir Charles left for Quetta, where they were to make a short stay with Sir Robert Sandeman. In such company the late member for Chelsea is not likely to imbibe many Congress "notions."

CONSIDERABLE excitement is said to have been caused among the tea and coffee planters of Ceylon by a legal decision, which declared that the Indian coolie on the estates was a daily, instead of a monthly, labourer. Hitherto the coolie had always been treated as a monthly labourer, and been expected to give a month's notice on leaving. The judges, however, found that this was against the letter of the law as it stood, and by this decision the planters were left at the mercy of the coolies, who could leave them at a day's notice, at a time when a sudden cessation of labour might mean ruin to their masters. It has been found necessary to alter the law at once, and an ordinance to that effect has been introduced into the Ceylon Council. The contract between labourer and hirer is to be for one month, renewable from month to month—wages to be payable monthly as before—but no labourer to be entitled to any wages for such days or time as he may agree with the superintendent not to perform any work. The Ceylon planters have thus had a narrow escape from a very serious danger.

SOME months ago Mr. Martin Wood wrote to the Economist, advocating that the Indian financial year should coincide with the calendar year, which would allow the annual statement to be presented soon after the Christmas holidays, whilst the whole Government of India is located in Calcutta. The Times of India approves generally of this proposal, and says:—"The arguments in favour of it are certainly strong. The railway accounts are already made up for the calendar year. The statement could in January be discussed in open Council, and this slight change would enable Parliament to deal with the Secretary of State's definitive statement in March, instead of at the fag-end of the season. 'This arrangement,' says Mr. Martin Wood, 'would restore Parliamentary control over the Indian finance. It would infuse fresh vigour into the efforts of those members who feel and desire to give effect to the responsibility which really rests on the British public in this first-class branch of Imperial business.' He concludes by affirming that there is no tangible difficulty in making the change he suggests. Probably tangible difficulties will be found by the dozen, but apart from these the scheme is certainly ingenious."

In the Bombay Government Gazette to hand by the present mail we read, under the heading of "Judicial Department" :—

"The following appointments of Veterinary Surgeons are made."

And then follow a list of horse doctors appointed to various stations. Their judicial functions, however, are not disclosed.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 25.

Replying to an address from the Oriental College at Aligarh, the Viceroy dwelt on the importance of self-help in all cases in higher education. The Government hoped to put a stop to State aid, except for primary education, and to leave higher education to the support of the public. An address was presented by the Sikhs at Lahore, in which Lord Dufferin was thanked for extending the Empire east and west, and securing a strong frontier.

The Government has issued orders for the breaking up of the Sikkim field force. Gnatong and Gantok will be garrisoned until peace is settled on a stable basis.

The Duke of Connaught is consulting with the military members of the Council at Bombay on the subject of the Bombay harbour defences.

There is no news of the missing steamer Vaitarna, which carried upwards of 700 Native passengers, and no doubt is entertained that she was sunk by the recent cyclone.

A Native magistrate of Calcutta has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 3,000 for bribery and corruption.

The landowners of Oude, Hindoo and Mahomedan, have formed an association for the preservation of the country from the perilous designs of the Native Congress. They propose to send a memorial to the Government requesting it to adopt measures for the suppression of this seditious agitation. The memorial points out the growing evil resulting from the publishing and circulating of inflammatory addresses among the masses. The result of such teachings and preachings is to induce the people to believe that certain false charges of misgovernment are true, and the fact that as yet there is no open revolt is due to the stability of the Government, not to the want of inclination on the part of the irresponsible agitators who excite ideas that are certainly not inconsistent with rebellion. The memorial concludes with a prayer that these attempts to subvert the established government of India may be suppressed by a legislative enactment. The Maharajah of Benares has been appointed president, and the Rajah of Bhinga and Sir Syed Ahmed joint secretaries of the new association.

The Viceroy, who arrived in Dacca yesterday, will reach Calcutta on Thursday. He is to be entertained at the St. Andrew's dinner on Friday, and it is believed that he will take that opportunity of delivering an exhaustive review of his Indian administration.

THE proposals which Miss Tallyarkhan made that a fund should be raised, to be called "The Lady Dufferin's Hindoo Widow Medical Fund," has met with warm approval both in the Calcutta and Madras Press. It is thought that the "proposal deserves to meet with a prompt response and hearty support, particularly from the well-to-do women of India. A Native Women's Memorial of Lady Dufferin would be a peculiarly appropriate acknowledgment of the good work her Excellency has accomplished during her four and a-half years' residence in this country." We repeat our willingness to receive subscriptions to this fund.

PROGRESSIVE CALCUTTA.—A Calcutta paper writes :—"With all its boasted progressiveness, it must be confessed that Calcutta is decidedly behindhand in coming to a decision as to the form which the local Jubilee memorial is to take. While a Technical Institute has already been opened at Bombay and a similar institution is about to be established at Madras, where the public subscriptions, it is thought, will amount to a full lakh of rupees, the Calcutta Jubilee Committee is seemingly idle, or at any rate showing no outward signs of activity. It is surely time the Committee took the public into its confidence and informed them what it intends doing with the funds so liberally placed at its disposal. It is to be hoped that any memorial that may be decided upon will be worthy of the metropolis of the Indian Empire."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

(Madras Mail.)

It is only ten years since the great famine in Maisur, which resulted from the failure of four successive monsoons, was brought to an end. It swept away one-fourth of the total population, or about a million human beings, by starvation or disease; and it destroyed a quarter of a million of cattle, and crops valued at nine to ten crores of rupees. The State spent about 70 lakhs on famine relief, and remitted 28 lakhs of land revenue, and expended the whole of its 46 lakhs of invested surplus. It borrowed 50 lakhs from the Government of India, and 15½ lakhs were received from the Mansion House Relief Fund. The State has not yet wholly recovered from that calamity, but no one in 1878 would have felt disposed to entertain the belief that within ten years from that epoch Maisur would be found in the enjoyment of a prosperity such as she has never known before. In an interesting contribution to the latest issue of the Calcutta Review, Mr. Goodall expresses the apprehension that if famine were again to break out in Maisur, "surprise and confusion might again be the elements most conspicuous." He believes that "the lessons of the famine have been partially, if not entirely, forgotten, and seems to think that a calamity like that of eleven years ago will never happen again." We do not share these fears.

VETERINARY TEACHING.

(Englishman.)

Observers of the state of Military Education in India are often surprised at the great want of interest shown by Government in Veterinary Surgery, and at the ignorance which prevails, not only in the army at large, but even among professional men, as to the more abstruse points in the science. Horses and dogs, mules and bullocks are fairly well understood, but of most veterinary surgeons it may be said that the domestic animals are to them what Latin and Greek are to old-fashioned schoolmasters, the end-all and be-all of education, beyond which human wisdom cannot go. Of course every Veterinary need not be an accomplished zoologist, but he should at least aim at being something more than a "horsey" or "doggey" man with a slightly better knowledge of the diseases of these animals than most of the men round him. Veterinary surgery in its proper sense requires as deep and scientific study as any other of the learned professions, and cannot well be mastered at the early age of two-and-twenty, at which the young Veterinary usually enters the service or sets up in practice on his own account. In India things would be very much better if Government encouraged the study of the more important Indian animals, such as camels, elephants, &c., by pecuniary rewards, so that their treatment on service should not be left to sirmans and mahouts, as it is at present. There are a few men out here who really know a great deal about elephants and their diseases, and possibly some who know as much about camels, but what is wanted is a system of instruction and examination that would render such knowledge common throughout the country.

There are not many veterinary surgeons in the army, and it would cost but little to add, say, Rs. 20 a month to the pay of any of them who passed an examination in the treatment of camels or elephants. The distinction of being thus specially paid would be worth something, and even the small permanent increase of income would be a consideration with most men. The expense would be a trifle in comparison with the gain to the State. The deaths of camels alone during the Afghan war amounted to over 60,000, and at least two-thirds of this immense loss was due to sheer ignorance. Tens of thousands of camels, loaded with stores for the front, were sent from Rawal Pindi to Peshawar with no provision for food beyond a small ration of gram. It was understood that they would browse on the bushes by the wayside, and get enough to support life in that way. But the fact that bushes do not spring up in a night was overlooked, and after the first ten or twenty thousand camels had passed over the road the country for miles on each side of the halting stations was eaten bare, and their successors had to starve. Another cause of mortality lay in the fact that some ingenuous official had heard or read that the "camel can go eight days without water." This, of course, only means that a camel may exist for eight days without drinking if its stomach is full when it starts. But this is a very different matter from watering it on a system every eighth day only, which was actually attempted. Allowing, however, that much of the camel mortality was due to want of food, it is certain that at least one-third of it was due to want of knowledge, and might have been prevented had a few veterinary surgeons, properly trained in the treatment of these animals, been attached to the transport columns. The cost of 20,000 camels may at a very low computation be reckoned at twenty lakhs, while the extra cost at Rs. 20 a month of forty specially trained veterinary surgeons would be only Rs. 96,000 in ten years, so there would be a distinct saving of nineteen lakhs in this item alone, to say nothing of the saving of animal life and suffering, or the advantages likely to result from the labours of specially trained men in the course of the ten years while doing their ordinary peace duties. The elephant is rather better known than the camel, but the number of men who really understand how to treat his ailments is very small. Much might be done by offering annual prizes for essays on veterinary subjects, and by printing the successful essays for circulation. In this way a mine of valuable information could be obtained and placed in a convenient form for future use. The sooner it is recognised that men will not study for nothing the better will it be for India and the army.

CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

(Lucknow Express.)

Upon the whole the condition of the people is better than could have been anticipated, and, although all the official views must not be taken as undiluted Gospel truth; still, sufficient is adduced by the various local Governments and Administrations to clearly show that the common people are more happily positioned than they have ever been, especially when it is considered how regardless they all are of Malthusian doctrines, and how ill-disposed the inhabitants of congested districts are to move on to less densely populated areas where wages are higher and the labourers much more sparse than in the neighbourhood of their own homes. The official idea is to induce a much greater inland migration from over-populated to thickly-peopled districts, and this appears to be an assured plan of raising the condition of the masses, if they could be led to avail themselves of it. This, however, we doubt if they will readily accede to. The system which has been in vogue for a number of years of encouraging Native emigration to the Colonies of Great Britain, France, and the Netherlands, has only been partially successful in benefiting the coolies class. The census taken in 1881 disclosed the fact that in parts of India the pressure of population had reached a point beyond which further increase would be attended with danger. In Bengal eight districts had a village population of more than 700 souls to the square mile, and the mean of the eight districts was reported to have "reached the astonishing figure of 802'66."

THE STAR OF SIMLA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

We are not altogether sorry to see that some attention is being paid at home to certain complaints respecting the manner in which the Order of the Star of India has been distributed. The main burden of the indictment preferred against the past administration of the Order is one to which those responsible for its proper administration will find it difficult to plead not guilty. It is asserted, and, perhaps, with some reason, that, although the Order was instituted mainly to provide a means of gratifying the personal feelings of the chief among the Native Princes—binding them together in a confraternity, and attaching them by a personal tie to the Sovereign—it has become practically the appanage of certain appointments in the Civil and Military Services of the Indian Government. Thus, although the Order was instituted for a well-defined purpose, which only permitted—to quote Lord Canning's words—the infusion of "English ordinary members upon a very limited scale," considerably more than half of the Order are Englishmen; and, finally, that those members of the Civil and Military Services who do receive the Order, while not holding any of the appointments to which the Order is now an appanage, are selected from much too narrow a circle who gather round Simla.

INDIA'S EXPORT TRADE IN COTTON MANUFACTURES.

(Madras Times.)

There is no reason to believe that when they succeeded in procuring the repeal of the Indian import duty on cotton manufactures, the Lancashire spinners, manufacturers, and merchants believed they had effectually stunted the growth of the cotton-spinning industry in this country. Yet spinning and manufacturing have continued to thrive apace in India, notably in Bombay. In fact, Lancashire makers and merchants find India not merely competing with them within her own limits, but actually taking up a strong position in other parts of the world. Africa, China, and Japan, all show proofs of India's successful rivalry with England in the matter of cotton manufactures.

Our present object is not so much to refer to statistics of progress made in the past, as to touch upon the prospects of further development in the future. England and Germany are exhibiting great interest in the question of the opening up of East Africa. India has proved in past years, by her trade with Zanzibar, that she can hold her own on African ground. It is likely, therefore, that she will claim and secure a fair share of any profits that may result from a successful development of the resources of the Dark Continent. It is impossible to predict at present whether, or how far, the attempted development will prove successful. It is equally impossible to foresee to what extent any such success would influence the export trade of this country. But it is safe to assert, as regards Bombay at least, that it depends mainly upon herself what share she reaps of whatever harvest springs from the seed now being, or about to be, laid. The assiduous efforts now being made to open up East Africa are not likely to prove an entire failure. The time is at hand when, either by peaceable or by warlike means, that continent is likely to be colonised by the white man. But both English and German traders are likely to do all in their power to throw obstacles in the path of their Bombay rivals. We can only trust that our brethren on the West Coast will strive to overcome these obstacles, and to maintain a fair place in the race for commercial success. They have shown, by the results of their trade with China, what can be done by energetic and persistent effort. They may, we think, be safely trusted not to neglect Africa.

We have alluded to China. The chief export trade in cotton manufactures from India to China is done from Bombay, but Madras is not without a small, and we trust an increasing, state in this trade. It is pleasant, therefore, to be able to state that, while Chinese imports of English cotton yarns in 1887 were much about the same as in 1886, Indian yarns show a gain of 60 per cent. during the same period. In addition to this, Bombay manufacturers are now shipping large supplies of T-cloths and sheetings, and have commenced to send drills. So far, then, the state of things is encouraging, but we cannot safely take it for granted that matters must continue to improve. It is, indeed, doubtful whether we should exaggerate were we to say that prospects in China are as uncertain as those in Africa. Even as things stand now, the Chinese customs tariff offers very serious impediments to the growth of imports of those classes of goods which are most likely to compete with the country-made article. China produces cotton cloth which excels in texture, finish, and cheapness. English and Indian manufacturers might readily imitate the cloth, but, while this is only 16 inches wide and 8 yards long, it comes under the head of duty on cloths "not exceeding 34 inches wide and not exceeding 24 yards long." "Protection" of this kind is not easily overcome, and, unless the Celestial Government can be induced to make a favourable revision of the tariff India can hardly expect to make much headway in the above branch.

It is possible, too, that instead of witnessing a favourable revision of the Customs tariff, we may see an innovation that might offer a very serious check to our trade with China. As far back as 1879, a Cotton Spinning Company was projected in Shanghai under official auspices, and this scheme the authorities are endeavouring to resuscitate. Reckless expenditure brought the original project to an untimely end, though not until foundations of the necessary buildings had been laid. Now capital is required, and past experience has rendered the Chinese chary of paying out cash to be squandered away by officials and others. The shareholders of the Company are all Natives, and one inducement held out to them was a monopoly for the manufacture of cotton cloth. Dread of interference with this has hitherto caused officials to discourage any new scheme for the establishment of cotton mills, whether by Natives or foreigners. It need hardly be said that foreigners have no desire to embark capital in China upon schemes that are not cordially approved by the local authorities. Some foreigners are ready to make the experiment of starting Cotton Mills at once, provided they are supported by the officials, and it may be that the latter will come to think that experiments of this kind may be better made at the risk of foreigners than at the expense of Native capitalists.

Shanghai is the port of the chief cotton-growing district of China, but it is by no means certain that the cotton available there could be spun into yarn fit to compete with Indian supplies. Still, as we learn from an American contemporary, "the cotton-growing districts of China are extending, and there is a steadily-felt demand in that country for improved ginning machinery driven by steam power." This points to a progressive tendency new to the Chinaman, and such a tendency may, if judiciously fostered by the "foreign devils," easily lead to renewed attempts at establishing cotton mills. Even if these succeeded, the result might not be any great interference with Indian supplies, but the probability is that it would be a check. Hence, without wishing to take a gloomy view of prospects, we would recommend Indian spinners and manufacturers to strive hard to retain and extend the trade that has rewarded their past efforts.

BENGAL.

(Nov. 6.)

A SMALL survey party will probably, it is said, be sent into the Chittagong Hills this winter. It will not, however, be more than about 250 strong.

THE Maharani Surnomoyi, C.I., of Cossimbazaar, has given a donation of Rs. 2,000 towards the construction of the new Lady Dufferin Female Hospital in Calcutta.

THE Indian Daily News says:—"Up to date the subscriptions to the Calcutta Dufferin Memorial Fund amounts to Rs. 60,822, of which over Rs. 60,000 has been paid in. The portrait of her Excellency and the statue of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, which have been decided on, have not yet been put in hand. The committee, we believe, are awaiting their Excellencies' arrival in Calcutta in order to consult their wishes ere placing the work in the hands of the artist and sculptor."

SIR RIVERS THOMPSON has written home to the Committee of the "Rivers Thompson Memorial Fund," acknowledging the receipt of their presentation casket, and also of the casket presented to him by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. He is apparently exceedingly pleased with these tokens of the esteem and regard in which he was held by those over whom he lately ruled. He pronounces them the admiration of all who see them. He has also received twelve photographs of his portrait, painted by Mr. Archer, which adorns the landing of the Town Hall staircase. He expresses himself greatly obliged, and remarks that the likeness is a very fine one. There is a balance of over Rs. 10,000 to the credit of the fund, regarding the disposal of which Sir Rivers promises to communicate with the Committee later on.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 7.)

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—I am sorry to say that some districts in Malwa are suffering heavily from want of rain. The effect on the opium produce is disastrous, for it is reported that there will be only a four-anna crop, while there are prospects of great scarcity of water and forage for cattle in the hot weather. Though the Gwalior prant has had excessive and incessant rain, the kharij crops have not been much injured, and rabbi ploughing has also been completed. The public health generally is good.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 9.)

MR. F. L. CHARLES, C.S., acting Municipal Commissioner of Bombay, has been granted a year's furlough, with effect from the date on which he is relieved by Mr. E. C. K. Ollivant, C.S.

DURING the absence of Major-General White, R.E., Major A. W. Baird, R.E., will act as President of the Commission for hearing appeals under the Bombay Steam Boiler Inspection Act, 1887.

A HEAVY shower of rain, accompanied with vivid flashes of lightning, fell at Byculla, Kalbadevi, and other parts of the Native town about eight o'clock on Saturday evening. Last night again there was heavy rain.

MR. C. P. COOPER took over charge yesterday of the office of Chief Presidency Magistrate, and disposed of the ordinary petty morning cases, which, however, were unusually numerous, owing to the courts having been closed for the last three days.

THE Indian Planter's Gazette thus delivers its soul on the backslidings of the Bombay Municipality:—"It is satisfactory to find Dr. Gaye putting his foot down on the apathy of Bombay as regards providing a race-course fit for use once a year. If the Bombay Municipality would only abstain from their childish bickerings as to who should have a penny whistle suspended from his neck by a silver chain and be addressed as 'His Wash'up'—on the lucus a non lucendo principle, because they totally ignore the necessity of washing up the filth at Mahaluxinee—and directed their attention to providing a suitable track for racing, they would at any rate earn the thanks of Bombay sportsmen instead of making themselves the laughing-stock of India."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 7.)

THE Punjab Sanitary Commissioner's Report offends Government, because it is too long. Fifty-seven printed pages, exclusive of statistics, is the offending, and twenty-five pages the desired, length, within which latter limit it is asked that future reports may be kept.

THE Honorary Secretary of the Lady Aitchison Hospital for Women at Lahore has received a donation of one thousand rupees to the Endowment Fund from His Highness the Nawab of Bahawalpur. This is the second donation the Nawab has made to the funds of the association, having given Rs. 3,000 to the Building Fund in 1886.

TRAVELLING merchants arrived at Peshawar say that there have been movements of Russian troops recently on both the Herat and Balkh frontiers for the ostensible twofold reason of change of locality in consequence of sickness, and for the purpose of protecting the Russian border against probable aggression by contending parties in Afghanistan.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—NOVEMBER 20.

INDIAN COLONELS' ALLOWANCES.

MR. KING asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether Indian colonel's drawing colonels' allowances who resided in any of the French, Portuguese, or Dutch settlements in the neighbourhood of British India could draw their allowance in sterling, through their attorney in London, as permitted to do if resident in Ceylon; and, if not, why not.

SIR J. GORST: No application from any Indian colonel residing in any French, Portuguese, or Dutch settlement in the neighbourhood of British India to draw his allowance in sterling has been made to the Secretary of State. Such an application if made would receive due consideration.

THE BURMA RUBY MINES.

MR. HANBURY asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, looking to the magnitude of the concession in the case of the Burma ruby mines, and to the fact that it had already once been put up to open competition, he could state the precise procedure which the India Office would adopt as to the final hour for sending in tenders, the persons in whose presence tenders were to be opened, and other precautions for securing the fairest possible and most public competition.

SIR J. GORST: Tenders will, according to advertisement, be received at the India Office up to midnight on November 21. No envelope which is known to contain a tender will be opened until noon on the 22nd, and they will then be opened in the presence of the Under Secretaries of State.

SIR G. CAMPBELL: Is it intended to give a monopoly of the ruby mines to a firm in London and to deprive the natives of their rights of searching for rubies?

SIR J. GORST: No, Sir, as has already been stated, native rights will be in no way infringed.

Nov. 22.

THE DECCAN MINING COMPANY.

SIR G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether Her Majesty's Government proposed to take any action with reference to the last two paragraphs of the report of the Select Committee on the Deccan Mining Company, setting forth the evils attending the direct access of London speculators to the Ministers of Indian Native States; whether, in fact, direct negotiations had since been going on between the Nizam's Ministers and the Deccan Mining Company; whether Her Majesty's Government would interfere in the matter, and avoid the difficulty pointed out by the Committee by taking their full share of responsibility; and whether, in case in that and other matters direct communications took place between Native Governments and British speculators, the latter would be warned that they were to expect no assistance whatever from the British Government in enforcing their claims.

SIR J. GORST: The report referred to has been sent to the Government of India, and until their reply has been received the Secretary of State considers it premature either to express any opinion or take any action upon it. The Secretary of State is aware, as I have already stated in reply to a question, that proposals relating to the Deccan Mining Company are now under the consideration of the Nizam's Government of Hyderabad, in consultation with the Resident. The hon. member will deduce from my reply to the first question that I cannot at present give any pledge as to the action the Secretary of State will take.

Nov. 23.

REMISSIONS OF REVENUE IN INDIA.

MR. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Madras Government and the Government of India had received memorials from Mirasdars of Thatthimoolai, Nannilam, Talug, Tanjore, alleging that certain remissions of revenue had been improperly cancelled, such remission having been made to the village, pursuant to the Revenue Regulations, by the Head Assistant Collector, after due inspection, in consequence of the great damage and suffering caused by the repeated heavy floods destroying the crops; and whether the Government would take any action in the matter?

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State for India has not received any information or reports concerning the memorials referred to, nor has any representation on the matter reached him. As at present advised, the Secretary of State does not propose to take any action in the matter; but he will draw the attention of the Madras Government to the hon member's question.

THE SIKKIM EXPEDITION.

The following memorandum has been circulated by the Press Commissioner as an authoritative statement of facts relating to Sikkim affairs:—

More than three years ago the question of our relations with Tibet and the advantages to be expected from establishing commercial intercourse with that country were pressed on the consideration of the Indian Government. As it would have been impolitic to proceed in the matter without first securing the assent of the Chinese, it was recommended as a preliminary measure that an officer from India should be sent to Peking to explain the circumstance to Her Majesty's Ambassador, and through him to the Chinese authorities.

The Government of India, while fully alive to the importance of the matter, saw that there were strong objections, and they doubted whether it should be taken up, at all events until the then existing complications in Central Asia were at an end; but the Home authorities, seeing that the Chinese Government were then well-disposed, and that the Legation in London were also favourable to the proposal, thought it very undesirable to lose so good an opportunity, and decided on deputing Mr. Colman Macaulay, who at the time was on leave in England, to arrange matters at Peking with the Tsungli Yamen. The preliminary negotiations with the Chinese Government proved successful, and passports for a proposed British Mission to Lassa, as well as official instructions to the Tibetan authorities, were duly granted, on the understanding that the object of the Mission would be limited to the opening of commercial intercourse with India.

While the necessary preparations were in train, rumours reached the Government of India that the Tibetans, who from the beginning had not received with favour the idea of a mission visiting their country, were preparing to oppose its progress. In July 1886 a party of about 300 Tibetans crossed their frontier, and constructed a fort at Lingtu, a place upon the Darjiling-Tibet-road within Sikkim territory. Apparently alarmed at the hostile feeling evoked, the Chinese Government now earnestly requested that the mission should be countermanded. As the advantages to be gained from a further advance seemed doubtful, while China had shown a friendly spirit in other quarters, Her Majesty's Government decided that the mission should not proceed. It was then hoped that whatever might be the case of the popular feeling in Tibet, the abandonment of the project, when known, would restore things to their former condition. This hope, however, was disappointed, for instead of withdrawing the garrison from Lingtu, the Tibetans continued to strengthen their position there, and to interfere with traders passing into Tibet. They were a menace and a source of irritation and unrest to the peaceful people of Sikkim, and even to those within our own border in the Darjiling district.

Sikkim is an Indian Feudatory State, under the protection of the British Government, and bound by a Treaty of 1861 not to allow any foreign power to send troops into its territory. It was therefore clearly impossible to acquiesce in the occupation of Lingtu, but in order to avoid a collision with the Tibetans, the Government of India at first contented itself with notifying to the Maharaja of Sikkim the abandonment of the Mission; pointing out to him his apparent violation of the Treaty; and requiring him to insist on the withdrawal of the Tibetan force beyond the Jelap Pass. But neither this communication nor the subsequent stopping of the Maharajah's allowance produced any effect.

There can be no doubt that the crest of the Jelap Pass has always been recognised as the point up to which Sikkim jurisdiction extends. European and other foreign travellers have been allowed by the Tibetans to go as far as this without interference. It is there that a placard was posted up indicating the right of the Tibetan authorities to stay further progress; and on the Sikkim side of the Pass the Tibetans have declined to intervene in any dispute on the ground that it was beyond their limits. Furthermore, the British Government has been at the trouble and expense of making a road up to the crest of the Pass, to establish communication between Tibet and Darjiling, and their action in so doing was never previously questioned.

However, the Sikkim Maharaja, who is the son of a Tibetan mother, and has long been under Tibetan influence, remained at Chumbi, in Tibet, in opposition to treaty stipulations, and disregarded all invitations to return.

It would have been easy to have turned the Tibetan garrison out of Lingtu at the onset, but the Government of India desired to do nothing which could be construed as an attempt to force a passage into Tibet, and they acted in this matter with the greatest caution and forbearance. Steps were taken both at Peking and on the frontier itself to induce the garrison to retire peacefully, and it was not until the end of last year, after the Tibetans had been in Sikkim for over eighteen months, and it had been clearly shown that the influence of the Chinese Government was insufficient to bring about their peaceful withdrawal, that the Government of India decided to take the matter into their own hands.

A letter of warning was then written to the officer in command of the Tibetan troops, saying that unless he evacuated his position before March 15 he would be expelled by force. This letter was returned unopened, the messenger being informed that the Tibetan Government did not allow its servants to receive any communication from the British. The letter was then forwarded to the Tibetan frontier officers by another route, but it was not answered. In February 1888 another effort was made to avert hostilities by writing direct to the Dalai Lama. He was told that unless his troops retired within their own frontier before March 15, the British Government should be constrained to make good by force its treaty rights in Sikkim. But even then the Dalai Lama was assured that, if force had to be employed for this purpose, the British Government had no intention, unless further provoked, of sending troops into Tibet, or of pressing on the Tibetan Government any trade convention which they did not wish to accept. No answer was received, and as the Tibetans remained in occupation of the road, the Government were at last compelled to move against them. A small force was accordingly sent forward, and the enemy were ejected with little resistance. This, however, was not the end of the difficulty. Shortly afterwards the Government of India received from various sources information to the effect that the Tibetans were not disposed to acquiesce in their defeat, and that a large body of men was being assembled to invade Sikkim. These reports turned out to be well founded, and in May last the Tibetans began to show themselves in considerable strength in the passes near our position. On the 23rd they attacked our troops at Gnatong, but were repulsed with loss, and retreated across the border. The Government of India took advantage of this opportunity to send another letter expressing their anxiety to avoid extreme measures, and their readiness to consider any overture the Tibetans might wish to make. This attempt also failed. No answer was sent, but the letter was returned to the Raja of Sikkim, who informed the Government that it was not the Tibetan custom to receive letters. In the meantime it became evident that a fresh attack was being concerted, and this time the gathering was much larger than before. Reports were received which showed that men were being summoned from the most distant parts of the country, even from the districts bordering on Kashmir. Such was the aspect of affairs that in the month of August it was thought desirable to send up to Sikkim a reinforcement of 500 Gurkhas. From that time throughout September our troops were prevented by rain and mist from making any movement against the enemy, who now amounted to more than 10,000 men, who were threatening our outposts; but towards the end of the month the weather improved and General Graham was able to use his troops with effect. He attacked on the 24th and completely routed the Tibetans, killing several hundreds, and driving the rest over the passes. On the 26th he advanced to the Tibetan town of Chumbi, which, however, was evacuated the next day; and on the 27th our troops returned to our own border.

Since then Mr. Paul, the Political Officer attached to General Graham's force, has made such efforts as were in his power to open negotiations with the Tibetans, and he has been informed that the Chinese Resident at Lhasa will shortly meet him. When this meeting occurs it may be hoped that, with the aid of the Chinese, who throughout this affair have shown very good feeling towards England, the difficulties of the position may be overcome, and that the Tibetans may be induced to abstain from further acts of aggression, if not to consent to the opening of friendly intercourse between the two countries.

TELEGRAMS from China and Japan give very gloomy prospects for the Bombay yarn market there. Stocks have accumulated to an unusually large quantity, with drooping rates and anxious sellers. Prices have again receded from half a dollar to one per bale, with limited sales. Advices received by the last mail report losses to shippers, who had purchased yarn at high rates two or three months ago.

SREEMUTTY KRISTOROMONEY DOSSEE v. MAHARAJAH NORENDRO KRISHNA BAHADOOR AND OTHERS.

This was an important appeal from a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court of Bengal (consisting of Chief Justice Petheram and Mr. Justice Macpherson) on December 16th, 1886.

Mr. J. Graham, Q.C., and Mr. Doyne (with them Sir Horace Davey, Q.C.), appeared for the appellant; Mr. Rigby, Q.C., and J. D. Mayne for some of the respondents; and Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. Pitt-Kennedy for others.

The appellant, a Hindoo lady, sued the respondents, who are of the same family, to have the will, dated March 25th, 1851, of her father, the Maharajah Indubendro, who died in 1852, construed and the rights of all parties under it declared. The will was in the English language and form. In the first part the testator made provision for his mother, and in the latter part for a mistress, and he disposed of his horses and carriages and nominated his executors. The residuary devise was as follows:—"I give, devise, and bequeath the residue of my real and personal estate, both joint and self-acquired, unto my executors in trust to pay the rents, issues, profits, and income thereof unto my said daughter during her lifetime, and after her death in trust to pay, assign, and convey the residue of my estate, real, and personal, to my half-brothers, Rajahs Nreepaender Krishna Bahadoor and Nurrendra Krishna Bahadoor, in equal moieties, and to the heir or heirs male of their or either of their body, in failure of which in trust to give the same to the son or sons of my said daughter. I give, devise, and bequeath unto the son of my said daughter, if only one, the sum of Company's rupees 5,000, and if more than one, the sum of Company's rupees 5,000 each, to be paid to him or them on his or their attaining the age or respective ages of twenty years. I give, devise, and bequeath unto the daughter of my said daughter, if only one, the sum of Company's rupees 2,000, and if more than one the sum of Company's rupees 2,000 each, to be paid to her or them on her or their attaining the age or respective ages of sixteen years, and the sum of Company's rupees 1,000 on the occasion of the marriage of each of the daughters of my said daughter." The testator left at his death no child but the appellant. She was then married, but had no issue. Since her father's death six sons had been born to her. The testator also had two half-brothers, Nreependro Krishna and Norendro Krishna, living, who had sons. Nreependro Krishna died in 1835. The appellant then instituted the present suit, contending that on the death of Nreependro one moiety of her father's estate vested in her in possession for the estate of a Hindoo daughter, subject only to her life estate in the entirety, and that the trusts and limitations of the will became void and of no effect as to that moiety. Two of the respondents—the sons of the late Nreependro—contended that the two half-brothers took under the will an absolute interest in the testator's estate, subject to the appellant's life estate and subject also to be divested in case Nreependro Krishna and Norendro Krishna should die without leaving an heir or heirs male of their or either of their body. And they also contended that if it should be considered that the half-brothers of the testator did not take such an absolute estate, then they, as having been in existence at the death of the testator, were the proper objects of the gift in the will—viz., "to the heir or heirs male of their or either of their body." The High Court held that the will might be read as carrying out what they considered to be the true intention of the testator, which was that, in the event of his two half-brothers having at the time of their death male descendants, that they, if alive, or their families as representing them, if dead, should take the fee of the property, but that in the event of their having no male descendants at the time of their death the estate should be divested, and go over to the son or sons of his daughter. They thought that the appellant had not established her right to absolute possession of one moiety of her father's estate, and that the only right she had, under her father's will, was the right which she then enjoyed of receiving the rents and profits of the estate during her life. They dismissed the suit, and ordered the parties to pay their own costs. From that decree the present appeal was brought.

Lord Hobhouse now delivered the judgment of their Lordships, and, after narrating the circumstances, said their Lordships were of opinion that the decree should be discharged so far as it declared the rights of the parties and so far as it dismissed the suit. Instead of the portion discharged, there should be declarations that, according to the true construction of the will, the gift of the residue, so far as it purported to confer an estate of inheritance on the testator's half-brothers and the heirs male of their bodies, was contrary to law, and was void; (2) that in the events which had happened the gift to the sons of the appellant (the testator's daughter) was incapable of taking effect; (3) that each of the testator's half-brothers took an estate for his life in one moiety of the residue in remainder expectant on the death of the appellant; and (4) that on the death of Nreependro Krishna, the appellant became entitled absolutely to one moiety of the residue. The High Court should place her in possession of that moiety and should take steps to effect a partition if either of the parties desired it. As regarded costs, the High Court thought it just that the several parties should bear their own. Their Lordships thought that the rights of all parties under that perplexing will could not have been settled, as by this decree they would be, without bringing before the Court all parties for whom the will expressly designed gifts, or who by a reasonable construction could claim them. The suit or some like suit was absolutely necessary, and it was not too extensively framed. The case was one in which it was just to pay the costs of all parties out of the residue in dispute. The decree, therefore, should be varied on that point also. In all other respects it should be affirmed. Their Lordships would deal in the same way with the costs of that appeal. They would humbly advise Her Majesty in accordance with that opinion.

THE CORPS OF COMMISSIONAIRES.

Sir Edward Walter has addressed the following letter to the Times :—

Sir,—Six months having elapsed since my letter to the Times announcing the establishment of the first colonial division of the corps at Sydney, there has been ample opportunity of forming a correct opinion as to our future prospects. The usual weekly reports show a continuous progress, and the rate of wages is extremely satisfactory, the average earnings of each commissionaire exceeding £2 10s. per week, or 75 per cent. above the home tariff.

The cost of living is about the same as in England, house-rent and clothing being exceptionally dear. In this respect, however, our men are at no great disadvantage, as we have established our barracks, and the uniforms are supplied from this country. We have had only one difficulty to contend with—viz., an adequate supply of properly qualified men. This, however, is a matter which I hope will shortly be remedied now that I am in a position to publish the facts derived from the working of the first half-year.

I have always relied on India as our main source of supply, and my principal object in addressing you is to point out to the "time-expired men" who are about to leave that country the advantages which Australia offers to all able-bodied men of first-class character and abilities. We could at once admit fifty men of the proper stamp, and, as the necessary qualifications for admission are well known to all regiments now serving in the East, I shall be glad to hear that Major Hawkins, whose address is 10, Post Office-chambers, Sydney, has enrolled the number of men he requires for present purposes.

There is no want of good wages for everyone who has a good day's work to offer in exchange, besides which there are innumerable openings for men of special energy and attainments; added to this, the advantages for men with large families are such as cannot be offered in an overstocked market like England.

I have recently transferred to a bank at Sydney the savings-bank balances (£300) of the ten men who left England to form the nucleus of our first division. A further sum of the same amount has just been placed upon deposit, arising mainly from the additional men on our roll. I calculate our average yearly savings-bank deposit in Australia will be £10 per head, being four times the home rate. If my opinion proves correct every 100 commissionaires will be adding £1,000 annually to the available working capital of the colony, thus extending its power of trade and employment, and consequently assisting the further development of the corps. Besides this estimate of capital, I reckon that each commissionaire landing in a colony brings with him in the form of pension or deferred pay an average sum of £150.

What he adds in the shape of good habits and manners I will leave the Australian employers to decide. So far their verdict has been decisive, and I avail myself of the present occasion to thank them for the cordiality and liberality with which they have welcomed the members of the corps. With respect to the cost of the voyage to Australia, the Indian Government pay the whole expenses of any time-expired soldier and his family wishing to settle there in place of returning to Europe. As regards men at home, the Government advance pensioners two quarters' pension, and the reservist has ample cash at his disposal on the termination of his agreement.

There is consequently no financial difficulty whatever as far as the ex-soldier is concerned, and some very good men have recently left England at their own expense for the purpose of joining the Sydney division. I shall be glad if any officers in India who may see this letter will communicate its purport to any men of high character who have decided to leave the service. I always counsel good men to remain for pension but if the attractions of the army are insufficient for the purpose, then I say, "Advance on Australia."—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD WALTER.

NIGHT IN A FRONTIER JUNGLE.

To the "second-rate sensitive mind" there is perhaps no keener feeling of isolation possible than that which creeps up when the sun sets behind the mountains and the land grows dark. When a man is surrounded by trackless jungles and knows that there is not another white man for miles around him, the horizon towards evening seems to move up and engulf the sun, while the place where he stands seems to be sinking with him "down through infinite depths in the darkness." No glorious twilight! No day dying slowly into silence! A few golden streaks in the west; a few long cold shadows, and then the gloom softens that fixed gaze without sight, and rouses the senses to the fact that it is night. Night, but not stillness! From the thousand recesses of impenetrable gloom burst the maddening voices of the insect world, most maddening among which is the cricket's shrill, ceaseless shriek. If any torture of hell could by reason of its cruelty move the torture-fiend to pity, it would be that which forces men to listen for ever to the incessant sound of one note piercing through brain and fibre, muscle and nerve, backwards, forwards, till every particle of the mind and brain is quivering and writhing with it, till the whole body tingles with it, till every part of the brain becomes but the string on which the keynote of the system vibrates. Then, again, the silence of the night, which the ear loves listening to, is rudely broken by the echoing endless thump of the night-jar, as with the regularity of a machine it brings its pickaxe down for ever and ever on to aerial ice, or by the chorus of the frogs, as they echo and re-echo their mournful monosyllabic croak, or by the unearthly howl of the jackal, like the sound of a soul in pain, a cry, ringing through the night louder and louder, until, like the soul, it suddenly sinks into darkness, as "when a lamp is blown out by a gust of wind at a casement."

Then through the midst of these myriads of disembodied souls lifting up their hopeless, helpless voices to Infinity, and praying that "they might be so blest as to die" floats the spirit of light and hope, of all the night insects the most beautiful; the firefly, moving as Christ moved through the regions of departed spirits, the beacon of the hope that "beyond the sunset's golden bars, beyond the silence of the stars," and "beyond these voices there is rest."

And now, rolling through the voices of the night, comes a far-off rumble from the south, where, shining blacker against the blackness, are heaped up the clouds of the coming storm. An almost imperceptible shiver seems to creep through the jungle. The leaves are hardly moving, and yet they are trembling as if in fright at the first blast of the trumpet of the storm. A few minutes more and a puff of cool air, intensely delicious after the suffocating heat, sends a deep-drawn sigh through the whole length of the jungle, as it gently stirs the leaves. Then a flash of lightning for a second of time turns night into day, and photographs on the brain the whole scene, now again hidden in a darkness doubly intensified for the momentary light. The air has become cooler; and a sudden gust of wind, short, sharp, and angry, drives through the night, shaking only the leaves of the trees of the forest and the thin topmost branches, but imparting a gentle swaying motion to the separate bamboo jungle, a motion which makes itself felt to the ear as the wind sweeps in a wave through the graceful stems, bowing them like a field of corn, and then dying away in the distance. Far off can be heard the rain, hurling itself in great drops on to the thick foliage. Nearer and nearer comes the sound like the rush of some mighty waters which, after breaking through their dam, are heard tearing down a valley. The sky is one almost continuous blaze of lightning. The thunder, now crashing and pealing, now rumbling and roaring, has silenced the insect voices. The rain is upon us. It has come like some great wave on the shore, which, lifting itself for its final plunge, breaks at last "with a stamp, with a rush, with a roar." The wind has increased to a hurricane. The mighty trees themselves are now bending and groaning in their agony. Through the thinner jungle the wind 'whistles and blusters through bamboo clusters.'

And the rain still goes on, sweeping through the darkness, and the fireflies have left the departed souls to their misery "in the dead unhappy night, and when the rain is on the roof."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

TACTICS AND ORGANISATION.*

"In England," says Captain Maude, "a civilian House of Commons interferes so largely, and a non-militaire Press criticises so freely, details and movements which it requires a certain degree of military education to grasp." In these circumstances it is obviously advisable that such persons should be familiar with, at least, the elementary principles of the subject upon which they are always prone to pass their opinion. It is no less clear to the meanest capacity that what is written must be suited to the limited intellects of the individuals concerned—limited, that is, of course, as regards professional topics. In other matters are they not all that a grateful nation should worship and admire? For such "leaders of thought" Captain Maude's most admirable treatise is just what is required. It is absolutely free from all learned and technical phrases. The explanations are so clear, so simple, so plain, that even the typical vestryman, arrayed in a "little brief authority" at Westminster, can follow the author's arguments; and, what is, perhaps, more to the purpose, strutt in the House as a great authority on a subject of which he knows next to nothing.

There is, however, another class to whom these remarks do not apply. The allusion is to the numerous eager inquirers who are anxious to ascertain the sources of our strength, and the causes of our weakness—calm, reflective searchers after truth, ready to recognise national faults, but no less proud to dwell upon national virtues. To such—and it may be hoped they are neither few nor far between—Captain Maude's volume will afford matter for serious reflection and careful consideration. The scales are held with an impartial hand. There is neither optimism nor pessimism, and assuredly the gifted author is not one of the miserable clique who are "friends of every country but their own." But neither, on the other hand, is he content to live in a fool's paradise of fancied security. He can see and probe the errors which find favour with the authorities; he can proclaim our shortcomings, and dwell with emphasis upon the mistakes of those to whom are entrusted the destinies of the nation; and it would be well if some of his remarks and suggestions were to find favour in high places.

Lastly, there is the general public. As a rule works of this nature do not—indeed, are not supposed to—appeal to the general run of everyday readers; but in this instance we are tempted to think Captain Maude's essays must be considered an exception to the rule. His style is so vigorous, his language so plain and unmistakable, his narrative so full of "verve," that an hour or two might, with advantage, be spent in conning over his suggestions, and pondering over the remedies he propounds. On the whole, Captain Maude may be most warmly congratulated upon the production of a book, of which, disagreeing as we do with some of his conclusions, we are glad to speak, as it deserves, in terms of the most unstinted and ungrudging praise.

MODERN TACTICS.†

There was a time when the army was officered by men who knew how to fight, but did not know how to pass examinations—mais tout cela est changé. As a sop to democracy a show is made that the prizes of the service are thrown open to merit, and this latter commodity is professedly judged by the number of marks a poor, wretched, wizened, overworked student can manage to scrape together. Of physique, devil, dash, and daring there is no test; all that is left to chance. So long as "my people love to have it so" candidates for the army must take the world as they find it. If the authorities want "spectacles and shallow cheeks" why our sons must over-study till they are half blind, and their constitutions are ruined; and to do this text-books must be written. Hence the appearance of Captain Gall's Manual on "Modern Tactics," designed primarily for the use of students who want—indeed, who have—to pass in that branch of knowledge.

It must, however, in all fairness, be admitted that if our soldiers are to be not fighting machines, but animated masses of intellectual capacity, no branch of study is likely to be of more general utility than that of which Captain Gall treats. Tactics form the basis of all military science; without a knowledge thereof a general can only win a battle by sheer pluck and devilry—characteristics but too little cultivated in these days, when a man is shot before he can even see the gun which is firing. The work under review is plain and intelligible. It appeals rather to the ordinary intelligence of the reader than to mere professional learning, and is therefore suited to the many who want to master a subject which is generally treated from a most technical standpoint. The work needs no commendation—the name and repute of its author will stand sponsor for its value; and we heartily wish him the success which his professional skill, good sense and literary acumen most fully entitle him to expect.

WORKS PUBLISHED BY THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROMOTION OF CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

“St. Athanasius,” by the Rev. R. Wheler Bush, M.A.—This admirable volume gives a clear and extremely interesting account of the great father of the Church, who stood forward at a time of considerable peril, and did combat with the heresy of Arianism which threatened to overwhelm Christendom in an ocean of ruin. The work will well repay perusal.

“Chats about the Church,” by F. G. Browne, contains in a small compass the best explanation we have seen as to the history of the Church, its aims and its methods.

“Illustrated Notes on English Church History,” by the Rev. C. Arthur Lane.—A most useful book of reference. There is much that is interesting, and it is full of instruction. Indeed, little, if anything, bearing upon the history of the Church is omitted. Each and everything is plainly told and clearly explained.

“The Diocese of Mackenzie River,” by Bishop Pompas, is one of the most excellent works which has appeared of late. It teems with information, is full of much [that is calculated to interest the general reader, and if its circulation be equal to its merits, the sale would be enormous.

“Cloudy Days,” by the Rev. F. Bourdillon, M.A., is well adapted to the purpose for which it was written, viz., to afford consolation in the time of trouble.

“The Holy Seasons of the Church,” illustrated, by E. Beatrice Coles.—This beautiful little compilation consists of some of the most lovely of the Church's compositions, and the illustrations are as chaste and pure as the hymns are sweet and soothing. As a Christmas gift few presents of moderate aspirations could be more appropriate.

Star Atlas,” by Dr. H. J. Klein. Translated and adapted for English readers by E. McClure, M.A.—To criticise the Star Atlas is scarcely within the compass of an “unprofessional” journal; nor is it necessary. The name of its author, Dr. Klein, is sufficient guarantee as to its accuracy, and the clearness and brightness of the numerous plates with which it is embellished leave nothing to be desired.

“A Manual of Parochial Work,” edited by the Rev. John Ellerton.—It would be difficult to speak in terms of too high praise of this most admirable compendium. Everything that can interest and influence the parish clergyman finds place, and explanation within the modest compass of its valued pages. Primarily designed for the use of the young clergy, none, irrespective of age, can fail to find therein instruction, reproof, and guidance.

“The Dawn of Day,” “My Soldier's Keeper,” “Bob Nixon,” “Whiter than Snow,” and “The Children of Blencarn Ghyll,” are all eminently readable, and what more can be expected when prices are reckoned in pence?

“Fire-flies and Mosquitoes,” by F. Frankfort Moore, is a capital book for boys. The voyage in the yacht, which it narrates, is at once interesting and instructive. Some, too, of the encounters are exciting, and the characters depicted are drawn with considerable skill and effect. But what can have induced its author to put into the mouth of one of the characters the disloyal sentiment that “The Government of Great Britain spends about £80,000,000 a-year upon its army and navy, and other kindred matters, which do not profit the country in any way?” What, my dear Messrs. S.P.C.K., was your “reader” about when he passed this anti-patriotism?

“The Stepmother's Will, or the Two Brothers,” by A. Eubule Evans, is an excellent book for a village club. It shows the value in a parish of a clear-minded, hard-working parson; and dwells with force and effect upon the misery which too often follows in the wake of the country public-house. The illustrations, also, are by no means devoid of talent.

“Brotherhood” deals with some topics which merit more attention than they receive. It is admitted on all hands that free public libraries are an immense boon to the poor; but is it worldly wisdom to close them a full hour earlier than the public-houses? Then the establishment of clubs is in itself unobjectionable; but is not the opportunity of meeting together thus afforded oftentimes used to race, bet, and gamble in a variety of forms, which differ only in badness? Such are some of the topics which come to the front in this very readable little tale.

“Roger Fildyke's Secret,” by Mary E. Gellie, is carefully and well preserved. When, in due course, it does ooze out, through the malevolence of a foe, the blow was crushing, and indicative of the truth of the adage that “Sin is sure to find you out.” The work is pretty, without pretension, and calculated alike to please and instruct.

“Almost a Pauper,” by E. Bentoul Esler, shows in their brighter aspect those traits of kindness and gentleness of soul which are as much—perhaps, indeed, more so—the heritage of the poor as the rich. It tells of a noble minded “waif and stray,” and it proclaims that the struggle of life can be successful, however humble the sphere, however insignificant the hero.

“Marjory's Husband,” by J. Nash, deals with the fact that there are noble, self-sacrificing characters in the very humblest paths of life. The story, which is strangely pathetic and replete with instruction, demands a more than ordinary modicum of praise.

“Book of Counsel for Girls,” by Mary Bell, is strictly religious in its nature and aim. It is written by a lady evidently familiar with the inner workings of the hearts of her own sex. She knows the weaknesses, the dangers, the difficulties with which women have to contend, and she has given good and honest counsel in a way calculated to achieve the end for which it was penned.

“Abbotsmid,” by C. E. M., is a pretty little tale, with no attempt at high writing. It commends itself by the simplicity of the narrative, and the high moral aim with which it was penned.

THE PRICE OF EDUCATION.—Commenting on the introduction of the new educational policy on the Punjab, a contemporary writes:—“The native has a high appreciation of the advantages of higher education for his sons when it costs him nothing. He will even send them to Missionary Colleges, where they must submit to a certain amount of Christian teaching, and run a certain risk—a very infinitesimal risk, it would appear, but still a risk—of conversion to Christianity, which his relatives would regard as a serious calamity. The great attraction, which overcomes religious scruples, is that the education afforded by the Missionary colleges is good—and cheap. Eager as they are to take advantage of such facilities as the mistaken policy of the Government and of the missionaries has hitherto afforded, the natives will not, as a rule, pay the fees necessary to support the independent educational institutions, where their sons might enjoy instruction in their own religion. The very meagre response to the appeal for subscriptions towards the proposed National Hindu College at Madras is a striking illustration of the small value the average Native really places upon education, when he has to pay for it.”

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigné's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL. F&S. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltameter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

IN MEMORIAM.

WILLIAM GEORGE PEDDER, C.S.I.

MORE than a quarter of a century ago—the year was 1856, just twelve months before the Mutiny, which burst upon an astonished and incredulous India—three striplings were contemporaries at the great classical seat of learning. Of these, two still live in the full career of usefulness and distinction; one, known to fame as Sir Charles Turner, at one time Chief Justice of Madras, and at present member of the Council of India; another, Sir J. B. Peile, after serving with distinction in various high offices in Bombay, is now a colleague of his legal companion at the same Board; a third, William George Pedder, has just passed to his long account, with a career less better known to the public at large, but no less distinguished as regards his possession of all those qualities which command alike success and admiration. By a strange destiny he, too, spent his closing years at the India Office, not, it is true, in the exalted sphere of Council, but in the more humble, and yet not one whit less responsible, capacity of Revenue Secretary. Perhaps, too, more strange than all, was the circumstance that two of the number, Sir J. Peile and Mr. Pedder, were shipmates together, and both landed at Bombay in the same eventful 1856.

From the outset of his career Mr. Pedder was attached to the Revenue side of the Administration, and during the first decade of his service, while being a Survey and Settlement Officer in Guzerat and the Deccan, he mastered, "the words are from the pen of the valedictory resolution on his retirement in 1879—the settlement system and the land tenures in both divisions, and so acquired an experience which has often been of the greatest use to the Government." But the first great work which left a mark on the annals of his time was the organisation of the last Department, a duty entrusted to him towards the close of 1869, and completed in 1871, in a manner to elicit the warmest commendation on the part of the authorities under whom he was serving. In the following year he was selected to fill the position of Municipal Commissioner of Bombay; and when, after the close of five twelvemonths, he resigned this office, a special resolution was passed by the Corporation in recognition of "the energy, ability, and untiring zeal with which he had laboured for the public welfare." Then followed some difficult and, at times, delicate duties in connection with the introduction of the Licence Tax, when once again he had the good fortune to secure the warm approval of the Government of Bombay.

In the ordinary course of events, with a past career of such usefulness and distinction, Mr. Pedder might fairly have looked forward to succeed to high position, and its concomitants of emolument and distinction. But destiny willed otherwise. Just at this time Sir Henry Anderson had died in harness at the India Office; and attracted, it is believed, by some remarkable articles in a London periodical on the difficult and little understood subject of Revenue tenures in India, the Secretary of State placed at his disposal the highly-important and no less arduous post of Revenue Secretary. Tempted by the opportunity of return to his native land which the offer placed at his feet, the Bombay Councillor in embryo bade farewell to the country of his adoption, and, shaking off the dust of distinction, settled down to do quiet, unostentatious work in a manner which betokened a master's hand and an expert's touch. It is not within the scope of this humble tribute to his memory to sing the praises of an admirable permanent official, or describe in detail his claims to respect during nine years of successful labour in the highest sphere of the service in which he laboured during thirty years of public life. It is enough to state that, when a few months ago failing health compelled the ex-Bombay civilian to seek in retirement that repose which, if anything, could restore to him the physical strength which hard and persistent work had sadly shattered, it was felt that the Secretary of State had lost an able and experienced adviser, and the public one of the most conscientious and laborious of the many officials who, for a comparative pittance, discharge duties which demand the possession of powers such as in more favoured spheres of life would command an income which a Government civilian only knows by hearsay.

To speak of Mr. Pedder from the standpoint of personal qualities is at once easy and grateful. He was the soul of honour: "tengiversation," "trimming," "coquetting," and such-like peculiarities of modern life were vices against which he recoiled with all the warmth of a most sensitive nature. His "yea" was "yea," and his "nay" "nay."

At times he may have been hasty, but any momentary cloud of temper soon passed away before the sunshine of his genial nature; and as the Times, in a sympathetic notice of his career, says to-day:—"To many the name of William Pedder will remain dear for his social and personal qualities, which were never better shown than by the courage and fortitude with which he resisted, and seemingly for a time repelled, the fell disease which struck him down two years ago, to the regret of his many friends and the loss of the public service of the country."

The India Office was largely represented on Saturday afternoon at Norwood Cemetery to do honour to the memory of Mr. Pedder, C.S.I., the late Revenue Secretary in that Department. Among those present at the funeral may be named Colonel Prescott (Mr. Pedder's father-in-law), Colonel Pedder, and other members of Mr. Pedder's family, while of Anglo-Indians and India Office officials there were Mr. Dawkins (representing Viscount Cross), Mr. Colin Campbell (representing Mr. Godley), Sir Owen Burne, Sir Juland Danvers, Sir George Birdwood, Sir Charles Turner, Sir James Peile, General Francis, Mr. Macpherson, late Judge of the Calcutta High Court, and Messrs. Wollaston, C.I.E., Wyllie, Hill, and Rogers.

BOMBAY has had its plague of mosquitoes. Calcutta has now its annual visitation of green flies. The pests are everywhere. In the Eden Garden their number is legion, and they not only annoy saunterers in that charming spot, but crowd into the instruments of the band, and wander into the mouths and down the throats of the performers. Calcutta, which is busy asking for commissions just now, might request the appointment of one on the green fly.

THE following changes are to take effect in the several account offices:—Mr. H. F. Clogstoun to be Accountant-General of Bombay. Mr. F. W. Rawlinson, at Madras; Mr. A. C. Tupp in the North-Western Provinces, and Oudh; Mr. G. W. Kellner, Deputy Comptroller and Auditor-General; Mr. C. R. Kiernander, Deputy Comptroller and Auditor-General of out-door audits; Mr. S. Jacob, Accountant-General of the Punjab; Mr. C. Vansittart, Assistant Accountant-General of Bengal; and Mr. T. Biggs, Comptroller of British Burma.

HOMEWARD TROOPSHIP "MALABAR."

H.M.S. Malabar, the third homeward troopship, sailed Nov. 9th, in command of Captain A. D. Fanshawe, with a total of troops amounting to 40 officers, with 14 ladies and 17 children and 1,046 rank-and-file, with 89 women and 101 children belonging to batteries of R.A., and various infantry corps that have most of them served out their time in India. The troopship will call at Aden during her voyage and there land from the above total 11 officers and about 250 men, chiefly made up of 6-1 and 7-1 Southern Division of Royal Artillery, who proceed thither to relieve the 5-1 Lancashire Division and 8-1 London Division R.A., at present stationed at that port. The latter two batteries making up 2 officers and 121 men with families will embark on the Malabar from Aden for home, the General Officer Commanding at that port arranging about the embarkation and debarkation of troops. The following are the names of officers and their families:—

THE EFFECT OF "FIRING" ON TEA.—Certain investigations have lately been made in Japan into the chemical effects on tea of the process called "firing" which it always undergoes. This is a kind of roasting, the tea being worked by the hands in pans or bowls heated from below. It takes place prior to packing for shipment, and usually under the superintendence of the foreign tea merchant, and is said to be necessary to preserve the tea on the voyage. The process, according to the investigations referred to, diminishes the capacity of the leaf to absorb moisture, the proportion of theine, and the quantity of tannin in solution when warm water is poured on the leaf. The latter is thus rendered less stringent, and on the whole, "firing," so far from producing deterioration, is pronounced a beneficial process, as it strengthens the aroma, diminishes the astringent quality of the leaf, and, by decreasing the quantity of theine—which is said to be to tea what alcohol is to liquors—decreases the effect of tea-drinking on the nervous system. The colour is also improved in consequence of the employment during "firing" of certain colouring matter. When the latter is a preparation of indigo, it is quite harmless, while Prussian blue is deleterious, and is said not to be used now for the purpose. The consumers insist on having tea with a certain colour on the leaf, and it is solely to please them that the colouring matter is employed. The investigators—two chemists—say that tea is very rarely coloured with any fraudulent intent, and they quote the remarks attributed to a Chinese Minister in Washington, to this effect:—"Our producers will give you tea with all the colours in the rainbow if you wish. But why will you drink coloured tea—what is the use of the colour? Be reasonable, like us Chinese; we use uncoloured tea, and we know why." The suggestion in the last sentence, say the chemists, is not correct. Tea is coloured because the consumers will have it so, not because it is of any advantage to the merchant or producer.

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number before us sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it has long held as the best service which is rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally dulle and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

BRADFIELD COLLEGE, BERKS.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

The numbers in this Public School have risen from 57 in 1882, to 165 in 1888.

Successes since 1880:—22 open scholarships and exhibitions at Oxford and Cambridge; also admissions to R.M.C., Sandhurst, and R.M.A., Woolwich; direct Commission: place in I.C.S. examination, &c., &c. Classical and modern sides; also a special Army Class. There is a College Rifle Corps. Age of admission from 12 to 18. Terms (Board and Tuition) 90 guineas per annum; for brothers and boys entering under 13, 80 guineas.

The PREPARATORY SCHOOL, under the Management of the Rev. W. A. HILL, M.A., late Scholar of Jesus College, Cambridge; and Mrs. HILL, combines many of the advantages of the College, e.g., teaching by University men in high honour, use of Tepid Swimming Bath, Five Courts, &c. with entire freedom from contact with older boys. Age of admission from 8 to 12.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 16th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 14th November; and from Calcutta to the 13th November.

THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA left Simla at 8.30 A.M. on the morning of 13th November. He was accompanied by the Marchioness of Dufferin, Lady Helen Blackwood, Lady Hermione Blackwood, Sir Donald Wallace, K.C.I.E., Private Secretary, Lieut.-Colonel Lord William Beresford, V.C., C.I.E., Military Secretary, Major H. Cooper, A.D.C., Surgeon Major J. Findlay, M.B., Surgeon to the Viceroy, Captain J. W. Currie, A.D.C. (relieved by Captain the Hon. G. Bingham at Patiala), Captain J. Henderson, A.D.C., Captain the Hon. G. Bingham, A.D.C. (joining at Patiala), Mr. J. McFerran, and Mr. H. M. Durand, C.S.I., Foreign Secretary.

NOLWITHSTANDING the early hour and the cold nearly everyone present in Simla assembled at Viceregal Lodge to bid farewell to their Excellencies. A guard of honour from the Simla Volunteers was drawn up opposite the grand portico, and was inspected by his Excellency, who expressed to Colonel Morton his thanks for their attendance, and his regret that it would be the last time he should have the pleasure of meeting them. Their Excellencies on leaving were loudly cheered by the large assembly present.

HIS EXCELLENCY was to lunch with Colonel N. St. L. Carter and the officers of the East Indian Volunteer Corps during the halt of the Viceregal train at Jalampur on the 22nd November.

THE MARCHIONESS OF DUFFERIN opened the Lady Aitchison Hospital for Women at Lahore on 15th November. The hospital provides accommodation for thirty-two patients, and cost Rs. 60,000, which amount was subscribed largely by Natives. The Viceroy visited the new Veterinary College building.

HIS EXCELLENCY is due at Bombay Dec. 12th, on the evening of which day he will attend a semi-official performance at the Gaiety Theatre. On the evening of the 13th he will be entertained at a banquet by the members of the Byculla Club, and on the afternoon of the 14th he will sail for Europe.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, accompanied by Sir Charles Dilke, Sir Robert Sandeman, and General Chesney, has visited several posts on the frontier, and subsequently set out from Quetta on a ten days' ride to the Derajat.

LORD CONNEMARA has returned to Madras, after completing his tour through South Canara, Malabar, Bellary, and the North Arcot districts.

H.E. LORD REAY is still at Mahableshwar.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN was to start on tour through Oudh, leaving Lucknow Nov. 24th. His Honour will make a complete circuit of the province, and expects to reach Unao about Feb. 11th.

THE HON. MR. SCOBLE has left Calcutta for Rangoon.

MR. MACKENZIE, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, goes into camp shortly. He will visit Nursingpur, and then, after the Viceroy has passed through, starts on a long march through the Jubbulpur and other districts.

It has been authoritatively intimated to the Government of India that Sir Lepel Griffin will not return to India.

SIR COMER PETHERAN AND MR. H. H. RISLEY have just returned from an interesting trip along the Nepal frontier, an account of which, illustrated by the aid of some magnificent photographs taken by Sir Comer, will appear in an early number of Harper's Magazine.

THE HON. MR. C. MACAULAY is shortly about to be placed on special duty. Mr. Cotton will act as Secretary in the Financial Department to the Bengal Government, and Mr. C. Buckland as Secretary to the Board of Revenue.

ON Colonel R. Parry Nisbet, C.I.E., making over charge of the Rawalpindi Division, in consequence of his appointment as Resident in Kashmir, Mr. J. Frizelle will officiate as Commissioner, and Mr. J. W. Gardiner will be appointed Divisional Judge, vice Mr. Frizelle.

MR. ROBERT SMEATON will for the present officiate for Mr. W. C. Benett, the latter officiating as Chief Secretary to the Government of the N.W.P. until the Hon. Mr. Woodburn returns from furlough.

MR. T. W. HOLDERNESS, at present officiating as Secretary to the N.W.P. Government in the Finance Department, will, on the return of Lieutenant-Colonel D. G. Pitcher from leave, assume the Directorship of Land Records and Agriculture.

MR. W. S. CAINE, M.P., who arrived in Bombay by last mail, has addressed several temperance meetings during the week.

THE P. and O. steamer Arcadia, which brought the last mail to Bombay, was two hours beyond the shortest passage, which was made by her sister ship the Victoria.

THE court-martial on Colonel Bulkeley is still proceeding at Mhow.

THE Crawford Commission is still sitting at Poona. The prosecution alleges that Rs. 10,000 were extorted from the Chief of the Bhose State. The President of the Commission advised the Prosecution to select a small number of representative cases from those believed to be strongest, and rest the case on these, as otherwise it would look like oppression on Mr. Crawford. The Prosecution asked time to consider the suggestion.

THE Mogoung expedition directed against the Kochins will probably start in the beginning of January.

A MISSIONARY correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette writes that Sawlapaw is preparing to resist the force to be sent against him, with some 10,000 men, of whom 2,700 are foresters. It is asserted that he intends poisoning all the wells.

SPECIAL measures are being taken against the Kachins west of the Yaw river, who of late have made severe raids.

EXCEPT for the attack by Kachmo on Mounng Man Taw's Karenni Guides in the Bhamo district, there has been little of interest during the week in that part of Burma.

THE lower Chindwin police pursued a gang of dacoits from Pagyi to Pakhangin, killing four, wounding two, as well as recovering all dacoited property, and capturing six guns.

THE villagers in Upper Chindwin resisted an attack by dacoits, and killed their leader.

THE Nimbu police surprised Ottama's Camp, killing Mingolo Bo, seized eight guns, and made two prisoners.

WITH reference to the disastrous accident which occurred on the Hughli river, Calcutta, on Nov. 6th, when the Mongolia was sunk by colliding with a steam tug, it is now reported that upwards of eighty persons were either drowned or killed by the bursting of the boilers of the ferry steamer at the moment of collision.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY picked men of the 9th Bengal Infantry have been placed in readiness to move to Chittagong in support of the police against expected raids.

COLONEL OMMANEY, Commandant of the 39th Bengal Infantry, arrived at Jhansi on Friday, Nov. 9th, having been ordered back from the Hazara expedition to explain certain irregularities in the regimental accounts.

CAPTAIN PARSONAGE, of the British India steamer Nevassa, was drowned at Rangoon on Nov. 9th.

HEAVY rain has fallen in Ahmedabad and other famine-stricken districts.

THE cotton prospects in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts are reported to be above the average.

THE new Jam of Lus Beyla will be installed before the close of the year.

SANCTION has been given for the construction of a broad gauge railway between Annand and Petlad in connection with the B.B. and C.I. Railway.

THE cyclone which passed within about 300 miles of Bombay was encountered by several steamers between that port and Aden, and several casualties are reported among native craft.

GRAVE fears are entertained as to the safety of the s.s. Vaitarna, owned by Messrs. Shepherd and Co. The steamer left Cutch-Mandvi, with some 900 passengers on the 8th November, and has not since been heard of, although she was due in Bombay on the following day. Other steamers belonging to the same company have been sent in search of her, but so far no trace of the missing steamer has been found.

SEPOY Nar Singh Saru, 2nd Battalion 1st Goorkha Light Infantry, has been admitted to the Third Class of the Order of Merit for conspicuous gallantry in having, on the Tukola Ridge, in Sikkim, on September 24th last, rushed forward and bayoneted one or two Tibetans who had attacked and cut down Lieutenant-Colonel Sir B. P. Bromhead, Bart., commanding the 32nd Pioneers, thereby saving that officer's life.

THE dangerous state of the road from Peshawur to Cabul is attributed to neglect of duty on the part of the Afghan officials responsible for certain parts of the route. As a consequence, robberies near Futteeabad and Jellalabad are frequent. Near the latter place the Shinwaris have succeeded in looting large Mohmand and Dawzai caravans: and the authorities are making arrangements for patrolling the road to and from Jellalabad with bodies of mounted men.

THE Afghans are naturally filled with wild stories about present arrangements in Afghanistan. The Ameer's departure from Cabul for Turkistan with a small army is attributed to a necessity for further military operations against Ishak; while the departure of the Ameer's stepmother with a large number of females from Cabul for Langu is magnified into a flight of the Ameer's family to safer quarters. At Cabul the Afghan still nurse doubts as to the reality of Ishak's defeat.

THERE is a current belief at Peshawur that the Amir may abandon his visit to Turkistan.

LARGE quantities of Snider ammunition are being sent up from Peshawur to Cabul to replenish the Amir's magazine.

MR C. J. VANSITTART was entertained at Allahabad on Nov. 10th to a farewell dinner by the members of the N.W.P. Club. About fifty gentlemen sat down to dinner, among those present being Sir John Edge, Mr. Justice Straight (who presided), Mr. F. W. Porter, Colonel Dodd, Mr. H. G. Cowie, Dr. Cameron, Mr. Conlan, Mr. G. E. A. Ross, Mr. C. H. Hill, Mr. G. W. Spankie, Mr. A. J.

Hughes, and Captain Digby. Telegrams were also read from Mr. A. Lawrence, Major Pulford, Mr. J. Alexander, and Major Beaver, expressing regret at their inability to be present. After dinner Mr. Straight proposed the health of Mr. Vansittart, alluding to the many services he had rendered to the club and the station, and in conclusion presented the guest of the evening with a handsome gold watch. The toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm, and Mr. Vansittart replied in appropriate terms.

THE rain which was so much needed in Orissa has at length come, and the prices of food-grains have begun to fall in consequence. There will, in all probability, be a scarcity in some districts; but the worst apprehensions of famine are apparently at an end. In other parts of India, also, rain has fallen within the last few days, so that on the whole agricultural prospects are decidedly improved.

NEW relief works have been sanctioned with a view to providing employment for the relief of those affected by the bad season in Guzerat. An extension of his Highness the Gaekwar's narrow gauge system for thirteen miles to the eastward and a branch from Annand to Petlad will be carried out. The former work has been already begun, and the latter will be taken in hand forthwith.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY has left Calcutta for Orissa.

THE Lieut.-Governor's party had two narrow escapes from serious accidents on their journey down. His Honour, accompanied by the two Misses Bayley, Mr. Colvin, and Sir Alfred Croft, left Darjeeling on Saturday, Nov. 17th., riding down the hill to Siliguri, via the Kalijori and Teesta road, and breaking the journey for the night at Kalijori. Soon after leaving the Rungaroon road, about eight miles from Darjeeling, Miss Bayley's horse got his hind legs over the khud, and, being unable to recover himself, both rider and horse fell from fifteen to twenty feet down, a tree breaking the fall and stopping the pony, while Miss Bayley went on another ten feet, but was quite unhurt.

LADY BAYLEY and the rest of the party left Darjeeling on Sunday, travelling by trolley. Soon after leaving Ghoom the trolley, going at a pace of about ten miles an hour, was thrown off the line by a stone, and the whole party precipitated out—fortunately without very serious results. Lady Bayley's hand was slightly damaged; Miss Farquharson got a severe blow over the eye; Mr. Prestage, the Manager of the Railway, who was driving the trolley, had his left shoulder dislocated, and the other occupants—Mrs. O'Brien, Captain Rawlinson, and Mr. Boileau—escaped scot-free. The trolley having been righted and not damaged, after half-an-hour's delay the ladies pluckily resumed their journey to Kurseong, where the injured were attended to.

THE Bengal Chamber of Commerce has appealed to the Government for a reduction of the postal rates on letters between England and India, asking that the rates of postage may be made approximate to the charges obtaining for Indian correspondence with foreign countries. The Government replied stating that it is "inexpedient, and, indeed, impossible," to make any change.

THE commercial outlook in Bombay is stated to be very promising just now. Several new cotton mills are to be begun at once, and no less than a dozen to sixteen are likely to be erected within the next two years. A number of Native firms have begun the importation of machinery for the manufacture of various articles hitherto exclusively brought from Europe, and some European firms are extending their operations.

THE net value of gold imported to India from the beginning of the official year to the end of September was Rs. 8,019,733, and that of silver imported was Rs. 4,00,89,430, making the total net imports of the precious metals Rs. 4,81,09,163. The assay value of coins and bullion received in the Indian Mints during the same period was Rs. 3,62,83,966, and of the same coined and examined Rs. 3,74,97,586.

NOTES.

THE most important news from India is that contained in the telegram from the Times Calcutta correspondent, which will be found in another column, and to which we have drawn notice editorially. As the correspondent points out, the necessity must have been great before so cautious a diplomatist as Lord Dufferin would commit himself to speak so openly in condemnation of the Indian National Congress, whose supporters in India and in England are doing their best to spread discontent and disloyalty broadcast. Lord Dufferin has spoken at an opportune moment, for the forbearance of his Government has been stretched to the very utmost. The hint that there is possibly a limit to that forbearance ought not to be without salutary effect on the minds of some of the agitators who have anything to lose by a display of disloyalty.

It will, of course, have little or no effect upon those who have anything to gain and nothing to lose by agitation so long as they do not come within the meshes of the law. But might it not be well for Mr. A. O. Hume, who continues to be the arch-agitator in India, to pause for a moment, and consider his own position? He is a retired Civilian of thirty years' active service, and is in receipt of a Government pension, which he, no doubt, draws regularly, and without any qualms of an irritating conscientiousness that he is taking money wrong by a tyrannical Government from a cruelly oppressed people. For Mr. Hume says that there is misery and misgovernment throughout India in every direction, "misgovernment that is the talk of leading men in every hamlet."

It may seem to be waste of breath and words to argue with a gentleman of Mr. Hume's calibre, but the Pioneer forces him on the horns of a dilemma. It says:—"For a good many years he was in charge of a Department under the Government of India which was specially entrusted with the material welfare of the people. Did he ever take advantage of his position and his exceptional opportunities for acquiring information to place his 'facts' before the Government of India? Can he point to a single instance in which he made stand against the evils which he now bewails? If he admits that he was blind to the truth until, like Lucifer, he fell from the heaven of office, does not this cast some doubt upon the value of his latest intellectual acquisitions? But, assuming his conversion sincere, and his hostility to the present order of things 'terribly earnest,' as he says, and 'serious,' how comes it that he still submits to the indignity of eating the bread of the Government he reviles? Would it not be manlier to disdain his pension, and to thus proclaim that his sentence is for open war?"

JUST so; but manliness of this kind does not always exhibit itself to the best advantage when it involves pecuniary sacrifices. As the Allahabad journal remarks, it is rather a singular commentary on the heart-rending descriptions indulged in by Congress men, of the brutal tyranny of the magistrates and the police, that no pensioner appears to have the slightest apprehension of pecuniary loss befalling him on account of seditious utterances. Lord Dufferin's speech on Friday last may, however, awaken a little disturbing attention on this point.

In the meantime the friends of Congress here continue to assist the mischief-making in India. The monthly magazine which calls itself The Voice of India, but is only the voice of those who think and say as the Congress agitators direct, declares that now Mr. Bradlaugh has spoken in favour of the establishment of the Indian Political Agency in England, "high hopes are entertained that the dumb millions of India will be more or less able to impress the weight of their grievances upon the deliberate consideration of the enlightened electors of the United Kingdom!" Fancy that! Bradlaugh the representative member for India! Could farce and falsehood go further?

RETIRED Anglo-Indian officials are evidently in favour with the givers of official good gifts here. Sir Henry Norman continues to sail upon that tide of good fortune which he took at the flood on the close of the Indian Mutiny. From the Governorship of Jamaica, where his rule has been very popular, he goes to govern Queensland—a post which he may not find to be a bed of roses. But he has tact and temper, and he and his amiable consort are likely to win their way very quickly to the hearts of the Colonists, notwithstanding their late fastidiousness regarding the selection of a Governor.

ANOTHER retired Anglo-Indian is Mr. Monro, C.B., who succeeds Sir Charles Warren, also not to a bed of roses. But Mr. Monro has already experience of the work required of him, and will do it well, in spite of the disapproval which the military journals have expressed of his appointment.

Is it the idea of the Government of India that Ireland is now a foreign country? The question is prompted by reading in the official Gazette that "The following officer has leave to Ireland"—a notification kept quite distinct from that notifying the granting of leave of absence to officers to England. Will the Congress Babus take it for granted now that Ireland has secured that Home Rule for which they say India pants?

THE QUEEN has been pleased to approve of the appointment of General Sir Henry W. Norman, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., C.I.E., now Governor of Jamaica, to be Governor of Queensland. General Norman served in the army at the siege of Delhi and the relief of Lucknow, and after being for eight years Military Secretary to the Government of India was appointed a member of the Council of the Viceroy. Seven years later he became a member of the India Council, and resigned that position in the following year on being appointed Governor of Jamaica.

MR. ST. WOOD, Inspector of Police in Tharrawaddy, Burma, who committed suicide by shooting himself, recently distinguished himself by capturing a notorious dacoit chief, and appears to have considered that he had been unjustly treated in not receiving promotion.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares on Saturday were steady. Mysore recovered 1-16. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3 7/16 to 9-16, Nundydroog 1 11-16 to 1 13-16, Indian Consolidated 5s. to 5s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (17s. 6d. paid) 10s. to 12s., ditto fully paid (£1) 13s. to 14s., Ooregum 29s. 6d. to 30s. 6d., ditto Preference 29s. to 31s., Devala-Moyar 4s. to 5s., Nine Reefs 11s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 7s. to 8s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s., South-East Mysore 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 to 1 1/2, New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., Wynaad Perseverance 2s. to 2s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d.

THE garrison of Burma will not in effect be numerically reduced this year, even after the withdrawal of the three Native infantry regiments, which are unreplaced in the programme of relief. The 1,800 men or so who will thus be taken from the regular establishment will be more than made up by the new local Levies, the raising of which has just been sanctioned by the Government of India. Recruited in India like the military police, and under the same organisation, and, generally terms of service, they differ from the latter in being destined for employment in a particular locality only. In difficult country like that of most of the Upper Burma frontier, where the neighbours are savage tribes, contemptible as adversaries, but requiring to be constantly looked after, it has been found that what is chiefly wanted is to have a force that shall know the ground and people, and be able to meet the latter in their own fashion. And this is obviously best secured by localisation. Seventeen companies are to be raised accordingly during the course of the cold weather, of which five will go to augment the levy that already exists in Mogoung, while the rest will be distributed between the Shan and Chin marches on the east and west of the new province.

(Times Correspondents.)

LORD DUFFERIN ON INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 2.

The great event of the week here has been the St. Andrew's dinner, which was celebrated on Friday with unprecedented brilliancy and in circumstances of unusual political importance. Sir Alexander Wilson presided. The departing Viceroy, who was the principal guest, took advantage of his last public appearance in Calcutta to express in weighty and statesman-like language an unqualified condemnation of the Native Congress agitation. This carefully considered remonstrance has the character of a State paper rather than that of an after-dinner speech, and is specially impressive as coming from a Governor-General whose utterances here have hitherto been most jealously guarded. The magnitude of the evil must have been marked indeed when Lord Dufferin felt himself compelled, on the eve of his departure, to throw aside the diplomatic mask and urge upon public attention an earnest and uncompromising protest. This speech will prove a valuable legacy to his successor, and will probably enable him at the outset of his rule to adopt a decisive attitude and a settled policy.

The chairman, in proposing Lord Dufferin's health, reviewed in eloquent and laudatory terms the salient points of the Viceroy's administration. Referring to Lord Dufferin's new title, he pointed out that the Queen had not only thereby commemorated the conquest of Burma, but in the title of "Marquis," or "Lord of the Marches," had emphasised her recognition of his trusty guardianship of the "Marches," or frontier, of India. In conclusion, he said:—

"While the country can find such leaders, we need never fear that the prestige of the Empire will not be maintained. We in India are specially quick to recognise and appreciate the qualities in rulers fitting them to rule. Such we recognised in Lord Dufferin. We rallied round him because he was strong and able, doing his work with strength which gave confidence and inspired admiration. We have all admired the gifted statesman and trusted the successful leader, but we have more than admiration for a man who, under all circumstances, has shown a lofty and ennobling example, only to be set by one true to himself—the true gentleman."

In returning thanks, Lord Dufferin, after touching lightly on foreign policy, spoke as follows:—

"As I am so near the day of dissolution, I may be permitted to utter a few words of warning and advice to those to whose affairs I have been giving such unremitting attention for so long a period—(cheers.) You will understand that it is not so much a Viceroy addressing you as his departing, pale, attenuated shade—or rather shall we say some intelligent traveller who has come to India for three months, with the intention of writing an encyclopædic work on the government and people, and who is therefore able to speak in a spirit of infallibility denied to lesser men."

"Well, then, what is India? It is an empire equal in size, if Russia be excluded, to the entire continent of Europe, with a population of 250,000,000 souls, composed of a large number of distinct nationalities, professing various religions, practising diverse rites, and speaking different languages. The census report says there are 106 different Indian tongues—not dialects—of which eighteen are spoken by more than a million persons, while many races are still further separated from each other by discordant prejudices, conflicting social usages, and even antagonistic material interests."

"Perhaps the most patent peculiarity of our Indian Cosmos is its division into two mighty political communities—the Hindoos, numbering 190,000,000, and the Mahomedans, 50,000,000, whose distinctive characteristics, religious, social, and ethnological, it is unnecessary to mention. To these two great divisions must be added a host of minor nationalities (though minor is a misleading term, since most of them are numbered by millions), who, though some are included in the two broader categories, are as completely differentiated from each other as Hindoos from Mahomedans. Such are the Sikhs, with their warlike habits and traditions and theocratic enthusiasm; the Rohillas, Pathans, Assamees, Beloochees, and other wild and martial tribes on the frontiers; the hillmen dwelling on the Himalayas; our subjects in Burma, Mongol in race and Buddhist in religion; the Nairs, Bheels, and other non-Aryan peoples of the centre and south of India, and the enterprising Parsees, with their rapidly developing manufactures and commercial interests."

"Again, among the numerous communities are found, at one and the same moment, all the various stages of civilisation through which mankind has passed from prehistoric ages to the present time. At one end of the scale is the naked, savage hillmen, with stone weapons, head-hunting, and polyandrous habits and childish superstitions; at the other the Europeanised native gentleman, with the refinement, polish, and literary culture of Western philosophy and advanced political ideas; while between the two lie layer upon layer, in close juxtaposition, of wandering communities, living in tents, with flocks of goats, collections of undisciplined warriors, with blood feuds, clan organisation, and loose tribal government, feudal chiefs, or barons, with picturesque retainers, seigniorial jurisdiction and mediæval modes of life, and modernised country gentlemen, enterprising merchants and manufacturers, with well-managed estates and prosperous enterprises. Besides all these, under our direct administration, the Government is required to exercise a certain amount of supervision over 117 Native States, with their princely rulers, autocratic executives, and independent jurisdictions, and their fifty millions of inhabitants. The mere enumeration of these diversified elements must suggest to the most unimaginative mind a picture of as complicated a social and political organisation as has ever tasked human ingenuity to govern and administer."

"But even within India itself we have not reached the limits of our accountability; for we are bound to provide for the safety and welfare, not only of Her Majesty's Hindoo, Mahomedan, and other Native subjects, but also for the large East Indian community, the indigenous Christian Churches, and the important planting and manufacturing interests scattered over the face of the country, as also to secure the property and lives of all British residents in India, men, women, and children, whether employed in the service of the Government or pursuing independent avocations in the midst of alien and semi-civilised multitudes, whose peaceable and orderly behaviour cannot, under all circumstances, be implicitly relied on. To these obligations are also added the duty of watching over the enormous commercial interests of the mother country, represented by a guaranteed capital of over £220,000,000, which, to the great benefit of India, has been either lent to the State or sunk in Indian railways and similar enterprises. It would be criminal to ignore the responsibility of the Government towards those who have sunk large sums in the development of Indian resources on the faith of official guarantees, or who have invested capital in the Indian funds at the invitation of the Imperial and Indian authorities. The same considerations apply with almost equal force to the further vast amount of capital employed by private British enterprise in manufactures, tea-planting, and the indigo, jute, and similar industries, on the assumption that English rule and English justice would remain dominant in India."

"If, again, we turn our eyes outwards we find external obligations hardly less onerous and imperative than those confronting us within. India has a land frontier of nearly 6,000 miles and a seaboard of about 9,000 miles. On the east she is conterminous with Siam and China, on the north with Tibet, Bhotan, and Nepal; while on the north-west she marches, at all events diplomatically, with Russia. On the coasts are many rich and prosperous seaports—Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Kurrachee, and Rangoon. Every year we are made more painfully aware to how serious an extent contiguity with foreign nations, whether civilised or uncivilised, and the complications arising out of both Eastern and Western politics and wars expose us to attack, and impose on us the necessity of walking warily and wisely with respect to international relations, taking the precautions, however onerous and expensive, incumbent on a nation that finds itself in contact with enterprising military Monarchies and rival maritime Powers. It is, then, for the outward protection, for the internal control, and for the welfare and good government, and progress of this congeries of nations, religions, tribes, and communities, with the tremendous latent forces and disruptive potentialities they contain, that the Government of India is answerable. And, with reference to the ever-shifting and multiplying requirements of this complicated political organisation, it has been called upon from time to time to shape and modify its system of administration."

"Now, some intelligent, loyal, patriotic, and well-meaning men are desirous of taking a big jump into the unknown by the application to India of democratic methods of government and the adoption of the Parliamentary system which England herself only reached by slow degrees through the discipline of many centuries of preparation. The idea has been authoritatively suggested of the creation of a representative body, or of representative bodies, with the official element in the minority, who shall have what is called the 'power of the purse,' and who, through this instrumentality, shall be able to bring the British Executive into subjection to their will. The organisation of battalions of Native militia and volunteers for the internal and external defence of the country is the next arrangement suggested; and the first practical result to be obtained would be the reduction of the British Army to one-half its present numbers."

"Well, I am afraid that the people of England will not readily be brought to the acceptance of this programme or to allow such an assembly, or number of such assemblies, either to interfere with the armies or to fetter and circumscribe the liberty of action either of the provincial Governments or of the supreme Executive. In the first place, the whole scheme is eminently unconstitutional. For the essence of constitutional government is that responsibility and power should remain in the same hands; and the idea of irresponsible councils, whose members could never be called to account for their acts in the way in which in which an Opposition can be called to account in a constitutional country, arresting the march of Indian legislation, or nullifying the policy of the British Executive in India, would be regarded as an impracticable anomaly. Indeed, so obviously impossible would be the application of such a system in the circumstances of the case, that I do not believe it has been seriously advocated by any Native statesman of the slightest weight or importance. I have come into contact, during four years, with, I imagine, almost all the most distinguished persons in India, and have talked to most of them upon these matters; but I have never heard a suggestion from one of them in the sense that I have mentioned—(cheers)."

"But if no Native statesman of weight and importance capable of appreciating the true interests of England and India is found in defence of this programme, who are those who do defend it? Who and what are the persons that seek to wield such great powers—that would tempt the fate of Phaeton, and sit in the chariot of the Sun? Well, they are gentlemen of whom I desire to speak with the greatest courtesy and kindness, for they are most of them the product of the system of education which we have ourselves carried on during the last 30 years. But 30 years is a very short time in which to educe a self-governing nation from its primordial elements. At all events, let us measure the extent of the educated assistance upon which we could call at this moment, and examine the degree of proficiency which the educated classes have attained, and the relation of their numbers to the rest of the population."

"Out of the whole population of British India, which may be put at 200,000,000 in round numbers, not more than five or six per cent. can read and write, while less than one per cent. has any knowledge of English. Thus the overwhelming mass of the people—perhaps 190,000,000 out of 200,000,000—is still steeped in ignorance. Of the ten or twelve millions who have acquired an education, three-fourths, or perhaps less, have not attained to more than the most elementary knowledge. In a recent review of the progress of education it is pointed out that 94½ per cent. of those attending schools and colleges are in the primary stage, while the progress made in English education is measured by the fact that the number of the students who have graduated at the Universities since 1857—that is, during the course of the last 31 years—is under eight thousand. During the last 25 years probably not more than half a million students have passed out of our schools with a good knowledge of English; there being perhaps a million more with a smattering. Consequently, it may be said that out of a population of 200,000,000, only a very few thousands may be considered to possess an adequate qualification, so far as education and acquaintance with Western ideas, or even Eastern learning, are concerned, for taking an intelligent view of those intricate and complicated economic and political questions, affecting the destinies of many millions of men, that are almost daily presented for the consideration of the Government."

"I would ask, then, how could any reasonable man imagine that the British Government would be content to allow this microscopic minority to control the administration of that majestic and multiform Empire, for whose safety and welfare they are responsible in the eyes of God and before the face of civilisation? It appears to me a groundless contention that it represents the people of India. Is it not evident that large sections of the community are already becoming alarmed at the thought of such self-constituted bodies interposing between themselves and the august impartiality of English rule. They ought to know that in the present condition of India there can be no real or effective representation of the people, with their enormous numbers, multifarious interests, and tesselated nationalities. They ought to see that all the strength, power, and intelligence of the British Government are applied to preventing one race or one religion from acquiring dominion over another. They ought to feel that there is no greater blessing to a country than the existence of an external, dispassionate, immutable authority, whose watchword is 'Justice,' who alone possesses both the power and the will to weld the rights and status of each separate element of the Empire into a peaceful, co-ordinated, and harmonious unity."

"When the Congress was first started it seemed as if that body directed its attention to the consideration of social reform, and that, like a similar congress in England, it might prove of assistance to the Government, and of great use to the citizens. I cannot help expressing regret that they consider momentous questions concerning the welfare of millions of their fellow-subjects beneath notice. It is a still greater matter for regret that the members of the Congress are answerable for the distribution—as their officials have boasted—among thousands of ignorant and credulous men of publications animated by a very questionable spirit, and whose manifest intention is to excite the hatred of the people against the public servants of the Crown in this country. Such proceedings no Government could regard with indifference; nor can they fail to inspire us with misgivings, at all events as to the wisdom of those who have so offended. Nor is the silly threat of one of the chief officers—the principal secretary, I believe, of the Congress—that he and his Congress friends hold in their hands the keys, not only of popular insurrection, but of military revolt, calculated to restore confidence in their discretion, even when accompanied by the assurance that they do not intend for the present to put these keys into the locks."

After dwelling on these and cognate topics at very considerable length the Viceroy wound up with a panegyric on Lord Lansdowne, and with expressions of grateful recognition of the enthusiastic reception accorded to Lady Dufferin—who was present during the speeches—and to himself.

THE VICEROY OF INDIA.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 30.

Lord Dufferin was present this evening at the annual dinner given by the Scotch residents on the occasion of St. Andrew's day. His Excellency delivered a speech, in the course of which he declared that the fall in the value of silver had greatly hampered the Government in regard to Burma. The Government had not tried to settle the affairs of the country cheaply, every demand of local officers having been met. The country, however, was becoming settled more rapidly than had been expected.

After some further remarks, the Viceroy said that he wished to say a few words of warning advice on the subject of autocratic rule in India, which he declared was foreign to English ideas. The Indian Government was gradually being liberalised, but some persons of no position or real education, and who represented a microscopic minority, desired representative Government, although the country had hardly emerged from its primordial elements. He was sure that the English nation could not favour such notions.

In conclusion, the Viceroy stated that the Indian Government would continue to give a larger share in the public service to the Natives, and would favour all sincere demands for political reform, consistent with the maintenance of the august impartiality of English rule.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR-GENERAL A. P. BAINBRIDGE, R.A.—Major-General Anthony Percy Bainbridge, late Royal (Madras) Artillery, died on the 25th ult., at Portland-terrace, Southsea, at the age of forty-nine years. He entered the service in June, 1857, obtaining his promotion to captain in March, 1865; colonel in April, 1879, and to major-general in October, 1881. Major-General Bainbridge served in the Ashantee War of 1873-74, receiving the brevet of lieutenant-colonel and the medal.

DR. R. WOOSNAM.—Surgeon Richard Woosnam, Retired, Bombay Army, died on the 27th ult., at Tyn-y-graig, Builth, Breconshire.

The entire sea-borne trade of the port of Kurrachee for the year 1887-88, exclusive of Government stores and treasures, amounted in value to Rs.8,86,79,948, which, compared with the figures of the previous year, show a decline to the extent of Rs.33,78,545, or 3·67 per cent. The value of the foreign import trade during the year amounted to Rs.2,72,78,592, against Rs.2,92,34,008 in 1886-87, or a decrease of Rs.19,55,416, or 6·68 per cent.; but, compared with the average of the past five years, there is an increase amounting to Rs.81,61,008, or 42·08 per cent. In exports there has been a further fall, amounting to Rs.29,98,022, or 10·12 per cent., compared with the year 1886-87. Imports from Indian ports fell from Rs.2,34,08,647 in 1886-87 to Rs.2,08,42,186 during the last official year. The fall amounts to Rs.25,66,461, or 10·96 per cent. In the export trade with Indian or coast ports there has been an improvement amounting to Rs.41,41,354, or 42·49 per cent., the figures for the year 1887-88 being Rs.1,39,32,883, against Rs.97,91,599 in 1886-87. The export trade with foreign countries and coast ports for 1887-88 taken altogether show an increase of Rs.11,43,332 over the previous year, or 2·90 per cent.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

BLIND LEADERS.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

It is surprising to see the amount of rubbish written by people at home, on the subject of the Burmese, by people who, though they have been residing in Burma, know as much about the people and their true character as they do of the man in the moon. Among those who have thus been airing their opinions on Burma and the Burmese, on the strength of having resided in Burma, are Colonel Gloag, of the Artillery, and Mr. E. Garnet Man, barrister-at-law. A Madras contemporary tells us the first gentleman has "written to a home paper somewhat dogmatically on the subject of the police in Burma. He approves the employment of Burmese in the police force, though he does not entertain a high opinion of their soldierly qualities." He makes, besides, certain sensible remarks on the necessity of employing men of the country in the discharge of police duties in their own country, and the prompt recognition on the part of Government of faithful service boldly rendered. The gallant officer also very pertinently observes: "If a man is constantly twitted with his alleged cowardice he will probably finish by becoming a poltroon. Confidence usually justifies itself. On the other hand, assume that he is as brave as his fellows, and plant in him the germs of self-respect, and ere long he should show that in an emergency he is as good a man as his neighbours, without pretending to be a swashbuckler or a fire-eater." These are no doubt sensible remarks, such as a man of intelligence and a student of human nature might make; but we do not think that Colonel Gloag's acquaintance with the Burmese character justifies his laying down the law on their fitness or otherwise for the police.

Mr. E. G. Man, too, exposes his ignorance of the Burmese character when he tells the British public what we think will be news to even most Englishmen in this province. "They will tamely submit to be cuffed by Natives of India without attempting to retaliate or even to defend themselves." A writer who can make such a statement cannot possibly have seen or known anything of the people. Colonel Street and Colonel Strover when out in the Pegu district with some seventy sepoy and military police can tell how they were charged up to the bayonet's point by 150 Burman dacoits armed only with dahs; and although they were repulsed after some thirty or forty of them were shot down by the Sniders of our troops, such a charge by an undisciplined rabble does not show the Burmans to have been wanting in personal pluck. We have seen and heard of encounters between Natives of India and Burmans, where fists were alone the weapons, and we never knew of the Burmans coming off second best. It was only a month ago when an English police officer, writing to this paper on the subject of police reform, told us of a Burman orderly of his having most severely mauled with his fists and elbows four Punjabee policemen who insulted him. We could tell of other instances, and so could others. But fistic encounters are no criterion of the manhood or military capacities of a nation; though they go to disprove the absurd statements regarding the Burmese made by men like Mr. Garnet Man, who ought to know better. That they do not only illustrates the fact that there are men living for years in the towns of Burma whose only knowledge of the people is acquired from an acquaintance with a few bazaar dealers.

SERVICE IN ASSAM.

A correspondent of the Englishman furnishes the following roll of casualties among the officers of the Commission in the course of the last ten years:—

1. Captain Butler, Deputy Commissioner, Naga Hills, killed by Nagas.
2. Mr. Beckett, U.C.S., Assistant Commissioner, accidentally killed while surveying.
3. Mr. Damant, C.S., Deputy Commissioner, killed by Nagas.
4. Mr. Carnegy, U.C.S., Deputy Commissioner, killed on duty in the Naga Hills.
5. Major Boyd, Deputy Commissioner, killed on duty in the North Cachar Hills.
6. Major Trotter, Deputy Commissioner, killed on duty in Manipur.
7. Mr. Hinde, Assistant Commissioner, U.C.S., died from ailments contracted in Naga Hills.
8. Major Williamson, Deputy Commissioner, died from result of mental ailments contracted during exceptionally arduous service in the province.
9. Mr. E. Stack, C.S., Secretary to Chief Commissioner, died from ailments contracted in the province.
10. Colonel Peel, Deputy Commissioner, died from ailments contracted in the province.

11. Mr. Primrose, C.S., Political Agent, Manipur. The mail has just brought news of the death of this fine young officer; and as he had very indifferent health before he went home, he has no doubt succumbed to ailments brought on during service in Assam.

The above list is by no means exhaustive, but it will be admitted, I think, that it is sufficiently melancholy and lengthy. The average strength of the Commission has been 13 Deputy Commissioners and 23 Assistants—total 36; so that the death-rate has been nearly 33 per cent. It seems exceptionally hard that the survivors should have their claims overlooked, and that they should be superseded by an officer whose services, however meritorious, have never had any connection with the province.

MR. MORETON FREWEN'S FORECAST.

The Pioneer reporter hastened to interview Mr. Moreton Frewen on his arrival in Bombay, with the following result:—

Among the latest arrivals in Bombay is Mr. Moreton Frewen. The future of the rupee is of such importance that we are glad to have been able to take advantage of Mr. Frewen's fresh and first hand knowledge of the subject as to the latest developments in London and Washington.

Q.—When may we expect the Report of the Currency Commission?

Within three weeks at most, I believe: it was to be presented to Parliament within a few days of its reassembling. A strong desire was expressed when I left London that there should be a further delay till next spring, but owing to the fact that the Report had been promised to Parliament last session, its postponement was impossible. The accident of its appearance at the very moment of the Presidential election in America is felt to be a misfortune; the great interest felt there in the silver question will be obscured by the party struggle.

Q.—What do you hear of the nature of the Report?

It is understood that the Commissioners are divided into three groups. There are six declared bi-metallists—Mr. Arthur Balfour, Mr. Chaplin, Sir Louis Mallet, Sir William Houldsworth, Mr. Barbour and Mr. Samuel Montagu. Probably the report made by these gentlemen will be found to affirm the entire practicability of the double standard, and will recommend the calling of an international monetary conference in London during next summer. Then there will be a report from five dissentients—Sir T. Farrer, Sir John Lubbock, Messrs. Courtenay, Fremantle and Birch—to the effect that the depression of trade does not warrant any such heroic remedies, and that we had better wait for more light. Lord Herschell, the chairman, will not sign with the silver men, and as he is by no means doctrinaire he may possibly not support the monometallists either, but steer a middle course. He arrives in India in about a fortnight, so you will have a chance of showing him the inconveniences of a wobbling rupee and send him back to us a strong reformer.

Q.—Is the report likely to be satisfactory to the reformers?

Entirely so, if, as it is rumoured, and as I quite believe, the whole body of the Commissioners, without exception, admit the injurious effect on trade of an uncertain par of exchange, and admit and include in the Report that they trace the fall in the price of silver to hostile monetary legislation, and not to variations in supply; and, furthermore, that a monetary Union of the leading nations could be relied on to maintain a fixed ratio in spite of any fluctuations in the relative supplies of the two metals coming from the mines.

Q.—Do you mean to say that the entire Commissioners make these strong admissions a part of their Report?

I do indeed; at least those who are in the best position to judge hold this belief.

Q.—But surely this is the whole gospel of bi-metallism?

So it is; the whole gospel of bi-metallism.

Q.—And how about Washington? Did you find any change in the position there?

No; the agitation for the suspension of silver coinage under the terms of the Bland Bill collapsed so signally in 1884 that in the States the question is at rest for this generation. The silver question has been no issue of this Presidential election; our friends there felt that the Report of our Currency Commission would be likely to result in international action a little later, and this being the case it would be extremely impolitic to weaken international prospects by any merely local palliatives, such, for example, as a demand in the States for increased coinage. As long as England can indulge the belief that some other nation or nations can be relied on to settle the question, it is very certain she will do nothing.

Q.—What about our export trades in cotton and wheat; what are the crops in America like?

Cotton is reported, notwithstanding an increase of area, under the average of bales, and the world is very short of wheat. Canada may have ten million bushels of surplus for export, and the States not more than ninety, as against an average of, say, 120 millions. Then our home crop, though better than was expected, will be at least fifteen million bushels short. France is enormously short, and will have to import, perhaps, seventy-five millions instead of thirty millions. Russia has a very good harvest, and so have Austria and the Balkan countries; but it is safe to predict a continuance of the present high prices at least for ten months. If your cotton crop is good and your wheat exports reach, say, thirty million bushels, your trade balance will be favourable for higher exchange rates, perhaps a penny higher; possibly in conjunction with the favourable report of the Commission, you might see the rupee as high as eighteen pence in the next few months.

THE BRITISH SERVICE AND THE STAFF CORPS. (Civil and Military Gazette.)

A very serious danger is confronting the British service in India, and though it is to a certain extent recognised, no steps are taken to stop or remedy it. It is this. The Indian Staff Corps is supplied by the British regiments in India with officers; and these officers are not supernumerary to their British regiments, but are the only Subalterns whom the British regiments have to train or depend upon. It is easy to note how the system works. In nearly every regiment that has been in India any length of time we find the full complement of Captains followed by one or two Subalterns of six or seven years' service, then a number of Subalterns whose names are in italics, and the baleful word "probationer" after them, and then the first Subaltern doing duty with the regiment, with some eighteen months' or two years' service, followed by a limited number of Subalterns of still less service. Now, if a Captain is temporarily detached for Staff duty, for Garrison class, signalling, leave, or any of the perfectly legitimate calls which may take him away from his regiment, the chances are that the only man available to take his place is a Subaltern of some two years' service. The duties of an Officer Commanding a company are yearly becoming more and more onerous. To carry out the annual company-training efficiently, an officer of considerable professional knowledge and experience is required; yet the chances are that, at the time the training takes place, the officer in charge of the company may be an inexperienced Subaltern who possibly may have been in independent command of a company half of his short service, and with every intention of doing his best, yet is utterly devoid of the training which every Subaltern requires under the eye of an experienced Captain. Nor is this all; owing to the manner in which the present system works, the battalions in India are kept so short of Subalterns, that it is often the exception rather than the rule for a Captain to have a Subaltern under him at all.

A lad comes out to India, and as early as possible puts his name down for the Staff Corps. If he is medically fit, he very soon gets appointed a probationer, and for six months remains on the strength of his battalion before he is seconded; another six or eight months elapses before a Subaltern to replace him arrives in India. Thus for a year or more that battalion is deprived of the services of a Subaltern, and as five and six have often left a battalion in one year, the consequences are simply disastrous. It is now proposed to limit the number allowed to proceed from one battalion to the Staff Corps in one year to three; that will be bad enough. But this is not all. Of the few remaining Subalterns the chances are that one or two are men who are medically rejected for the Staff Corps and have either to be sent home sick or spend the better part of their time on the sick list in India. Add to this number the strong Subalterns who are going through courses of Garrison instruction, signalling, detailed for duty at the hills, &c., and it will be readily seen that the number of Subalterns doing duty with the battalion is extremely limited. What is the result? The battalion receives and commences to train these young gentlemen who come out. That they are not likely to take a very keen interest in their temporary regiment must be obvious to any one. But still the officers of the battalion are pretty sure to see that they do their duty, and do it efficiently. Just as they are beginning to know their duty and be useful, off they go to the Staff Corps; and the process has to be gone through again with an equally unsatisfactory ending. Meanwhile no subalterns trained in the system of the regiment are growing up in the regiment, and the maintenance of the regimental system depends wholly on the senior officers and the non-commissioned officers. If by any run of promotion, or the appointment of officers to extra regimental billets on the sudden retirement of two or three senior officers, the ranks of the majors and captains become thinned, the battalion has no material to fall back upon to keep up its traditions and methods of working; and it possibly receives a shock to its organisation, which it may take years to recover.

All this is bad enough in peace time, but how about war? The present system of war requires far more skilled experience and leadership than was ever required in the past. From the moment that troops pass into the actual phase of an attack to the moment after victory is assured the officers of a company are practically left to their own resources.

If war were to break out in India to-morrow quite half the regiments in India would find themselves in this condition:—Eight majors or captains commanding companies, two of whom, they might reckon, would either be required for staff work or would be medically unfit for a campaign; some three or four (if they are lucky) subalterns of five or six years' service, one or two of whom would probably be required for transport, signalling, or other special duties; and then by scraping together all their subalterns who have probably an average of two years' service or less they may get together some ten more subalterns; this is supposing that they have time to recall their officers from leave in England. Now, what would be the condition of these regiments after the first serious battle? The mortality among officers under the existing circumstances of war is always enormous, and especially in the British army, where officers are never backward in leading their men. There is little doubt that, after the first battle, at least two or three companies in every regiment would be under the command of lads quite unfit for the responsibility; and that three or four companies would be reduced to one officer apiece: which, we think all who consider the subject will agree, is a very dangerous state of affairs. That it is no exaggerated statement of the case, let anyone who is interested see for himself by looking at the Bengal Army List, and see the cadres of the regiments which have been some years in India, and have had the full benefit of the present system. If these lists are carefully looked into it will be seen in how bad a condition the regiments are. It must be remembered that often leave on private affairs practically means sick leave, for an officer does not always like to take sick leave. It must also be remembered that many at the bottom of the List are not yet dismissed drill, and are of little or no practical use. It is, perhaps, easier to point out the disease than to devise a remedy. The real root of the evil is that the Government are trying to officer two armies with the same men. They represent that both armies are fully officered, yet both armies are cheated. The Indian Army is largely officered by probationers who are not supernumerary; but are supposed to be efficient officers, which they are not; while the British Army has only a cadre on paper, with no officers to show for these numerous probationers. The Government must harden its heart to supply both armies with officers, or they will prepare, for themselves and the nation, a serious disaster.

B. C. GRIEVANCES. (Civil and Military Gazette.)

I sing the woes of a service which (pray pardon the pun's enormity),
Has an awful lot of uniform, but not enough uniformity.
Sing Hey, Sing Ho, for the day, long ago, of the old irregular cavalry
When every man dressed as pleased him best, and generals didn't care a D.
When your sword might either be curved or straight,
And your collar as high or as low as you please,
And your helmet spiked in what fashion you liked,
For nobody thought about matters like these.
Now the powers that be have appointed a man
As Inspector-General over us,
And if not "all correct" you may fairly expect,
That he'll raise (to speak mildly) a deuce of a fuss.
He'll say, "Sir, don't you know, that by G.G.O. No. 7 of February 84
You should fasten the throat of your service coat,
With just two hooks and eyes, neither less nor more."
To your C.O. he'll say, "I have noticed to-day
With more pain than I fully know how to express,
Seven different designs for the wearing of lines,
When your officers appeared in dismounted full dress."
Or perhaps he'll say, "Sirs—I remark that your spurs
Are excessive in length. Please to wear them shorter
See that subaltern there, with a six inch pair, Though the regulations say one and a quarter."
He'll object to your belt, or he'll find that the welt
Between the stripes of your overalls,
Does not manage quite to "fill up the light,"
Or he'll notice perhaps—but the subject palls.
Suffice it to say, that if not all O.K.
From your steel foot-chains to your helmet spike,
Then General L. will address to you—well—
Some remarks which you may not entirely like.
Now some there be who would remedy
This grievance of ours in the following wise,
By restricting our gorgeous uniform,
To a single suit, which would have to comprise—

Full Dress and Undress, and order of March,
Drill order, mess order, and dress for the stable.
And how they'd arrange this "lightning change"
I'll try to explain as well as I'm able.

A plain frock coat buttoned up to the throat
For parades and duties, and open for mess,
Then if two shoulder straps, and a girdle perhaps,
And a pouch belt be added—Behold your full dress!

'Tis thus we are told that the Cossack bold,
Is gorgeously clothed at a trifling expense,
And its argued that we of the hard-up B.C.
Should follow his lead, if we have any sense.

This tale of our woes I'll now bring to a close
With one piece of advice (somewhat trite, I own)
To our dress reformers, and generals as well,
"It's sometimes expedient to let well alone."

BENGAL.

(Nov. 13.)

THE reports from Behar and Orissa are still far from satisfactory. The Bengal Government has allowed a grant of Rs. 15,000 for gratuitous relief in Orissa.

THE Office of the Sanitary Commissioner and Surgeon-General with the Government of India does not accompany the Home Secretariat to Calcutta this cold weather, but remains at Simla.

GENERAL GRAHAM arrived at Darjeeling on the 8th inst. to consult the Lieutenant-Governor, who proceeds to Kalimpong to meet Mr. Paul. A spring campaign will probably be decided upon.

COLONEL OMMANNEY, Commandant of the 39th Bengal Infantry, arrived at Jhansi on Friday last, he having been ordered back from the Hazara Expedition to explain certain reported irregularities in the regimental accounts.

A SHOCK of earthquake of great severity was felt at Darjeeling on the 9th shortly after five o'clock in the afternoon. There were several upheavals, lasting thirteen seconds. A dull roar preceded the shock in the direction of E.N.E. to W.S.W.

THE rain which was so much needed in Orissa has at length come, and the prices of food-grains have begun to fall in consequence. There will, in all probability, be a scarcity in some districts; but the worst apprehensions of famine are apparently at an end. In other parts of India also rain has fallen, so that, on the whole, agricultural prospects are decidedly improved.

THE Trustees of the Bengal Distress Fund have made a second grant of Rs. 1,000, making the total Rs. 2,000, to the Central Relief Committee at Midnapore, and have also sent Rs. 1,000 to the Commissioner of Orissa for the relief of distress, requesting the Collector of Cuttack to make over to Mr. Worsley any balance of former grants in his hands for the same purpose. The grants to Midnapore and Orissa have been made at the request of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Trustees have further made a grant of Rs. 600 to Mr. Bolton, the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, for the purchase of seed-grain to aid the people in the southern portion of that district where the crops have been destroyed by flood. This grant will take the form of advances for seed-grain, and it is expected that some portion will be recovered. The Roman Catholic missionaries in that part of the district have undertaken to superintend relief and report to the Collector.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 14.)

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP SARGENT, of Tinnevely, returned to Madras by the P. and O. s.s. Mirzapore on Saturday last, from short leave to England.

HIS many friends will be glad to hear that Lieut. Arbuthnot, 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, who was injured while playing polo, will soon be about again. As the accident occurred on the 11th ult. he will have been a month laid up.

THE following are the results of the crushing last month at the Kolar Mines, Mysore:—Crushed, 1,320 tons for 1,208 ounces, and obtained 153 ounces of gold from 510 tons of tailings concentrates. Nundydroog crushed 400 tons for 822 ounces. Ooregum, 316 tons for 606 ounces. Balaghat, 102 tons for 201 ounces. Consolidated, 435 tons for 114 ounces. South-East Mysore, 210 tons for 74 ounces.

THE expedition to the Chittagong Hills Tracts will probably comprise the 9th Bengal Lancers, two companies of Goorkhas, and two guns of 9-1 N., Presidency District. It is good policy to send the guns, of which it is known the frontier tribes stand in the greatest terror, while they are curiously indifferent about rifles. A little innocent gun practice at selected points of vantage would, indeed, be more calculated to impress the imagination of the offending tribes than even a sound thrashing. The country is rough, but nothing to speak of after our experiences on the Sikkim frontier.

It is reported that the Pioneers at Gnatong have started for Chumbi, where they are to pass the winter, and that the recall of the guns has been countermanded.

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 16.)

MR. SYDNEY HUTCHINSON, A.M.I.C.E., has been appointed Meteorological Reporter of Western India in the place of Mr. F. Chambers.

SIR EDWARD WATKIN, M.P., and Sir Henry Edwards have left Bombay for Ahmedabad, en route to Delhi and Ajmere.

THE EARL AND COUNTESS OF JERSEY have left Bombay for Mahabaleshwar, where they will be the guests of H.E. Lord Reay. After staying there a few days the Earl and the Countess proceed to Hyderabad, and then go to Madras on a visit to H.E. Lord Connemara.

LORD AND LADY MONTAGUE, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Scott Montague, have left Bombay for Khandalla.

MR. SAMUELSON, President Liverpool Science and Art Classes, paid a visit to the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution. Several questions were put to the lady students of the fifth and seventh standards in history and geography, which elicited the warm approbation of Mr. Samuelson, who wrote in the visitors' book:—"The girls are remarkably sharp and intelligent, and their teachers are making clever women of them."

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain during week throughout Deccan and Southern Mahratta country, and in parts of Surat and Konkan; beneficial to cotton and jowari in Surat, and to standing crops in Nasik, Poona, and Sholapur. More rain generally wanted, urgently in Gujarat and Kattywar. Cotton damaged by caterpillars in parts of Kattywar. Harvesting of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing generally. Probable outturn of early crops in Hyderabad 12 annas, and of cotton in parts of Kattywar from 2 to 8 annas. Cotton in Baroda poor, in Broach on the whole healthy. Fodder scarce in three talukas of Kaira, five of Nasik, one of Tanna, north-east talukas of Belgaum, and in parts of Hyderabad, Khandesh, Ratnagiri, Sholapur, Kattywar, and Baroda. Agricultural stock suffering in parts of Nasik, Belgaum, and Kattywar. Scarcity of drinking water felt in parts of Kattywar and Baroda.

THE P. and O. Co.'s new mail steamer Arcadia arrived in Bombay Harbour from Europe at nine o'clock on Saturday morning. Amongst the large number of passengers on board were the following:—Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., Sir Henry Edwards, Lord Eglinton, the Earl and Countess of Jersey, Sir Samuel and Lady Baker, Lady Greville, Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., Hon. Justices Beverley, Norris, Pigot, Prinsep, O'Kenealey, of the Calcutta High Court, Hon. Dudley Leigh, Mr. G. H. R. Hart, brother of Mr. W. E. Hart, Chief Judge of the local Small Causes Court, Mr. A. C. Tupp, lately Accountant-General, Bombay, and recently appointed at Allahabad, Captain Hext, Director of Indian Marine, Bombay, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman, Mr. C. Buller, and Colonel Olcott, of the Theosophist Society. Sir Edward Watkin and Sir Henry Edwards have put up at the Esplanade Hotel, while the Earl and Countess of Jersey, Sir Samuel and Lady Baker, Lady Greville, and the members of her party, and Mr. A. Cotterell Tupp are at present staying at the Great Western Hotel. The Hon. Justices Norris, Prinsep, Pigot, Beverley, and O'Kenealey left for Calcutta by the evening Jubbulpore mail train. Miss E. A. Manning, Secretary to the National Indian Association, also arrived by the same steamer. She will remain during her stay in Bombay as the guest of the Hon. Mr. Justice and Mrs. Scott, at whose bungalow she was presented with an address of welcome.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 14.)

SIR CHARLES AITCHISON visited Kapurthala on the 7th inst. for the purpose of saying farewell to the young Raja before leaving for England. He was accompanied by Mr. Mackworth Young, Commissioner of Jullundur.

THE Allahabad paper states that any temporary misunderstanding, if such there ever were, that may have existed between the Hindu and Mahomedan gentlemen of N.W. Provinces who have promoted the United Patriotic Association, has completely vanished. The leaders on both sides, Sir Syed Ahmed Khan, K.C.S.I., Munshi Newal Kishore, C.I.E., and others are now working cordially together, and a large and important meeting of the Hindus and Mahomedans of Oudh, called on behalf of the Oudh Taluqdars' Association, will be held at Lucknow on the 22nd. The Taluqdars have already given their assent, and invitations are being issued.

THE Pioneer correspondent, who recently visited Lundi Kotal, says the progress of the fortified serai is very marked indeed. The walls are very well forward, and with the abundant supply of local labour furnished by the tribesmen the work is proceeding steadily, though the water supply is somewhat limited, owing to the continued drought. Kafilas to and from Cabul halt just outside the serai. The Khyber traffic is conducted with absolute safety, but the Sangu Khel Shinwaris are reported to have looted some kafilas between Dakka and Jellalabad recently.

THE Civil and Military Gazette has the following:—We received a few days ago, from a Native correspondent at Peshawur, the news of an attempted outrage upon a police officer by the Gaduns, who inhabit the end of the wedge of territory between Peshawur and Agror. Not only was no harm done, however, but the incident seems to have been satisfactorily closed. The facts of the case we believe to be as follows:—Mr. Hastings, District superintendent of Police, Peshawur, was attacked just across the border in the southern corner of the Gadun country by some men, who came up in a threatening fashion with arms in their hands; and, as our correspondent states, some stones were thrown at him, narrowly missing him. Mr. Hastings, who was, we believe, unharmed, got out of their way by jumping his horse over a wall, and no harm was done to anyone. The offenders, however, were immediately called to book, and their jirgah came promptly into Peshawur, and the case has since been settled by the imposition of a fine of Rs. 1,000. It was alleged that the reason of the attack was that some outlaw was in the village, and that it was supposed that Mr. Hastings might be going there to catch him. But probably the truth is that the mullahs had been stirring the people up, and that the attack was really a consequence of the excitement caused by the Black Mountain Expedition. Probably some of the young bloods from amongst the Gaduns had gone off to join the enemy. The occurrence was one very likely to happen at such a time as the present, and no particular importance need be attached to it except in so far as it proves the inability of the mullahs to produce anything like a general combination on the border. Had the Gaduns been really dangerous they could easily have been dealt with by the River Column of the Black Mountain Expedition on its way back to India.

BURMA.

(Nov. 12.)

COMPLETE arrangements have been made for the protection of the western border of Upper Burma against the raiding Chins. Major Raikes accompanies General Faunce as Political Officer.

THE purchase of a score of elephants for the use of the Forest Department in Upper Burma has been sanctioned at a cost of over Rs. 20,000.

THE high prices ruling on the Bombay side have, says a Calcutta contemporary, greatly stimulated the export of rice from Burma, whence large quantities are being shipped to meet the demand created by the partial failure of the crops on the west coast of India. The same paper understands that the rate of freight from the Burma rice ports to Bombay has advanced about 100 per cent in consequence.

THE prospects of the rice crop in Burma on the 1st of November were as follows:—"Area under rice cultivation in the ten chief rice-producing districts is now estimated at 3,602,766 acres, or 127,199 acres more than the area actually under cultivation in 1887. The damage resulting from floods is considerable in Akyab, Pegu, Bassein, Shwegyin, and Amhurst districts. At the end of October and in the first week of November rain has everywhere been insufficient, and the crop which promised very well indeed is now not likely to be above average, unless more rain falls."

THE Burma official Gazette, published on Saturday last, states that the Chief Commissioner has received with deep regret the intelligence of the sudden death of Mr. Fforde, Deputy Commissioner of Sagain. Deceased had served in Burma over twenty-five years, and was specially selected as one of the political officers to accompany the expedition of 1885. From the date of the entry of British troops into Mandalay Mr. Fforde was entrusted with important duties in connection with the administration and settlement of Upper Burma; and his exceptionally intimate knowledge of the language and his sympathy with the people rendered his services of special value. The Government of Burma loses in him one of its most trusted officers.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

Of the many astonishing things in this most astonishing age is the absolute, the crass ignorance which exists in even well-informed circles in regard to India. Hindustan, peopled as it is with more than 250 millions of inhabitants, possessing unbounded potentiality of agricultural richness, forming as it does the brightest jewel in the diadem of England—is a sealed book to all but the very few whom circumstances and inclination have led to study this most interesting and attractive of Empires. It would serve no purpose to examine the cause of this marvellous lack of knowledge; sufficient for the purpose that it exists, and that in such circumstances any addition to the storehouse of knowledge is welcome and valuable. We are led to record these observations by the appearance of Sir John Strachey's most excellent and no less opportune volume entitled "India."

Speaking with a familiarity with well-nigh every work connected with the East which has appeared during the last quarter of a century, we make bold to assert, without fear of contradiction, that this epitome fills a void which no publication extant has thoroughly succeeded in removing. There are histories of India enough and to spare—albeit a good account of this great dependency has yet to be written. There are miscellaneous essays, such as the masterly series penned by Sir Alfred Lyall; there is this work, the joint production of the Brothers Strachey, each and all of which merit careful perusal, and have received the praise due to high merit, and numerous claims to public patronage. But no single book has yet appeared which forms such a complete compendium of Indian history as the book under review, as it is without bias, and with all the weight which attaches to personal experience and unrivalled opportunities of acquiring information. Allusion has been made to the ignorance of the oi polloi of mankind in regard to all that concerns one of the greatest Empires in the world's history. If—and it is not concealed that to some extent this is the case—their lack of knowledge is in a degree excusable, at any rate, there is no longer any reason for want of at least a reasonable familiarity with the general outlines of India's annals. The narrative, moreover, is as attractive as the style is vigorous and full of life. A work of a few hundred pages can scarcely pretend to deal exhaustively with the events of 250 years of conquest and administration. At best only bare outlines can be sketched, details being reserved for more pretentious and elaborate narration; but salient features are given with sufficient fulness for all practical purposes, and, over and above all, accuracy is commendably made the primal character of this most characteristic work, which adds lustre to a career already replete with lustre, and will reflect renown upon a name already renowned.

"The Wife's Help to Indian Cookery." By W. H. Dawe. (Elliot Stock).—A carefully-arranged and well-thought-out book, with excellent receipts, even though rather expensive. Still, the author is right in saying that for good cookery you must have good materials. And, after all, good cooking may save a doctor's bill. To a novice to Indian ways and Indian housekeeping this book will be a boon.

"Miss Baxter's Bequest." By Annie S. Swan. (Oliphant, Anderson, and Ferrier).—A very pathetic, prettily-told story.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for December opens with a Historical Sketch of the Russian Navy by Lieut. C. R. Low, of the Indian Navy, brief but interesting. Major Gambier Parry continues his pleasant Yachting Cruise, and readers of the magazine will be glad to welcome Mr. Irving Montagu in his further "Wanderings" as a war officer. Mr. O'Connor Morris reviews Colonel Malleon's "Eugene of Savoy," and Colonel Spalding brings to a conclusion his very able and thoughtful paper on Savoroff's character and career. It is to be hoped that these will be given again to the public in book form. For lighter reading there is a further chapter of the "Rambler Papers," and a prettily-told tale of a Christmas Eve in a Pilot's Hut, translated from the Swedish by the editor. The number is profusely illustrated, the frontispiece—a likeness of Peter the Great—being capitally executed.

This popular Service magazine, it is announced, will, for greater portability and convenience of reading, appear from January next in an 8vo Imperial form. The type and paper will remain the same as heretofore; also the contents, both in character and quality.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigne's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1888.

LORD DUFFERIN'S FAREWELL.

THANKS to the enterprise of the Times, Englishmen at home who take an interest in Indian matters will be able to read to-day the outspoken words of the retiring Viceroy, spoken only on Friday evening last in the capital city of that Empire, the rule of which he is just handing over to his successor. The St. Andrew's Dinner at Calcutta has been for many years looked upon as a sort of institution, at which official leaders are expected to give some public reasons for the faith which is in them regarding official acts and Government policy in India about which questions have been raised, and in which all classes in the country are interested, but to which questions answers have not always been satisfactorily found in departmental records or Government Gazettes, or in the columns of a Press ever craving for information. In fact, the St. Andrew's Dinners have been looked upon in the City of Palaces much in the same light as the Lord Mayor's Banquets on the 9th of November in London, as giving public men an opportunity of "unbending" a little after dinner, and taking the public into their confidence. At the Mansion House the softening influences of turtle and cold punch help, perhaps in a way mystic, wonderful, but not to be gainsaid, the unbosoming of statesmen. In the Town Hall of Calcutta the same influences are also at work; but they are strengthened by the companionship of haggis and "barley-bree" influences, which Scotchmen on such a night as that of the 30th of November hold in as sacred reverence as that of the pious memory of St. Andrew. It may be said that, after all, the public in England learns very little from Ministerial lips at the Mansion House, except what the Ministerial lips choose to utter on the principle of language being given to conceal thoughts, and Prime Ministers, such as Mr. Gladstone and Lord Beaconsfield, have proved themselves past-masters in this great art. But in India, where the spirit of parties has not yet confused men's judgments or corrupted their honesty, public men on such an occasion as a St. Andrew's Dinner have not been afraid to say very freely what they really mean, and to take into real confidence those who are listening to and waiting on their words. Hitherto, indeed, the chief political speech of the St. Andrew's Dinner has been that of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province dwelling on local administration, or that of the Finance Minister endeavouring to say pleasant things to the Chamber of Commerce or Trades Association or to justify to the general public the incidence of an income-tax or some other impost. It has seldom happened that a Viceroy has been the chief speaker of the evening, and never, we believe, before on such an occasion as that on which Lord Dufferin has just spoken, and bade farewell to India in "words that breathe and thoughts that burn." No man knows better the value of language and its dangers than he does. A born diplomatist, strengthened in diplomatic art by study and experience of men and character, he is not a man to talk lightly even under the genial influence of haggis, barley-bree, or "butter Scotch," if one may dare to give that name to some of the pleasant flatteries which go with the other ingredients to make up a St. Andrew's Dinner in India. It was no hasty speech—fluent, and tripping on the tongue—which Lord Dufferin gave utterance to at Calcutta on Friday evening last. The gathering that night was composed of representatives of all classes of the British community, official and non-official, in India, and no doubt there were representatives of Native opinion, Hindu and Mahomedan, amongst the listeners, if not amongst the guests at table. But to one and all Lord Dufferin spoke the words which the telegraph wire conveyed this morning to England, and which we reproduce in another column. Those words will have certainly their weight in India; but we hope that they will also be weighed here too. We trust that those Englishmen at home who declare that they take an honest and independent interest in the condition of the Indian people, and wish well for the future of India itself, will read aright the lesson which the departing Viceroy's words convey. India is not to be governed by theories and sentiments, however philosophical or philanthropic, which do not dovetail with the practical work of ruling justly but firmly that great heterogeneous Empire. Loyalty must be the very foundation on which every aspiration towards a freer political life must be built. The Paramount Power which holds India in its merciful and beneficent sway to-day cannot allow its good and noble work to be marred or trifled with by ignorant or self-seeking agitators. Lord Dufferin has spoken wisely and in time. His farewell is a warning and an encouragement—a warning to the foolish, and an encouragement to the wise—and a legacy worthy of the glad acceptance of his successor.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—NOVEMBER 27.

SIKKIM AND TIBETAN TRADE.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether an "authoritative statement of facts relating to Sikkim affairs" had been circulated to the Indian Press; and, if so, by whom and on whose authority; (2) whether that official statement recorded a difference of opinion between the Government of India and the home authorities as to the policy of the Macaulay Mission to Peking; and (3) whether Her Majesty's Government would take any steps to open up friendly relations with the Tibetan authorities, and to develop the Indian trade with Tibet through Sikkim, now that hostilities in Sikkim had come to an end.

Sir J. GORST: In reply to questions one and two I can only repeat what I stated on the 9th inst., that the Secretary of State has no knowledge of any such memorandum. In reply to the third question, the relations of the Government with Tibet are now engaging the attention of the Viceroy and the Government of India.

Nov. 29.

THE HYDERABAD SCANDAL.

Mr. T. O'CONNOR asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he could give any further information as to the manner in which the Viceroy had dealt with certain actions of Colonel Marshall in connection with the Hyderabad scandal; whether, as stated by the Deccan Times of Oct. 4, that "The Viceroy, though condemning the connection brought about by the private secretary (Colonel Marshall) between the Hyderabad Government and his relative, Mr. Watten, has accepted Colonel Marshall's explanation of the financial position to which public attention was recently drawn;" what Colonel Marshall's explanation was; and what steps had been taken to reimburse the Nizam's Treasury of the large sum of money which had been lost to it.

Sir J. GORST: The matters referred to in the question are, as I stated in August last, such as it is the function of the Viceroy and Government of India to deal with. No report of any such circumstances as are alluded to in the question has been made by the Government of India to the Secretary of State.

Nov. 30.

THE CEYLON LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

In answer to Mr. S. SMITH,

Baron H. DE WORMS said: The Royal assent has been given to an ordinance passed in 1886, and to an amending ordinance passed this year by the Ceylon Legislative Council for the registration of Mahomedan marriages, but such ordinances do not for the first time legalise Mahomedan polygamous marriages, the validity of such marriages having been previously recognised by the law of Ceylon. A memorial addressed to the Secretary of State against these ordinances was received and considered before the advice was given to Her Majesty to allow them to remain in operation. It would seem hardly worth while to present the memorial to Parliament, but if, after seeing it at the Colonial Office, the hon. member presses for it, it can be presented, with the correspondence thereon.

MR. NOLAN's report on Lower Burma as a field for emigration is now before the Government of India.

THE DELHI CAMP.

The following is the detail of Brigadiers, Staff Officers, &c., for the Cavalry Camp of Instruction at Delhi, assembled on Nov. 29th:—

Commanding Division, Brigadier-General C. Luck, C.B., Inspector-General of Cavalry in India; Assistant Adjutant-General, Colonel J. C. Stewart, 7th Bengal Cavalry; Deputy Assistant Adjutants-General, Major F. W. Benson, 7th Lancers, and Major S. B. Beatson, 11th Bengal Lancers; Orderly Officers, Lieut. the Hon. H. A. Lawrence, 17th Lancers, Lieut. G. C. C. D'Aguilar, 17th Lancers, Lieut. A. D. A. King, Royal Horse Artillery, and Lieut. G. P. Brasier-Creagh, 9th Bengal Lancers; Principal Medical Officer, the Senior Medical Officer in Camp.

ARTILLERY.

Commanding Royal Horse Artillery, Colonel F. W. Ward, R.H.A.; Staff Officer, Major H. V. Cowan, R.H.A.; F.A.

Royal Horse Artillery; G.A., Royal Horse Artillery; L.A., Royal Horse Artillery. 1st Brigade.—Brigade Major, Major M. G. Neeld, 17th Lancers. Troops.—5th Hussars, 13th Bengal Lancers, 19th Bengal Lancers. 2nd Brigade.—Commanding, Colonel H. F. Grant, C.B., 7th Dragoon Guards; Brigade Major, Captain H. M. Mackenzie, 9th Bengal Lancers; Orderly Officer, Lieut. A. G. Peyton, 19th Bengal Lancers. Troops.—3rd Dragoon Guards, 11th Bengal Lancers. 3rd Brigade.—Brigade Major, Captain R. T. G. Lowry, 1st Dragoon Guards. Troops.—7th Dragoon Guards, 5th Bengal Cavalry.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the discontinuance of the use of stable jackets by British cavalry regiments in India, and the substitution in lieu thereof of a serge coat as an article of necessaries. The stable jackets now in use may, however, be kept in wear until worn out.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the Hall Line of steamers being placed provisionally for one year on the same footing as the P. and O., British India, and Star Companies in respect to officers travelling by such steamers being exempted from the penalty attached to overstaying furlough or leave which they may have incurred in consequence of any delay in the arrival of the vessel in which they return to India, provided that they take their passage in a steamer timed to arrive within the period of their leave.

MAJOR J. STUART, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and Major E. Bruce, Squadron Commander, 19th Bengal Lancers, have been appointed to collect transport statistics of the resources of certain districts in the Punjab. These officers will be allowed actual travelling expenses plus a deputation allowance of Rs. 5 per diem.

GREAT decrease in regimental crime has taken place since the soldier was deprived of ammunition. Returns for the first twelve months during which the new system has been under trial have now been completed, and the results they bring out are very remarkable. Comparing 1887-88 with 1886-87 there are seventeen less suicides, sixteen less murders, four less attempts to murder, and ten less attempts to commit suicide: in all a reduction of 47 cases. As the total number of crimes under the four heads in 1886-87 was 110, this gives a decrease during last year of over 42 per cent.—an astonishing fact.

Miscellaneous.

MR. DALGLEISH'S MURDER.—The Turkestan Gazette states that M. Petrovsky, the Russian Consul at Kashgar, reports that several objects belonging to Mr. Dalgleish, including a rifle, have been found in the possession of the Natives of Kashgaria. Notwithstanding this the Chinese authorities have not shown any inclination to institute an inquiry into the matter.

SALE OF A HINDOO GOD.—Among the more important objects forming part of a collection of Burmese, Indian, and Japanese curios advertised for sale by auction by Messrs. Phillips, Son, and Neal, of New Bond-street, on Wednesday next, is an Indian idol of same value and celebrity. This is stated to be the representative of a deity to whom Hindoo women pay peculiar worship, and is known as the original "Lingam God," to whose shrine at Delhi thousands of every rank journeyed yearly from all parts of India to pay their devotions for a period covering about 1,000 years until about 1193, when the Mahomedan conqueror, Kutb-ud-din, having wrested Delhi from the Hindoo Kings, destroyed the 27 Hindoo temples. The "Lingam God" consists of an extraordinary chrysoberyl cat's-eye, of great size and brilliancy, set in a large yellow topaz, the whole supported on a native Indian gold base, incrustured with diamonds and set round with nine gems, called the nine charms—namely, diamond, ruby, sapphire, chrysoberyl cat's-eye, coral, pearl, hyacinthine garnet, yellow sapphire, and emerald.

AGAIN we have to chronicle a fresh addition to the fleet of the P. and O. Company. The Peninsular, one of the two new mail steamers building at the yards of Caird and Company, at Greenock, has just made trial her trip, and developed a very satisfactory rate of speed. This fine vessel, with her sister-ship the Oriental, is well fitted to maintain the high reputation of the well-known company. She is 410 feet long and 48 feet beam, with a gross register tonnage of 5,000 tons, and is intended to accommodate 155 first and 50 second-class saloon passengers. Whether on deck or below, there is no lack of improvements of all sorts, and it would be hard to say whether the safety or the luxurious comfort of the passengers has been most studied. Her eight water-tight compartments, her ample supply of lifeboats with patent disengaging gear, her steam launch, her ample precaution against fire are all admirably adapted to attain the former object, while the noiseless hydraulic machinery, the cold chambers for provisions and ice production, the rooms and lofty cabins, the handsomely designed dining-room and saloons, the work of the architect of the Imperial Institute, all point to the great forethought and consideration bestowed on the latter. This perfect specimen is destined to reinforce the Company's Indian and China Mail Service, and her first voyage will be to Bombay direct, leaving London on the 7th inst.

LEPROSY IN INDIA.—A recent resolution of the Government of India refers to the subject of leprosy in that country, and to the possibility of the State taking a more direct part in the prevention and treatment of the disease. When the matter first came under the consideration of the Government, the various local governments and departments were called on for statistics. In 1881, when the last census was taken, there were 131,618 lepers in British India, 98,982 being males and 32,636 being females. Of this number 53,884 were in Bengal, 17,842 in the North-West Provinces and Oude, over 14,000 in Madras, nearly 10,000 in Bombay, and the remainder, numbering about 5,500, in the Punjab. But these figures do not, the resolution says, represent accurately the extent of the disease. It is believed that the number of female lepers is greatly understated, as women, both in the lower and better classes, conceal the disease. The average age of attack is shown by recent investigations to be 26·18 years in anæsthetic cases, 18·9 in tubercular, 20·2 in mixed, and 20·25 in eruptive cases, so that a large number of persons liable to leprosy from hereditary taint die in childhood. The reports show that only 1 per cent. of the lepers come under organised relief in charitable institutions, the great majority preferring to be the objects of local charity, as they dislike the small amount of restraint to which they are liable in the institutions maintained for their treatment. No cure, pursues the resolution, has yet been discovered by medical science for leprosy, and the Governor-General in Council is assured that no measure could effectually stamp out the disease which stopped short of absolute segregation of the sexes, and the confinement for life of all affected by it. This, of course, is quite impracticable, and for the present the Government can do no more than encourage the grant of medical and charitable relief to lepers in voluntary hospitals and leper asylums. In these institutions the necessity of strictly segregating the sexes should invariably be kept in view, and it is desired that this condition should be imposed on every institution for the relief of lepers receiving aid from the public funds.

MAGAZINES.

Price Half-a-Crown.

THE ILLUSTRATED NAVAL and MILITARY MAGAZINE. A Monthly Journal devoted to all Subjects connected with Her Majesty's Land and Sea Forces.

This important representative Magazine has attained a very high position in all branches of the Naval and Military Services. The aim and intention of the Proprietors is that the Magazine should reflect the progress and advancement of the Armies and Navies of Great Britain and other Powers equally with their shortcomings, in a spirit of patriotic candour and fair criticism.

Each Number contains important experiments, with drawings, connected with the advancement of Naval and Military Science throughout the world, together with historical and other matter of great variety, fully illustrated. There is issued quarterly a comprehensive list of the locality of the Army and Navy, including the whole of the Volunteer Force, with the names of Commanding Officers.

Vols. I.-VIII. already issued, 18s. 6d. each. Cases for binding, 2s. 6d.; Reading covers, 3s. 6d.

Price One Shilling.

COLBURN'S UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE, with which is now amalgamated the Army and Navy Magazine. The Oldest and only Shilling Service Magazine. Published Monthly.

This publication, while retaining the most approved features of both the component Magazines, and while continuing, like them, to devote the larger part of each Number to questions directly concerning the Regular Army and the Royal Navy, gives due attention to the interests of the Militia, Yeomanry, Volunteers, and all the other armed forces of the Empire, including Indian and Colonial Troops. It treats of interesting professional questions of the day, Naval and Military History and Biography, and contains Critical Reviews of Books and other Publications, Notices of Current Events, and a fair proportion of Fiction.

Vols. I.-XIV. already issued, 7s. 6d. each. Cases for binding, 1s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS LIST.

ORIENT and OCCIDENT: a Journey East from Lahore to Liverpool. By Major-General R. C. W. REVELLEY MITFORD, Author of "To Cabul with the Cavalry Brigade." With Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

WELLINGTON! or, The Public and Private Life of Arthur, First Duke of Wellington, as told by Himself, his Comrades, and his Intimate Friends. By G. LATHOM BROWNE, Author of "Narratives of State Trials in the Nineteenth Century," &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED MILES ON a Burmese Tat, through Burma, Siam, and the Eastern Shan States. By an Ordinary British Subaltern, to wit, Lieutenant G. J. YOUNGHOUSE, Queen's Own Corps of Guides. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 5s.

TO GIBALTAR and BACK in an Eighteen Tonner. By ONE of the CREW. With Chart Illustrations from Sketches by B. GLOW MOORE, and Photographs. Crown 8vo. 6s.

New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo. paper boards, 1s. SHOOTING and YACHTING in the MEDITERRANEAN. With some Practical Hints to Yachtsmen. By Captain A. G. BAGOT ("BAGATELLE").

"Mr. Bagot has written a capital little book, which every gunner and yachtsman, if not every sportsman, should read. The reader, even if he has never seen the sea, becomes an enthusiastic sailor before he has read a couple of chapters, and he is then taken in the most entertaining manner nearly all round the Mediterranean."—Land and Water.

"The author of this brightly written book, being a practised sportsman, is enabled to present the reader with a work not only interesting from a yachtsman's point of view, but really valuable as conveying the result of dearly-bought experience."—Morning Post.

MILITARY MOSAICS: a Set of Tales and Sketches on Soldierly Themes. By JOHN ARCTURUS O'SHEA, Author of "Leaves from the Life of a Special Correspondent." Crown 8vo. 5s.

Land and Water says:—"Military Mosaics" is a safe and healthy book for older boys who turn their thoughts towards the god Mars, and it is a delightful source of recreation to maturer readers."

The Scotsman says:—"They form a collection which will recommend itself to the good graces of lovers of a book of adventure, and they present several studies of the British soldier which are worthy of a deeper attention than is usually accorded to works of fiction."

Now ready, small 4to. 1s., with 14 Full-Page Coloured Illustrations, and 16 in Monotype.

FOLLOWING the DRUM. Sketches of Soldier Life in Peace and War, Past and Present. The Verses Selected and Illustrated by RICHARD SIMKIN.

"The volume is one of the daintiest books of Soldiering that has ever come under our notice."—Sheffield Telegraph.

"The little book is beautifully got up, being quite an artistic production, and in its way altogether unique."—Kentish Observer.

"Some of the Illustrations are very spirited, and all are more or less clever, and are very correct."—Fun.

"The drawing is good and the colouring bright and attractive. A very pleasing publication."—Army and Navy Gazette.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This assertion is necessary, as many persons have repurchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy they sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria. IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. In 18-carat gold cases, £12. Our Ladies' Watches are made with beautifully chased cases at the same Reduced Price. Gold and Silver Jewellery at Wholesale Prices.

Cheques and Post Office Orders must be made payable to J. B. DENT. Catalogues Free.

Wanted, at home and abroad, travellers, agents, canvassers, shopkeepers, timekeepers, foremen of works, clerks, and others, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved, to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Our naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers are invited to apply for the post. The means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service.

Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 23rd November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 21st November; and from Calcutta to the 20th November.

THE Viceroy, the Marchioness of Dufferin and suite arrived at Lahore on Wednesday evening, Nov. 14th. Addresses were received and replied to, and a dinner party was given in the evening at Government House, the day closing with a conversazione in the Montgomery Hall. Their Excellencies left for Patiala on Friday, arriving there the next day. A grand Durbar was held in the afternoon, at which the Viceroy made an important speech, explaining how the Government of India intended to utilise the offers made by Native States for the defence of the Empire. In the evening there was a banquet and an evening party. Shortly after one o'clock on Sunday morning an alarm of fire was raised in the Viceroy's enclosed camp. The tent occupied by Lady Helen Blackwood was seen to be in flames, which spread with such rapidity that in a few minutes the whole structure and everything in it was destroyed. Lady Helen had luckily seen the fire start near the fireplace, and managed to escape in time.

THE MARCHIONESS OF DUFFERIN, accompanied by Ladies Helen and Hermione Blackwood and Major Cooper, left Patiala by special train on Monday night, Nov. 19, for Agra, arriving there the next day. Sir Auckland Colvin, Lucknow the same evening, met the party. Her Excellency opened the female hospital, and laid the foundation-stone of the lying-in ward, rejoining the Viceroy at Tundla. The Viceregal party passed through Allahabad on their downward journey to-day.

DURING the past week His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by General Chesney, Sir Charles Dilke, and a large party, visited the defence works at the Ghaziband Pass and at Murghi Kotal. On Nov. 14 Sir Frederick Roberts left Quetta on his ten days' ride to the Derajat, and reached Hurnai in the evening. His Excellency proceeded to Loralai, inspecting the fort at Singarhi on the way. Sir Frederick does not stop at Dera Ghazi Khan, but goes straight on to Nowshera and Hoti Mardan, and thence to Peshawar.

SIR CHARLES DILKE, after leaving the Commander-in-Chief at Peshawar, his view of the frontier defences being then complete, will repair straightway to Karachi, which he was to leave early next month on his way home. He and Lady Dilke stop some time with Sir Edgar Vincent in Cairo.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT goes down from Poona to Bombay at the end of this week to go over the harbour defences with General Chesney.

LORD CONNEMARA has returned to Madras from his recent tour, and laid the foundation-stone of the Victoria Female Hospital at Nellore on November 12th. He spoke at length on the benefit of female medical aid in India, and took occasion to pay a high compliment to the efforts made by the Marchioness of Dufferin in this direction.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, arrived at Chandbally on the 15th and Cuttack on the 16th Nov. At each place he was met by all the local and district notables, and received the usual addresses.

SIR CHARLES AITCHISON, with Lady Aitchison and family, left Karachi by a Hall Line steamer on Nov. 17, making over charge of the Home Membership of Council by telegraph to the Hon. Mr. Hutchins, who is at present in Bombay.

THE HON. MR. D. M. BARBOUR, Financial Member of Council, who was a passenger by the last mail, has gone straight through from Bombay to Calcutta.

MR. H. M. DURAND, Foreign Secretary, did not go with the Viceroy to Patiala, but left Lahore for Hyderabad, from whence he will proceed to Darjeeling, where he meets Mr. Paul, the Commissioner, in order to confer with him on the Thibet question.

THE VICEROY will not make any permanent arrangements with regard to the Hyderabad Residentsip now vacant through the retirement of Sir Lepel Griffin, but will leave the Marquis of Lansdowne to decide as to the future occupant of the post.

MAJOR-GENERAL D. MACFARLAN, who has been detained for some time at Umballa through indisposition, arrived in Allahabad on the 14th November, and assumed command of the Division.

ORDERS have been issued for the withdrawal of the troops from the Black Mountain. General Channer's Brigade of the Hazara Field Force has already been broken up at Abbottabad. The General proceeds to Jullundur as Colonel on the Staff to command the station.

THE Government of India have issued orders for the break-up of the Sikkim Field Force.

GENERAL GALBRAITH visited the Viceregal Camp at Patiala, the Viceroy being desirous of seeing him on his return from the Black Mountain.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. O. BARNARD has arrived at Jubbulpore, and taken over command of the Nerbudda District from Colonel H. C. Kemble, who proceeds on furlough to England.

FOLLOWING on the appointment of Colonel R. P. Nisbet to the Residentsip in Kashmir, Mr. C. M. Rivaz, Secretary to the Punjab Government, becomes Commissioner; Mr. C. L. Tupper, Junior Secretary, becomes Secretary; and Mr. H. C. Fanshawe, Officiating Junior Secretary, takes the substantive appointment.

MR. D. M. BARBOUR, C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, having succeeded the Hon. Sir Auckland Colvin, K.C.M.G., K.I.E., Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W. Provinces, as ordinary member of the Governor-General's Council, the announcement was made by a salute fired at Calcutta, on November 22nd, on his taking upon himself the execution of his office.

A MEETING of subscribers to the General Jubilee Fund is to be held at Bombay, at which a suggestion made by certain Native gentlemen of the city will be considered, that the balance of the fund, amounting to Rs. 35,000, may be appropriately devoted to the construction of a ward, to be called the Empress Victoria Ward, to be erected in the Zenana Hospital at Calcutta, under the auspices of the National Association for providing female medical aid.

LORD LANSDOWNE will probably visit Burma this cold season, and open the Tougoo-Mandalay Railway.

LETTERS received in Peshawar on November 8th, show that the Amir was at Burj Guljan, near Ghikirikar. Attaulla Khan was with him.

THE Amir, according to letters received on Nov. 14th, had reached Sarbadi Khinjan some days previously.

THE Minister for Hyderabad has accepted a muzzar from Abdul Huq, which is supposed to be some sort of reconciliation.

THE proposed expedition against the Shendies has been negatived.

THE detachment of the 9th Bengal Infantry despatched to Chittagong will be employed as a reserve to the frontier force.

THE Upper Burma summary reports that sixteen dacoits of Tha Dun's gang have surrendered in Sagaing.

A CHIN raid into the Yaw sub-division of the Pokoka District on Oct. 29th was repulsed by the Myook of Langshe.

A SHARP fight between the police and dacoits is reported from Mugwe, in which the police lost nine killed, and had to retire, their ammunition running short.

A CONFERENCE of delegates from the various subordinate Governments is shortly to be held to discuss the proposals contained in the recent despatch on the subject of provincial allotments.

MR. JOHN MCLEOD CAMPBELL, Collector of Land Revenue and Customs, Commissioner of Income-tax, and Superintendent of Stamps and Stationery, Bombay, who left on sick leave, died at sea before reaching Aden.

THE Bengal-Nagpore line to Raipur is already completed, and the portion to Rajnandgaon will soon be so.

THE construction of the Indian Midland Railway, which is being rapidly pushed forward, is now expected to be completed by July next.

At a meeting of the Bombay Presidency Association Mr. Caine, who was instrumental in forming the Anglo-Indian Temperance Society in England, advised the establishment of a branch committee in Bombay, with the result that a provisional committee was appointed.

MR. E. BADEN-POWELL AND MR. J. FRIZELLE have been appointed judges of the Chief Court, Punjab.

STORMS at Nagpore have done some harm to the cotton crops, otherwise prospects are encouraging.

A SUM of Rs. 69,850 has been raised in Calcutta for the projected Dufferin Zenana Hospital.

THE Commission, appointed to inquire into the charges against Mr. Arthur T. Crawford, after sitting twenty-five days, has investigated about a third of the entire list.

AMONG the arrivals by last mail were Viscount and Viscountess Galway, the Earl of Scarbrough, Colonel Hill, C.B., M.P., the Hon. G. H. P. Evans, and Sir Raymond and Lady West.

M. PIQUET, the new Governor of Pondicherry, has taken over the duties of his office.

THIRTY-FIVE lives were lost by the capsizing of a ferry boat on the Nerbudda on the 20th November.

THE overdue steamer Vaiturna, with 700 passengers on board, is still missing.

THE Bombay High Court has reopened after the October vacation.

MR. MOYLAN'S case came up before the Calcutta High Court on the 16th November, and the hearing of the appeal was fixed for the 28th November.

CROP prospects have greatly improved during the past week.

OBITUARY.—Mr. J. McLeod Campbell, B.C.S.; Mr. Framjee Dadabhoy Karaka, father of Mr. Dosabhoy Framjee, C.S.I.

THE Sheriff of Calcutta has been asked by the Government of Bengal to furnish a statement showing the income and expenditure of his office. The recent decision of the Government of India for a monthly grant as office allowance to the Sheriff has been held in abeyance, pending the receipt of the return called for by the local Government.

NOTES

THE MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE arrived at Calcutta on Saturday, and received a cordial greeting. He assumes the Viceregal duties to-day. He has wisely, since he landed in India, declined to allow himself to be "drawn" by "addresses" from any source whatever into a declaration of policy, and is sensibly acting on the hint which on a certain occasion was said to be given by Lord Beaconsfield—"No programme."

THE Pall Mall Gazette, whose evening sustenance is sensationalism, came out with the following on Saturday:—

ALLEGED LEGAL OUTRAGE IN INDIA.

Bombay, Dec. 7, 3.30 P.M.

Editor, Pall Mall Gazette, London.—At Patna, yesterday, a magistrate consigned Christian girl, whom he holds to be under fourteen years of age, to life of infamy. Under magistrate's order girl torn amidst her piteous screams and struggles from arms of Miss Abraham, Church Missionary Society Zenana Mission, and handed over to immoral man, to whom her mother had sold her. Is there no power in the British realm to prevent this and save this child? We exhausted all legal expedients prior to yesterday. "Whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea."—ALFRED S. DYER, Editor, Bombay Guardian.

Our representative saw Professor Stuart in the House of Commons last night on the subject. He had also received a telegram from Mr. Dyer. Sir R. Fowler and several other members have given notice of their intention to interpellate the Government on Monday about this alleged outrage. Professor Stuart believes that the affair is connected with the C.D. Acts, but of this there is at present no proof.

MR. H. WILSON, M.P., is to ask the Under-Secretary of State for India this evening if similar information to the above has reached him, and whether he will telegraph for further particulars from India. We feel assured that the true information when it arrives will not altogether accord with that given by Mr. Dyer to the Pall Mall Gazette. Mr. Dyer, like Mr. Stead, is a "superior person," and in his moral Bombay Guardian he has been lately lamenting that Sir Charles Dilke has been received in any society in India, and, to make things pleasant for him and spicy for the readers of the Guardian, Mr. Dyer has been reprinting choice pieces of the evidence in the celebrated Dilke scandal case. All, of course, is done for virtue's sake.

THE Rangoon Times comments on the want in many places in Burma of light railways costing from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 30,000 per mile, and thinks that there are many firms of English capitalists who would be glad to construct such lines which would open out the country, and tend to its pacification. It holds that private companies would do the work much cheaper than it would be done by the Public Works Department, which is likely enough; but we take leave to doubt whether English capitalists, in England at least, will care to put money into Burmese railway schemes without some sort of guarantee. The Government of India is not likely to offer such an attraction, so unless the English capitalists can be found in Burma or India the lines desired must remain in abeyance or be made by the P.W.D. The Burmese quickly recognise the advantages of improved locomotion between commercial centres, and it is possible that the required capital may be found in Rangoon itself. But not in London; investors here will put money into the wildest speculations all over the globe, without any guarantee beyond the roseate statements of a prospectus; but they mistrust Indian securities for reasons which only the high priests of the Stock Exchange understand.

OUT of evil good often comes. The same paper thinks it is likely that the formation of the English salt syndicate and the rise in freights will so considerably increase the price of foreign salt in Burma as to induce the Burmese again to take to manufacturing their salt locally. Large numbers of the people, we are told, will be able to find a living in this industry at places bordering the sea-coast who of late years, owing to the quantity and comparative cheapness of foreign salt, have abandoned this occupation. The Rangoon paper hopes that as soon as practicable the increased tax on salt will be removed, as it is felt to be a great hardship. The Burmese are greater salt consumers than most people in the East. They use a great deal in preserving fish, and in the manufacture of their nappi or fish paste, which is consumed by old and young alike at every meal. It is argued that the Government should therefore treat the Burmese liberally in this matter of salt duty. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that the Burmese pay a heavy capitation tax, levied in no part of India, besides other imperial and municipal imposts. Thus the hardship involved in raising the salt duties on such a people is greater, we are told, than in India, where the poorer classes undoubtedly consume much less of this necessary of life.

THE Punjab Volunteer is evidently without honour in the place where he most seeks to be regarded with honour. Amongst the "special correspondent's" gossip from Simla we read the following in one letter:—"I am personally of opinion that the Indian volunteer as seen at Simla is too sociable a creature to be of much use in time of need. When the time comes I daresay he will fight, but so will also any other of God's creatures when driven to bay. At present he is thinking of starting a volunteer club, and breaking faith with his bandmaster. Of the proposed club I should speak more hopefully, seeing that it will be an institution for the promotion of good-fellowship by means well known to the men in this place, but, knowing the people well, I am afraid that nothing will come of the proposal unless Government gives the corps a free house and money to buy the liquor."

THE injustice done to the bandmaster is explained in a brief history of the band of the Simla Volunteers—how it was created, and how it has been supported:—

Five years ago, while out on a pic-nicing fieldday, half-a-dozen men, after tiffin and gallons of ale, started an impromptu concert with a few flutes and fifes which accident threw in their way. There and then the players formed themselves into a band, and the men marched up to their playing. The amusement was continued for some little time, until a new Commandant sought popularity by organising a regular Volunteer band. Mr. Walker gave the instruments, a number of Goorkha musicians were enticed away from their regiments, and one of the best musicians in India, Signor Rossetti, was induced to lead them. He fell into the hands of the Philistines when he came to Simla as head of the Volunteer band. The band subscriptions dribbled in slowly at first, but the contributions soon stopped; the volunteer preferred spending his money on heady hill beer, and the Commandant, Colonel Walker, had for some time to bear almost the entire cost of the band. But he had his reward; a C.I.E. sent him away to England happy, and since his departure the band has had to send round the hat over and over again simply to pay expenses. During the time Signor Rossetti has been here he has taught the Ghoorkas some fifty or sixty tunes, an ample stock in the opinion of the officers for all practical purposes, and they have dismissed the bandmaster they never supported.

Colonel Walker is, however, on his return journey to Simla, and his purse and energy will no doubt be again placed at the disposal of the gallant "cheap" defenders of the Indian Capua.

THE serenity of the eternal hills does not in India always control the actions of the sojourners amongst them. At Mussoorie there is an editor—Dr. Hawthorne—and a Magistrate of the 1st Class—Mr. Galbraith—and they lately met under the following circumstances, as recorded by an Allahabad paper:—

The Beacon, a little paper edited by Dr. Hawthorne, has published several articles reflecting upon the way the wife of a Civil Servant has disposed of the funds derived from the various concerts, theatrical entertainments, &c. A few evenings ago the husband of the traduced lady met Dr. Hawthorne at the Criterion on the Mall and gave him a sound thrashing.

He broke a stick over the editor's back, knocked him down, and finally kicked him out of Mr. Wutzler's well-known restaurant.

It has been said that the pleasure of kicking an Editor is, if one of the most expensive, still one of the most exquisite of mundane enjoyments, and this enjoyment must be enhanced if the editor does not kick back or bring an action-at-law. Dr. Hawthorne has done neither.

BUT he has written a letter to the Editor of the Civil and Military Gazette, inviting the sympathy of a brother of the pen. He says:—"For a man holding the position of a 1st Class Magistrate to publicly assault an Editor because a certain paragraph did not please him is beyond all bounds of decency. If you give it a passing mention I shall feel thankful." The Editor appealed to does give it a passing notice, and this is it:—"With regard to Mr. Galbraith's action we can only say that there are some provocations which few human beings can be expected to put up with. There are breaches of the law not to commit which argues in a husband a want of ordinary human feeling. Most Englishmen similarly placed with Mr. Galbraith would have acted similarly." If Dr. Hawthorne is thankful for this he is thankful for very small mercies.

A MILITARY correspondent, writing to the Pioneer on the conduct of operations in the Black Mountain Expedition, argues against what he calls "the senseless marching backwards and forwards of sentries" on outpost duty, especially at night. He holds that "a sentry should be made to lie down in the best spot for observation, whence he can see and hear best, and only occasionally go along his beat." The Mandalay Herald says that the experiment has been tried in Upper Burma with the Punjabi Police levies there; but it has hardly been successful, for "to expect Punjabis to lie down while on sentry duty and not to sleep is a condition that greatly modifies the value of the suggestion." Very true, but the idiosyncrasy is not confined to the Punjabi. We have known of the British sentinel accepting "slumber" as a phase of his duty on outpost work also.

THE Burma paper has, however, a remedy against the sleepiness of sentinels in such a position:—"There are means by which, we think, even Punjabis can be developed into sleepless sentinels when ordered to lie down as sentries. If the dacoits would only creep up and slaughter them every time they see a sleeping sentry the chances are the Punjabi will not generally fall asleep, for no one loves a whole skin more dearly than he does. At the expense of two or three dozen sentries the rest of the military police force might learn that they must keep awake, even when lying down, if on duty." The remedy advised is, perhaps, a little drastic, but it might prove effectual.

THE Simla "season" being ended for the present year, a "special" correspondent, who had been sent there to report the doings of the "gods" for the benefit of a Calcutta daily, thus winds up the season and himself:—"I know of no truer comparison than that which likens the Simla season to an act in a play. There is the same glitter and the same feeling of unreality; though the doings of some player may affect to tears a distant audience, those behind the scenes see only a buckram-clad mummer, who mouths resolutions and grins in dockets. Nothing is earnest, nothing real, save the fact that we are all self-deceiving humbugs."

KUNHI KANNAN, Deputy Collector and Magistrate of Calicut, has been found guilty by the Sessions Court, South Malabar, of bribery, and has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 3,000. Anandan, a local pleader and brother to the Deputy Collector, was found guilty of abetment, and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 500. The first month's imprisonment is to be simple. Both the accused were found "not guilty" of extortion.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 9.

Lord Lansdowne arrived in Calcutta yesterday, being received with the usual honours, and in the evening entertained by Lord Dufferin at a State banquet. He will assume office to-morrow, and Lord Dufferin will then leave for Bombay.

The record of the week is chiefly a report of addresses of welcome to the new Viceroy and valedictory addresses to the departing one; but, in view of the profound impression created by Lord Dufferin's splendid oratory at the Scottish dinner, the various answering speeches of the two statesmen appear relatively flat and colourless. Lord Lansdowne is commended, however, by the Press for his sagacious refusal to express at present any opinion on the political situation. A silly and disloyal address had been drafted on behalf of the Calcutta Municipality, with the evident intention of conveying implied censure on Lord Dufferin, and of committing Lord Lansdowne to support of the Congress agitation. But in the end more prudent counsels prevailed, and the address will probably now take a less offensive form.

Lady Dufferin has been engaged in prosecuting her noble mission to the end. On Wednesday she performed the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the Dufferin Zenana Hospital. On the day before—Tuesday—a very remarkable and picturesque scene occurred at Government House. Lady Dufferin received, in solemn state in the throne-room, 700 Native ladies, who attended for the purpose of presenting an address. This portion of Government House had been converted into a jealously-guarded zenana. Every man was rigidly excluded, and even the Viceroy was compelled to absent himself from Government House until the ceremony had concluded. A lady correspondent states that the ceremonial presented a marvellous pageant, lit up with flashing jewels, and brilliant with varied colouring; while the occasion of the assemblage induced an attitude of graceful sympathy, which exalted its character from an exhibition of scenic pomp into a touching display of human emotion. In the course of her reply to the address Lady Dufferin said:—

"On returning to England I shall have no greater pleasure than that of conveying to the Empress your expressions of loyalty and gratitude, and of assuring her of the stability and vitality of a work in which Her Majesty has ever taken so great and active an interest."

An appreciative resolution signed by the Viceroy has been gazetted, referring to the Black Mountain Campaign, Generals Channer and Galbraith being prominently mentioned. General M'Queen in his despatch returns his best thanks to General Channer for his loyal support throughout the operations, as well as for the able manner in which he carried out all the duties entrusted to him. Deep regret is expressed at the loss of Colonel Crookshank and Captain Beley, and a fitting tribute is paid to their distinguished merits and careers.

An important conference of delegates from Madras, Bombay, the North West Provinces, and Bengal will meet shortly to discuss the question of provincial relations to Imperial finance. A late financial member of the Government of India will preside, and the Hon. C. Macaulay, financial secretary, will represent Bengal.

It is understood that Lord Dufferin has forwarded to the Home Government a scheme for increasing to thirty the number of Members of the Imperial Legislative Council, a portion to be elected by the various sections of the community.

His Lordship considers it essential that the paramount authority of the Viceroy should be upheld.

LORD SALISBURY AND THE INDIAN PRESS.

(Daily News Correspondent.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

The Bombay Gazette, referring to the recent speech of Lord Salisbury at Edinburgh, in which he spoke of the Hon. Dadabhai Naoroji as a black man, says:—"He seems to have spoken in terms as impolitic as discourteous. We can only hope that fuller accounts will modify the bad impression necessarily made by his illjudged and illnatured reference."

The Bombay Times of India refuses to believe that Lord Salisbury ever spoke as has been reported. It says:—"A black Parsee would be a greater rarity than a black tulip. The whole thing is a cock-and-bull story only worth protest because the words put into the mouth of the Prime Minister are calculated to stir up race feeling and make bad blood amongst the Native papers."

The Calcutta Indian Mirror yesterday had a long article, in which it says:—"The British Prime Minister has perpetrated an unpardonable and moral outrage. He has abused his position, degraded himself, and has forgotten the great traditions of his country and race, and its imperishable history. He has tarnished the honour of the Empire, broken the behests of his Sovereign, and insulted the glory of the British Constitution. His words were a libel, not only on Mr. Naoroji, but on the whole Indian race. The deliberate insult to the people of India merits the Queen's severest displeasure. He is no longer fit to be a Minister of the Crown, far less Prime Minister. We shall not think much of English people and their love of fair play if they allow their fellow-subjects to be insulted with impunity. The Prime Minister's words are calculated to revive race differences and fan the dying embers of race animosity."

The Amrita Bazaar Patrika of Calcutta calls the news startling, and remarks:—"The other day the Hindoos and Mussulmans sent to England in connection with the Colonial Exhibition were presented, or rather exhibited, before the Queen along with Hottentots, bushmen, and other savages, and now we have the spectacle of the Prime Minister calling one of the Indian leaders a nigger, and appealing to the worst prejudices of his countrymen to oust him from an English constituency." These remarks are certainly not calculated to increase the loyalty of the Indian people to the British Crown.

The Bengalee of Calcutta says: "We are surprised that the English Prime Minister should have used such language. It represents not only a departure from the traditions of the great office which Lord Salisbury holds, but is inconsistent with that high-minded courtesy which English gentlemen of whatever party have always shown to their Indian fellow-subjects."

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

Official correspondence has just been published, in the form of a Blue Book, on the subject of the recent expedition against certain tribes inhabiting the Black Mountain, on the border of the Hazara district. The despatches give a detailed history of all the events antecedent to the despatch of the punitive expedition, as communicated to the Indian Government by the Secretary of the Punjab Government, and they are prefaced by a statement from the Government of India to Lord Cross. This sets forth that ever since the British occupation of the Punjab the tribes of this part of the frontier have given serious trouble, and the effect of the Black Mountain expedition of 1868 and of fines and blockades has been only transitory. The district concerned is a triangle, bounded on the north by the high mountains of Kohistan, on the west by the river Indus, and on the east by the British frontier. Within this area are found three principal tribes of Afghan origin—the Hassanzai, Akazai, and Chigarzai, which number respectively about 2,000, 700, and 3,000 fighting men. During the last few years offences have been committed by the Akazais, Hassanzais, the Parari Synds, who have some Chigarzai dependents living among them, and the Attaiwals, raids were made into British territory, and British subjects were murdered. The attitude of the Hassanzai tribe became refractory and the Punjab Government recommended active measures. The mild expedient of a blockade was first tried, but on June 18 a party of British troops was attacked by the tribes within the British frontier, and two English officers and four Ghoorikha soldiers were killed. The tribes concerned, on being asked for an explanation of this attack, gave defiant or unsatisfactory replies, and the Punjab Government strongly urged the despatch of a military expedition to the Black Mountain. After careful inquiries, the Indian Government was very reluctantly forced to the conclusion that, to ensure the peace and order of the frontier, this measure was desirable and necessary. The expedition forming when this despatch was written (Sept. 24) consisted of nearly 8,000 men, and a contingent of 1,000 men from the Native State of Cashmere. The Indian Government, in conclusion, invites the attention of the Secretary for India to the ready goodwill with which the Maharajah of Cashmere has offered the assistance of his troops on this occasion, and remarks that the Afridis of the Khyber also volunteered to serve against the tribes of the Black Mountain—which offers were very satisfactory, the second affording a remarkable proof of the extension of British influence across the border.

SELECTED officers from the Punjab Native States have been deputed to attend the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Delhi. This may be taken as an indication of the policy of the Government in connection with the offers of military aid by the Chiefs. The idea is said to be very popular in the States.

"VICTORY" OF BIMETALLISM.

(Englishman.)

Lord Herschell, President of the Currency Commission, who is now in India, questions the accuracy of the summaries of the Report Commission which have been telegraphed by Reuter, and by correspondents of two of our contemporaries. The Commission, in particular, did not present a unanimous report, as seems to be implied in these summaries. There were differences of opinion among the members on many subjects, and the report contains a statement of the views of the dissentients, embodied in some cases in separate subsidiary reports. Mr. Barbour's dissent, which is thus published, is an elaborate paper in which the special dangers to India are powerfully represented, the writer going the length of declaring that an aggravation of the evil might compel the Government to abandon the coinage of silver, a course in which it might probably be anticipated by America. Certainly the manner in which the results of the Commission have been placed before India is most unsatisfactory. Our special London telegram was published in Calcutta twenty-four hours before Reuter's, and thus conveyed the first intelligence to the greater part of Bengal, Orissa, and Assam. It stated that the Commission was equally divided, six members being for and six against bimetalism, and, although this was contradicted by Reuter, there is every reason to believe that it is absolutely correct. Reuter told us that the Commission proposed the free coinage of both metals, the imposition of a fixed ratio, and, as if it were something quite distinct, the restoration of the bimetallic system along with America, Germany, and the Latin Union. The error which vitiates the whole of this message, rendering it worse than useless, is to be traced in a telegram to an Allahabad paper which has fallen under the fascination of Mr. Moreton Frewen. Here, again, we read that the Commissioners recommended bimetalism, but a telegram received on the following day must have given a painful shock to the enthusiastic believer in a currency millennium. At the fulfilment of its wildest hopes, our contemporary throws doubt and caution to the winds, and hails with delicious, dithyrambic joy the "complete victory of the bimetalists," and the confusion of the scoffers. "Apparently without a single dissentient voice they have subscribed to all the chief tenets of bimetallic doctrine, and at the same time have made specific proposals for giving them effect." A wonder has been wrought; heresy has become the true faith; unlovely opposition has suddenly vanished; six sceptical, stony-hearted Commissioners have fallen down and worshipped. "To the civilian remitter, to the uncovenanted servant, to the commercial investor in India, the news ought to be equally grateful; for no defeat of the Tibetans, no success on the Black Mountain, no suppression of dacoits, can mean so much to so many as this Currency Report." And then, to think that the cup should be dashed to the ground, and that the sanguine but guileless bimetalist should have to lament next morning that the Currency Report is a fraud, and means so little to so few! But Allahabad is not alone in being hoodwinked. A Bombay paper, just for the sake of variety, states, on the authority of a correspondent, that three-fourths of the Commissioners have pronounced for bimetalism. Bombay, Allahabad, and Reuter must, however, come round to an admission of the fact that bimetalism stands very much where it did, and that, at the close of the game of the Commission, as our telegram clearly stated on the first day, honours were found to be divided.

THE CURTAILMENT OF REPORTS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Sanitary Commissioner of Assam, in common with many others who have been asked to write shorter Reports, objects, and his indignation over the restriction can only be equalled by the indignation of the public at his objections. Long has the reader sought to attain a maximum of knowledge with the minimum of trouble; and although the knowledge obtained from great Government Reports was never much, there was some satisfaction when at least less trouble in lighter Reports was promised. When so much has, by strenuous exertion, been extorted from the Government, it is peculiarly aggravating to find Dr. Eteson striving to upset the new arrangements and to encroach on the right of the public to little statistics. The objection of the Sanitary Commissioner, too, is based on a reasoning very singular and unexpected. "I may be allowed to express here my anticipation that the Assam Report on Vaccination, if confined annually to the Government of India statements only, would be prejudicial to the progress and interest taken in the subject." This, of course, would indicate that Government acquires intelligence only when aroused with constant and copious statistics; and that there is no consciousness outside the Secretariat. That interest should be taken in a matter only when a person is besieged with figures perpetually, may be natural with a Government official, who is a singular being with strange, acquired tastes. But it would be likely to fail with the public. "Our Vaccination Department has lately taken vigorous growth, development and results, and will receive a material check by too heavy pecuniary charges." Here, again, is the underlying, constant apprehension that, once statistics decline on a subject it is doomed; and the cry in anticipation that, from heavy pruning, loss of esteem over such unstatisticality, will result. Otherwise, why should economy in printing and labour do anything else than allow of increased funds for carrying on the operations? But an official mind, speaking officially on official psychology, has in this disguised manner revealed the long-suspected fact that Government, in the eyes of some of those who carry it on, means nothing but statistics and tabulated matter.

RIVAL RAILWAY SCHEMES IN BURMA.

(Mandalay Herald.)

The first of these schemes is one that was first brought into public notice by the then intrepid traveller, Mr. R. A. Colquhoun, now settled down into the comparatively humdrum groove of a Deputy Commissioner in Upper Burma (Ruby Mines). Mr. Colquhoun has advocated a scheme based upon personal knowledge and observations. He would have private capital launch out in a line which would start from a south-western point of China (Samoo), and passing through independent Shan territory, and a large portion of the Kingdom of Siam, terminate at Moulmein. The route has been so often described and particularised that we will not repeat it again. The greatest objection to Mr. Colquhoun's railway project is that the most part of it will run through foreign territory, and the financial difficulties to it so far as regards the Government of India is concerned seem very formidable, if not insuperable. For we take it that no private syndicate or company will invest their money mostly in foreign territory without receiving an interest guarantee at least from our Government, and the Government of India is not likely to guarantee anything under these circumstances. Still less will the Government of India encourage a line of railway which runs through foreign countries with any money of its own, for it must be remembered that Burma of itself has not got the money, and if the Government of India undertakes this line it will have to do so with the assistance of moneys it derives from the taxpayers of India. It is, therefore, simply utopian to expect that such a diversion of Imperial funds will ever be even dreamt of. The taxpayer in India also is not likely to stand it. The Moulmein-Zimme project is, therefore, not likely to come to a head if it depends either on a Government guarantee or Government funds.

The other rival project is the Rangoon - Mandalay and Bhamorailay, which has the singularly valuable recommendation of being wholly, in its entire length, within our own ground, and which will not only open out the magnificent resources of our now newly-acquired dominion, but will be able to tap the trade of Western China. Another fact that pleads strongly and definitely in favour of this line is that up to Mandalay it is finished, and has only to be taken on to Bhamo to connect that trade emporium to Rangoon, the port of Burma. And, besides, we have no obstacles worth mentioning between this and Bhamo, from an engineer's point of view. Beyond Bhamo, and up to China, the country is much stiffer, being ruggedly mountainous. But the difficulty it presents cannot be taken to be insuperable, in the face of our engineering triumph, over and through the tumuli of ghauts between Poona and Bombay, to say nothing of what had been accomplished by us and others, in other parts of India, and other parts of the world.

But financial considerations are not the only ones that press into notice in considering the claims of these rival projects. Unfortunately the presence and policy of Russia in the matter of Asian railways, affect the question of Burma railways very largely. Russia has determined to bid against us for the overland trade to China. And this Russian railway-competition is a serious menace to any counter-scheme in Upper Burma that has the trade of China for an object. All that we hope to do by touching and running into some frontier town in Western China is to attract the trade that will have to travel to this point from the interior by the usual means of transport in the country. Similarly, this trade can be carried to a Russian Railway terminus in any other part of the frontiers of China, if by so doing the exports are booked direct to Europe without the changes that must befall it at Rangoon, before it leaves Burma for Europe, to say nothing of other transfers in Europe, all of which enhance the cost of transit. And here starts up the advantages of the Colquhoun-Hallett scheme. This line, if adopted, will tap just the opposite side of China to that which the Russian scheme will, and it will run through Siam, and by some 2,000 miles by sea, shorten the distance between that quickly developing country and Europe. And it also destroys the prospective danger of the French, on their side of Siam, plunging into railway schemes that, if accomplished, must be to the prejudice of any line we may wish for towards a Burman port. It might be urged that there is little chance of any French enterprise to the east of us and Siam succeeding, or being able to prejudice us, as the Moulmein-Zimme line will be so much nearer for exporters and importers to the respective destinations of their trade. This may be somewhat true, but it is not altogether true, for whether from perversity or not, people will use routes and means that are inferior to other existing ones. As an instance we have only to refer to the tremendous traffic yet done in carts along trunk roads in India, where railway facilities are open for transport. If the French are, therefore, before us in railways, they must prejudice the success of our Moulmein-Zimme project.

THE ANGLO-INDIAN MATRON OF FICTION.

(Madras Times.)

She has turned at last, has the Anglo-Indian Matron, and we must all admire her for it. Her detractors have had the platform to themselves for a very long term, and their abuse, if lacking in variety, has not been deficient in force and in reiteration. "Want of heart" was the mildest of the many accusations hurled against her. "Selfishness, utter frivolity, and insatiable vanity are her chief characteristics." We quote an eminent authority. "Real fondness she does not know the meaning of; and she is no more capable of a deep passion than a puddle is of floating an ironclad." Hill stations are the localities where her natural history can best be studied, for there she is supposed to be quite free from the moral supervision of her spouse. That poor gentleman is always depicted in his shirt-sleeves, enduring the toil and heat of the day in the plains, and, when not engaged in writing voluminous reports to Government, is generally supposed to be making remittances to his unworthy better-half. She, of course, needs the money for house-rent, for her children's frocks, shoes, stockings, and such-like; subscriptions to book-clubs, keeping a pony-cart, and mayhap a tat for her first-born? By no means. Were she guilty of such unworthy conduct, the grass-widow would be banished from every three-volumed novel with any pretence to respectability and the usages. No; the Anglo-Indian matron must behave in strict accordance with recognised traditions, or her existence will be entirely ignored. She must give up her whole soul to dances, theatricals, and pic-nics. She must strive to be the smartest dressed lady on the hills, and if bridal bloom and other aids to appearance can promote this end, they are not to be despised. She must also have a ready laugh, and a reputation for quick retort, and somehow manage to collect around herself an admiring circle of young men, one, or perhaps two, of whom are to be selected as her constant companions, whose devotion she will reward with numerous waltzes, and her prettiest flirtations. Children and charities—why if she were so to rebel against novel-writers as to bestow a thought upon either, she would forthwith be consigned to an ignominious oblivion!

And the Anglo-Indian matron has stood all this sort of thing for many years past. Perchance she has trusted that time, which has banished from Indian shores the once famous Mr. Joseph Sedley, will deal as mercifully with the traditionary Hill grass-widow. Or may be she has waited for such energetic righters of other people's wrongs as Mr. Caine, to take up her case, or to some lucid exponent that things are not always as they seem, such as Canon Taylor. Amongst the cold weather visitors of the ensuing season, she ought, in truth, to find some valiant champion. But alas! these travellers are not, as a rule, her friends, and it is against one of them that she now has a special grievance. He writes complacently from the quarter-deck of a P. and O. steamer, and, to make things thoroughly comfortable for those whom he is about to criticise, and to show them how competent he is for the task, he quotes Lucretius, to the effect that it is a pleasant thing to stand upon some lofty eminence and contemplate a storm at sea. From his elevated position he then proceeds to compare "the three chief branches of the Anglo-Saxon race—the Anglo-Indian, the American, and the English—of whom he finds representatives on board. The last—every traveller knows how much they frequent eastern seas—are to be recognised by the subdued tones in which they converse, by their frank admissions that they adore the opposite sex, and the ease with which they transfer their flirtations from one to another member of it, carefully hiding from public gaze the preference which they may, by any possibility, entertain. If married, they are never fast, at least, not on board ship. Such is the American. The English factor in this mentor's view is too well known to need description, but the demeanour of the Anglo-Indian lady (woman, he calls her) is fully analysed. She is not sociable, and seldom speaks to any of her own sex, unless the occasion be some quarrel. In bad weather her appearance is decidedly unattractive, for sea-sickness makes her yellow and dishevelled. When the weather is fine she looks well, but—and, of course, Lucretius is an authority on this point—only by the aid of toilette requisites. If she has any children on board, she leaves them to the care of her jaded-looking husband, unless their howls should exceed the endurance of her fellow-passengers, when she will be forced to break off a promising flirtation, and emerge from behind the wheel-house, her favourite resort, and throw away—no, not her fan, nor her shilling shocker, nor even her unfinished whisky and soda, but—her cigarette! Why say more? Our readers cannot fail to recognise the faithful portrait, and, sad as the whole picture is, to admit that it is one of the commonest on the homeward passage.

So, at last, the Anglo-Indian matron has turned, and replied with no little asperity to the traducer of her class. Disparagement of their complexion she will submit to, but to the remainder of the impeachment she deniurs strongly. The picture she declares to be false. "The typical mem sahib is not the gay, irresponsible creature of the novelist's imagination." "Her duty to husband and children often means hardship and self-sacrifice, and English women in India are not less earnest to fulfil their duties than English women at home. Year after year numbers of them brave the perils of a deadly hot season to stay by their husbands in the plains; and more would do it if they were allowed to." "The truth is that Anglo-Indian life, both for men and women, has much to make it pleasant and enjoyable; but neither can find much pleasure or profit therein without devoting to its duties an amount of anxious consuming toil and labour altogether incompatible with selfish frivolity." To all of which we say, most true. And we trust that this protest against the amenities of superficial and spiteful observers of life and manners in the East may not here come to an end. "Is the Anglo-Indian woman a failure?" would be a most edifying topic for the discussion of the London Press. Would it were possible for some of the idlers who think the subject worthy of their attention to pass a single day in the society of some specimens of the genus whose existence is a reality. They would have to be up at cock-crow, and follow a straight and stiff line across country; to be ready for breakfast by ten o'clock, and a couple of busy hours with the children afterwards; and to attend to multitudinous household affairs, and a large amount of letter-writing in the interval till tiffin; to spend the afternoon in visiting old women of the pauper class, and taking part in the economy of some association for the distribution of charity; and then, if they were equal to it, drive out to meet the husband, join in a bout of tennis for an hour or so, and still retain enough energy to entertain their hostess's guests at dinner and after. How many would retire to their couches muttering the word peccavi?

BENGAL.

(Nov. 30.)

SLIGHT rain has fallen in the Patna, Arrah, and Buxer districts, with the effect of checking the rise in the prices of breadstuffs in the local bazaars.

ASSAM trade means in a very great measure trade in Assam tea, and accordingly it is to the evidence it gives to the development in this direction that we mostly look in the recently issued records of river-borne trade for the province. Some years ago only 377,000 maunds were exported from the Brahmaputra Valley, and 196,000 from the Valley of the Surma; whereas last year the total export in the case of the former was 461,000 maunds, and in that of the latter of 313,000. In the Brahmaputra Valley the prices fell to some extent; but, despite this both the quantity and the value of the export over the whole of Assam was greater than the out-turn of any previous year of which there is a record. Clearly, the rapid advance which the Ceylon leaf is making in the markets of Europe has not as yet at any rate had any prejudicial effect on the prospects of the industry of Assam.

FROM Cuttack the Englishman learns that all fear of anything like famine in Orissa is at an end. The danger has been a good deal exaggerated in certain quarters, but now there is no longer any colour for wild stories of widespread suffering and impending calamity. The so-called relief works at Cuttack are some improvements on an estate, which attract about thirty-six persons. At one time, it is true, some 600 persons put in an appearance, but that was when the gathering was allowed to be a kind of picnic, and when no work was exacted. Gratuitous relief is being stopped in Balasore and Puri, as such aid is deemed altogether unnecessary. That the cultivators are not in great distress is evident from the fact that, at the worst time, an average advance of three rupees was amply sufficient to tide them over their troubles. Of course here, as elsewhere, the Marwarries ran up the prices of food stuffs, their tactics being greatly assisted by the outcry of mis-directed sympathy.

THE latest resolution of Lord Dufferin to the address of the Calcutta Municipality will not, says an Allahabad paper, endear him any more to that body of incorrigible insanitarists. This spring, it will be remembered, his Excellency, ere coming up-country, was venturesome enough to attempt the inspection of some of the less savoury portions of Calcutta, and nearly slew his Private Secretary in consequence. At least Sir Donald Mackenzie's serious indisposition on the road to Simla was universally attributed to his excess of loyalty in standing by his chief through all the filth of the bustees. Whether Lord Dufferin in the peace of Simla reflected on what he had seen, or whether Sir Donald, mindful of past sickness, urged him to revenge, or whether the ordinary correspondence of the Bengal Government was sufficient to move him to a Resolution, will never be known. Certain it is that a Resolution has been written, which ought to do the Calcutta Municipality a great deal of good if they accept its recommendations in a spirit of decent humility.

MADRAS.

WHILE at Venkatagiri, the Rajah of which Zemindary was recently appointed a Member of Council and invested a K.C.I.E., the Governor of Madras laid the foundation stone of the Jubilee Rest House to be erected by the Rajah. The Governor had a splendid reception. His Excellency said that he never saw such a procession in the East which recalled more vividly to his mind of days gone by when splendid processions were the usual accompaniments in most important ceremonies. He was pleased to find that the old splendour of the East was not dead yet.

THE Madras Times publishes an invitation to Professor Max Müller from a Native Thinker who writes:—"I do not know what difficulties there may be in his way; but I certainly think that this great Professor of the best language ever invented by man ought to pay a visit to India, now that the voyage has become so short. He would find India infinitely more interesting than he has ever conceived. He might easily meet some of the best Pundits and actually hear them read or recite the noblest writings of the ancient Richis in the very manner they themselves read or recited thousands of years ago. This alone might repay him for the visit. He might also discuss important points. His visit will be regarded by the Indian populations as a very high compliment to their antiquity and ancient wisdom. It would not be difficult to get up a subscription to pay the charges of his visit. I hope these lines will meet the eyes of the Professor."

BOMBAY.

MR. FRAMJEE S. BHOWNUGGUR, agent to H.H. the Thakore Sahab of Bhownuggur, has failed to persuade immigrants who have come to Bombay from the Bhownuggur State to go back to their native places where there is not the slightest trace of a famine. Relief works are, however, opened by his Highness, in case there might be anything like a famine in the future. Mr. Framjee has written to the honorary secretaries of the Famine Relief Fund to induce the immigrants to go back to their native country, the Bhownuggur State defraying the expenses.

At the trial (Nov. 16) of Lieutenant-Colonel Bulkley, he in his defence said that regarding the first three charges there could be no misapplication of money to his own use, as it did not reach him; but, on the contrary, it was utilized for mess purposes, as shown by cheques and receipts signed by merchants. Regarding the other three charges, prisoner contended that the custom of taking advances prevailed in the 17th Regiment as in other regiments, as proved by his witnesses. That these advances were readjusted at the next issue of pay was proved by various pay abstracts he produced, and that the law presumes the continuance of the custom until the contrary is shown. Regarding the last charge of general deficiency in the Band Fund, the prisoner quoted copiously from Mr. Barrett's evidence to show that his system of keeping accounts was defective and misleading, adding that if the accounts were properly readjusted, taking all the funds belonging to the regiment, so called, the deficit will vanish, and that Mr. Barrett relied upon one book or another, as suited his purpose, to show as large an amount against the prisoner as possible; and if those very books showed small amounts, he ignored them and took unsigned pencil memos as his authority. On Nov. 19 the prosecutor read the reply on the third charge sheet, and the Judge-Advocate summed up entirely against the prisoner. The Court then closed for deliberations and finding, and on reopening, the third charge sheet was proceeded with, showing a deficiency in the half mounting fund amounting to Rs. 4,815, nearly half of which was advanced to the hutting fund.

A MEETING of several of the members of the Medical Services of the Bombay Presidency was held in the Grant Medical College on the 14th Nov., to arrange as to the formation of the British Medical Association which had been proposed at a former meeting called at the suggestion of Surgeon-Major Maconachie. The bye-laws drawn up by the committee appointed at the first meeting were unanimously agreed to, and it was decided to forward them to the parent Association in England with a request that the local branch be recognised. Over fifty members of the Medical Services have agreed to join, and the following were elected office-bearers of the Branch:—President—Surgeon-General Pinkerton. Vice-Presidents—Surgeons-Major Banks and Maconachie. Members of the Committee—Brigade-Surgeon Preston; Surgeons-Major Hughes, MacRury and Parakh; Surgeons Hatch and Manser. Secretary—Surgeon Collicie. Treasurer—Surgeon Baker. It is anticipated that the number of members will be considerably augmented by those who have not yet intimated their intention of joining.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 21.)

MR. H. T. PEASE, A.V.D., has been appointed Veterinary Surgeon to the Government of the Punjab, and is also appointed on the staff of the Lahore Veterinary School.

THE last issue of the Punjab Gazette contains a eulogistic review of the career of W. G. Waterfield, Commissioner and Superintendent of the Peshawar Division, on the occasion of his retiring from civil employ. Since 1876 Colonel Waterfield has been constantly employed on the North-West frontier, and has done a vast deal by close personal intercourse and supervision among the tribesmen to put our relations in that quarter on a more satisfactory footing.

OBITUARY.

LIEUTENANT LIONEL GEORGE HENRY D'AGUILAR, of the Rifle Brigade, late of the Grenadier Guards, who died on November 29th, aged 29, in Upper Burma, was the only son of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry D'Aguiar, late Grenadier Guards, by his wife Frances Catherine, daughter of the late Hon. Lionel Charles Dawson. He entered the Army in 1879, and served in the Zulu War, and afterwards in the Soudan Campaign, 1884-5. He was in the Guards' Camel Corps in the night march across the desert under Sir Herbert Stewart, and was present at the actions of Abu Klea and Gubat, for which services he received the Zulu and Soudan medals and the Khedive's star. He had also received the medal of the Royal Humane Society.

COLONEL HUGH PIGOT WILLIAMS, late of the Bengal Staff Corps and of the 72nd Bengal Native Infantry, whose death, at the age of 61, occurred on the 4th inst., entered the Army in 1845, receiving his lieutenant's commission in 1851. He served throughout the Punjab Campaign of 1840 and 1849, including the siege and surrender of Mooltan, the surrender of the fort and garrison of Cheniote, and the battle of Goojvat, and received for his services a medal with two clasps. The deceased officer was also present at Agra during the Mutiny, and was so severely wounded that his right leg had to be amputated. He received another medal for his services. His commissions bore date—captain, 1860; major, 1865; lieutenant-colonel, 1871; and colonel, 1876.

MAJOR CHARLES WALTER GRANGE, who recently died at North Charlotte-street, Edinburgh, aged 76, was an officer who had seen much service in Canada. During the suppression of the insurrection there he served as officer of Militia, being present at the siege of Navy Island. In May, 1849, when the expedition was sent up the River Gambia against the King of Kenung, the deceased officer commanded the Enrolled Pensioners; and he commanded also the detachments of the 1st and 3rd West India Regiments in the expedition sent up the river Sherebro with Her Majesty's ships Alert and Pluto in June and July of the same year.

MAJOR-GENERAL HARRY RIVERS (late of the Royal Engineers, Bombay Presidency), who died on the 4th inst., the morning of his 67th birthday, at Woodlawn, Hanworth, entered the army in 1839, receiving his lieutenant's commission seven years after. He became captain in 1854; lieutenant-colonel, 1861; colonel, 1864; and major-general in 1865.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ROBERT WILLIAM ROMER, late of the 59th (East Lancashire) Regiment, whose death occurred on the 2nd inst., at his residence, Brynccmlyn, Dolgelly, had seen some service in China. He was employed as aide-de-camp to the French Admiral during the operations before the capture of Canton in 1857, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the brevet of major and a medal with clasp for his services. The deceased officer also commanded the detachment of the 59th Regiment at the storming and capture of Namtow in 1858.

STEPHEN HISLOP.*

Alexander Duff, of Calcutta, John Wilson, of Bombay, and Stephen Hislop, of Nagpur, were the first missionaries of the Free Church of Scotland in India, the first two on secession from the Established Church in 1843, and the last by direct appointment in 1844 by the Foreign Missions Committee of the new Church. Dr. George Smith, formerly the editor, in succession to Mr. Meredith Townsend, of the Friend of India, and now secretary to the Foreign Missions of the Free Church of Scotland, published his admirable biographies of Wilson and Duff about ten years ago; and it is fortunate in every way that the biography of Hislop should have been undertaken by the same author, to whom we are also indebted for the life, published in 1885, of that remarkable Baptist missionary to India, William Carey, of Serampore.

Dr. George Smith is, indeed, quite an ideal historiographer of the missions of his Church in India. From the beginning he has enjoyed the confidence and friendship of the most notable of its missionaries to that country, and been informed at first hand of all its operations there. He has been in many instances intimately connected with the past and the passing generations of leading Anglo-Indian officials, and thus has enjoyed exceptional opportunities of maturing the wide knowledge which, as a publicist, he has acquired in every department of the administration and history of contemporary India. Above all, through education and the experiences of a many-sided life, and not less, as is everywhere evident, through a natural graciousness of disposition, he is able to discuss the various religious questions that must be dealt with in missionary biographies as a man of letters and a man of the world, as well as a true son of the Free Church, without theological animosity, and in a spirit of sympathetic toleration. Dr. Smith was, of course, under little temptation to indulge in sectarian exclusiveness when treating of the lives of Wilson, Duff, and Hislop, such as he was strongly exposed to, and successfully resisted, in the case of William Carey. Adopting the excellent practice of the Established Church of Scotland, the Free Church insists on its students undergoing a prolonged and serious course of general as well as technical education, and besides their classics and theology they are usually well read in English literature, and often well grounded in different branches of natural science. The Scotch have, therefore, always been the best informed, the most enlightened, and the most successful among the missionaries of Protestant Christianity in India. The system of teaching inaugurated by them long before "the Disruption" soon attracted the children of the lower classes of the Native communities to their schools; their learning gradually secured them the respect of the most bigoted of the higher castes of Hindus, even the Brahmans; while the authority of their university status and culture, not less than the salutary example of their pure and self-sacrificing lives, has exercised a beneficial influence on European society throughout India. In the last respect it is not possible to exaggerate the good done by Duff and Wilson—by Duff, who overmastered everyone with his fiery evangelical zeal; and Wilson, tall, gaunt, and dignified as a typical mediæval university Syndic, who more slowly, but at length surely won all hearts by his unaffected simplicity of character, his consideration for others and prompt helpfulness, and by the old-world charms of his stately courtesy and sesquipedalian phrases, in which he invariably "approprinquated" a place, and never "approached" it. And every year the figures of these two men grow larger and larger in the memories, and their counsels sink deeper and deeper in the consciences, of those who knew them as they lived and laboured for righteousness' sake. If Hislop does not stand in the same line with them it is principally because, coming after them, he passed away before them, ere yet the possibilities of such a life as his could be fulfilled. But he was a man of the same apostolic grace as Duff and Wilson, and short as was his life it was deserving of record in the annals of Christian missions, independently of the special circumstances that give it a wider and lasting interest, such as his experiences as a pioneer of the Cross in the Central Provinces and the Berars, his geological exploration of these vast territories, hitherto unknown to science, his life at Nagpur during the mutiny of 1857, and his tragic death in 1863.

Stephen Hislop was born on Sept. 8, 1817, in the old Border town of Dunse, the birthplace of Thomas Boston, Thomas M'Crie, Sir Joseph Paxton, and Principal Fairbairn, if not also of John Duns, better known as Duns Scotus. Lauder, which is but seven miles from Dunse, was the birthplace of John Wilson, who was at the height of his early reputation in Bombay when Hislop was a student at Edinburgh; and there can be little doubt that the local Berwickshire pride in Wilson was one of the causes which determined Hislop to go to India. He was also much influenced by a sermon preached at Edinburgh early in 1843 by Dr. Stevenson, of Bombay, on the great need of Christian missionaries in India; and in the summer of that year, while waiting for his licence to preach from the Free Presbytery of Edinburgh, he became secretary to the Ladies' Society for Female Education in India, founded as a memorial of Dr. John Wilson's first wife. His thoughts were further directed towards India by the adhesion in the same year, the year of the Disruption, of Dr. Duff at Calcutta and Dr. Wilson at Bombay to the Free Church of Scotland; and on Dr. Wilson's visit in the autumn of 1843 to Edinburgh accompanied by his first convert from Parseeism, Hislop's decision was finally made, and on the 20th of January following he formally offered himself for service in India. He was at once appointed to Nagpur, and after marrying, and visiting at Olney the Rev. Dr. Schmidt, the former colleague of Rheinus in South India, he left Southampton in the steamer on the 3rd of November, 1844, and arrived in Bombay on the 13th of December following.

The Central Provinces form a natural barrier dividing the plains of Hindustan from the plateau of the Dakhan, and thus have become the common meeting-point between the intrusive Aryan and Dravidian races of the Indian Peninsula and the aboriginal Vindhyan races, who here at last made a successful stand against the encroachments of their enemies, and gave the name of their serpent god to Nagpur, the capital of all this mountainous region. Later, as the Mahomedan invaders in the eleventh century pressed the Rajputs southward, these Hindu refugees introduced a higher type of civilization into the Central Provinces. They were, however, absorbed by the great numbers of aboriginal Gonds; and when, in the sixteenth century, Akbar made his consolidating rule felt, for a time, among them, those of the Gond-Rajputs who had not been Brahmanised became nominal Mohammedans, leaving the demonolatry of their Vindhyan ancestors to be practised by the isolated savages of the denser forests and the higher valleys of the country. On the decline of the Mogul power in the seventeenth century the Native Gond families again asserted their ascendancy, and one of them succeeded in founding a powerful dynasty at Nagpur, where it continued to flourish until in the eighteenth century it was supplanted by the Mahratta dynasty of the Bhonslas, whose representative dying without heirs in 1853, the Nagpur state lapsed to the Company. Hislop entered Nagpur in 1845, and his career there, as detailed in Dr. Smith's volume, throws fresh light on the closing years of the last of the Bhonslas, the "exhausted debauchee" Raghoji III.

Of still greater interest to the English reader is the chapter devoted to Hislop's experiences in the Central Provinces during the Mutiny, which for the first time tells the true story of the "Mohammedan conspiracy formed with Mahratta collusion" in Nagpur. The mysterious chupatis, or wheaten cakes, were circulated in the month of March, 1857, with the statement, intended to excite the jealousy of the recipients against any interference with their food, that they were given by the British Government. The first warning of an outbreak at Nagpur was received by Hislop late on the night of the 12th of June from an old Mahomedan gentleman called Feiz Buksh, whose son had been educated in the mission school. The following morning Hislop communicated the information to the Deputy Commissioner at the very time that the Chief Commissioner was thanking for their fidelity the Irregular Cavalry, who were in league with the Mahomedan conspirators. They had actually arranged to rise on the night of the 13th, the signal being the ascent of fire-balloons. At 10 P.M. all was ready for the massacre, which even Hislop did not know was so imminent, and to frustrate which no precautions had been taken by the Commissioner. It happened, however, that the havildar of Irregular Infantry who was on duty that night was a Madrassee, and on the emissary of the Irregular Cavalry coming to him to bespeak his adhesion, he at once arrested the man and gave the alarm to his officers. Over and over again it was by the fidelity of Natives that English families were thus saved from destruction in 1857, and one would be glad to know that in every case the men who, like Feiz Buksh and the brave havildar at Nagpur, had been the instrument of their salvation, were adequately rewarded by the Government. Their names and services should never be forgotten by Englishmen.

Chapters vii. and viii. give the result of Hislop's explorations of the geology, ethnography, archaeology, and entomology and botany of the Central Provinces, and are of interest to the naturalist. The scientific value of his geological researches was at once recognised, and many of his earlier contributions on this subject will be found in Dr. Henry T. Carter's volume entitled "Geographical Papers on Western India," published by the Government of Bombay in 1857.

The fullest particulars are afforded of his purely missionary labours. He was guided in these by the instructions he received on his ordination by the Rev. Dr. Wilson, which are printed at length in Dr. Smith's second chapter, and should be studied by every missionary purposing to evangelise the mixed races and highly civilised communities of India. Dr. Wilson lays stress on the acquisition of a knowledge of the Native languages, and of the manners, customs, and habits of the people, and, above all, of their religions. He recommends that particular attention should be given to the education of the young, and to the encouragement by the missionaries of all branches of secular education, not only through school teaching, but by public lectures on science, literature, and history whenever opportunities are to be found. He strongly insists on the formation of a Sunday congregation wherever practicable, and on the wide circulation of the Scriptures and religious books and tracts, and the exercise of constant watchfulness and helpful kindness towards converts. In every department of the work thus mapped out for him Hislop achieved encouraging results, and in eighteen years had quickened among all those with whom he was brought into contact that instinctive desire latent in all men for a closer walk in the self-denying paths of righteousness, the effectual awakening of which is everywhere the true criterion of the successful teaching of Christianity. Prematurely, therefore, as he was cut off, he had already fulfilled the highest purposes of his life. As was to be expected, he was especially successful among the aboriginal Gonds, whose various dialects he reduced to a literary language, and made it common to them all. His last ministration was among the Gonds. On the 3rd of September, 1863, he had started on a tour with Sir Richard Temple from Bori, and proceeded to Takalghat, a wooded hamlet on a mound across the little Krishna, which feeds the Wana. From Takalghat Sir Richard returned in the afternoon to Bori, while Hislop insisted on remaining later in order to expound the Gospels to the villagers gathered round him. At eight o'clock in the evening his riderless horse dashed up to Sir Richard Temple's bungalow at Bori; and search being made it was found that Hislop had been drowned in recrossing the Krishna, which had been suddenly flooded since the morning by rain falling among the surrounding hills.

We have already rendered the tribute due to Dr. Smith for his part in the preparation of this volume, and noted its singular freedom from sectarian narrowness. It is a book not for the missionary only, but for every reader interested in India. But one objectionable sentence have we found in it, at p. 153, where he denounces the lingam as a "filthy image," and its shrine as "the obscene temple." The word lingam means simply "sign" or "symbol," and it is regarded by the Hindus as no more than an image of God in his creative power, and they nowhere associate any unclean ideas with it, at least not within the observation in Western India of the present writer; and there is really no justification for charging them with indecency in connection with the worship of it, which in the case of educated Hindus is not even idolatry in the vulgar acceptance of the term, all idols with them being no more than signs and symbols of the godhead. —Athenæum.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"The Bulbul and the Black Snake" (2 vols.), by Lewis D'Aguilar Jackson (Spencer Blackett); "Thirty Thousand Years of the Earth's Past History" by Major-Gen. A. W. Drayson, F.R.A.S. (Chapman and Hall); "Colonel Quaritch, &c." (3 vols.), by H. Rider Haggard (Longmans and Co.).

We are obliged to hold over till next week several reviews in type of books, pamphlets, &c. Many Anglo-Indians will read no doubt with much interest the notice which we reprint to-day from our contemporary the Athenæum of the biography of Stephen Hislop, by the well-known Dr. George Smith, of Serampore and Friend of India fame.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—This interest on Saturday was flat—apparently owing to the adverse impression produced by the financial requirements of the Nine Reefs Company, and a decline of about 1-16 took place in most of the leading descriptions. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3 3/16 to 3 5/16, Nundydroog 1 1/4 to 1 1/2, Indian Consolidated 4s. 9d. to 5s. 3d., Balaghat-Mysore (17s. 6d. paid) 9s. to 11s., ditto fully paid (£1) 13s. to 14s., Ooregum 26s. 6d. to 27s. 6d., ditto Preference 26s. to 28s., Devala-Moyar 4s. to 5s., Nine Reefs 8s. 6d. to 9s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 7s. to 8s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., South-East Mysore 11s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 to 1 1/2, New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 1s. 6d., Wynaad Perseverance 2s. to 2s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d.

Miscellaneous.

THE Government of India have ruled that the capitation allowance to volunteers of any nationality should be admitted, provided they are duly enrolled and have qualified according to regulations.

THE INSTITUTE OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—At the ordinary meeting, on Tuesday, the 4th of December, Sir George B. Bruce (President) in the chair, it was announced that the following fourteen Associate Members had been transferred to the class of members:—Messrs. E. Appleton, H. Bagnall, M.A., B.C.E., P. Fowler, P. A. Fraser, A. R. W. Fulton, J. E. Fulton, Rai Bahadur Ganga-Ram, A. S. Gerrard, W. Harpur, W. Hughes, B.A., M.E., C. E. Norman, W. S. Rendel, H. G. Sketchley, and E. C. B. Smijth. Eighty-five candidates were admitted as students. The first ballot for the session 1888-89 resulted in the election of eighteen members, amongst whom were the following connected with India:—John McKenzie Bell, P.W.D., Madras; William Lind Buyers, P.W.D.; Loudoun Francis MacLean, P.W.D.; Alan Wood Rendell, Eastern Bengal State Railway. Amongst eighty-seven Associate Members were the following:—Henry Lowthian Cleaver, Stud.Inst.C.E., P.W.D., Bombay; Courtenay Thornton Clifton, Stud.Inst.C.E., Barrage, Egypt; George Wadham Floyer, Stud.Inst.C.E., Ceylon Government Railways; Henry Sydney Jones, Stud.Inst.C.E., P.W.D.; James Waddell Boyd MacLaren, Stud.Inst.C.E., Singapore, S.S.; Warine Ben Hay Martindale, Stud.Inst.C.E., South Mahratta Railway; Stephen Martin-Leake, Bengal-Nagpore Railway; Charles Edward Cage Montresor, P.W.D.; William Anthony Morgan Partridge, East Indian Railway, Calcutta; Richard Douglas Perceval, P.W.D.; Harry Ernest Prescott, East Indian Railway; Norman William Roy, Stud.Inst.C.E., Indian Midland Railway; Robert Skelton, A.K.C., Stud.Inst.C.E., P.W.D., Colombo; Clement Moriscrip Sykes, Harbour Works, Mandvi, Bombay; Robert Cockburn Syson, Local Fund Engineer, Tanjore, Madras; Thomas Henry Ward, East Indian Railway Collieries, Bengal; Walter James Weightman, P.W.D.

DR. FREYER'S FEE.—The Lahore paper writes:—"The necessity for Government to forbid its own executive officers from receiving gifts from Natives of the country has, it may be urged, nothing to do with the case of professional men, from whom nothing but medicines can be expected, however lavishly they may be fed. A wealthy Native who presents an enormous fee to a doctor who has cured him of some ailment, may be actuated by sheer gratitude; and even if an unworthy motive enters into the case, it is only love of display. No suspicion of bribery and corruption could possibly be entertained. The action of the Government, therefore, is open to argument on either ground, of the good of the administration or of the governed. The Nawab of Rampur is above their protection, and Dr. Freyer out of reach of administrative corruption. Since, too, the Government would not interfere if the Nawab made a lavish present to one of his Native physicians, its action may be used as an argument to show how the Government has begun to be so sensitive on behalf of the Native, that it is unjust to the European. We do not say that this is the correct view, for we confess to a feeling that the whole 'Pagoda-tree' business is derogatory to our national character. Nevertheless, we are open to conviction that this feeling results from a confusion of ideas, and the unconscious application to ordinary Europeans of rules of conduct necessary only for administrative officers of Government."

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—A fresh addition has been made to the fleet of the P. and O. Company. The Peninsular, one of the two new mail steamers building at the yards of Messrs. Caird and Co., at Greenock, made her trial trip on Wednesday last and developed a very satisfactory rate of speed. This fine vessel, with her sister ship, the Oriental, is well fitted to maintain the high reputation of the company. She is 410ft. long and 48ft. beam, with a gross register tonnage of 5,000, and is intended to accommodate 155 first and 50 second saloon passengers. Whether on deck or below there is no lack of improvements of all sorts, and it would be hard to say whether the safety or the luxurious comfort of the passengers has been most studied. Her eight watertight compartments, her ample supply of lifeboats with patent disengaging gear, her steam launch, her precautions against fire are all admirably adapted to attain the former object; while the noiseless hydraulic machinery, the cold chambers for provisions and ice production, the roomy and lofty cabins, the handsomely designed dining room and saloons, the work of the architect of the Imperial Institute, all point to the great forethought and consideration bestowed on the latter. This specimen of naval architecture is destined to reinforce the company's India and China mail service, and her first voyage will be to Bombay direct, leaving London on the 7th proximo.

 Derangement.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigny's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bond fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1888.

THAT "BLACK MAN!"

It was not respectful in Amelia to call her master, Othello, "a sooty devil," notwithstanding that she was under the impression that she was helping the cause of her mistress, Desdemona. It was not politic in Lord Salisbury to call Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji "a black man," notwithstanding that he was under the impression that he was helping the cause of Conservatism and Liberal Unionism. In the case of Othello, he himself had, perhaps, suggested the reflection on his colour, having pleaded an excuse for it: "Mislike me not for my complexion—the shadow'd livery of the burnished sun;" but the Hon. Mr. Naoroji can boast that in the matter of hue his complexion is considerably fairer than that of the Prime Minister who called him a black man. If the report be true—and, unfortunately, it has not been contradicted—that Lord Salisbury did make use of the term as a reproach or sneer, nothing can be said in his lordship's defence. He showed want of politeness, and certainly want of political tact—and it is to be regretted that this "criminal" blunder was not immediately followed by a generous and ample apology. But having thus allowed that Lord Salisbury's speech was unjustifiable, we are not forced to allow that the use which is now being made of it by his political opponents is to be approved of. The Pall Mall Gazette, in a chastely-worded article, headed "Who is the blackamoor?" immediately, of course, took the opportunity to improve the occasion for the benefit of its Radical readers. Lord Salisbury's unfortunate utterance reminds the editor of the famous sneer at the Beggars which made "Les Gueux" so effective a rallying cry in the struggle for Dutch independence, and he "hopes that the present gibe will have less disastrous consequences for the ruling race." We think that he may rest easy in his mind on this point. The two hundred and fifty millions of Native subjects of Her Majesty in India will not attempt to throw off the Imperial yoke because a fair-featured Parsi gentleman has been called a black man in the heat of electioneering eloquence. It may be taken for granted that the insult will have as little effect upon them as the curse of the Cardinal in the "Ingoldsby Legend" of the Jackdaw of Rheims had upon all who heard it:—

"Never was heard such a terrible curse.
 But what gave rise
 To no little surprise—
 Nobody seemed one penny the worse."

The Pall Mall Gazette, however, is determined to pile up the agony heavily on Lord Salisbury's head. "In the Colonies," says that amiable journal, "the Colonists say that Lord Salisbury despises them, and now in Asia our myriad subjects have been made to feel that in the eyes of this proud patrician, who, after all, is but of yesterday compared with many of their ancient families, they are all but as 'niggers.' But more than this: The Pall Mall Gazette sees in the gibe at Mr. Naoraji an insult cast back through the centuries to the founder of Christianity and the twelve Apostles, who, we learn, were "in all probability" black men. We have heard of a negro preacher insisting that the original pair planted in the Garden of Eden were black, and their children also, and that the first white man was the murderer Cain who, blanching with fear, changed his colour on being questioned as to the whereabouts of Abel. But we had up to now been in sad ignorance of the sacred historical fact which the Pall Mall Gazette advances in administering its Christian rebuke to Lord Salisbury. The Daily News follows the lead of the evening journal, and has obtained from India extracts of opinion from newspapers there, which, of course, coincide with its own. We give these in another column, and those of our readers who know anything of the journals in question will not be surprised at the utterances which have been wired to London. The Daily News does not make Lord Salisbury's blunder quite so atrocious a crime as the Pall Mall Gazette does; but it says:—"This last stroke is nothing less than a national calamity. The enormity of Lord Salisbury's blunder is to be inferred from the fact that some of the Anglo Indian papers quoted by our correspondent flatly refuse to credit the report of it. Their scepticism is very much to their credit; and no one will envy their feelings when they are undeceived. It is a fortunate thing for the Empire that Lord Salisbury has been condemned by the Press without distinction of party. The Natives seem to look on in amazement, and wonder that Heaven has sent us such a man. Their significant demand for the direct intervention of the Queen and her unworthy Minister shows how far-reaching may be the consequences of this disgusting affront." A demand for the direct intervention of the Queen is a good stroke in party tactics, intended evidently to "bring down the gallery." But it won't do. Mr. Dadabhai Naoraji has certainly a very just cause of complaint against a display of bad manners in Lord Salisbury; but even this melancholy truth is not sufficient to stir India to the depths, to agitate 250,000,000 into passionate revolt, and to call for the immediate intervention of the Queen Empress of India.

The trick of trying to get up an agitation may be justifiable in the ethics of party politics, but it is too palpable. The deception is too plain.

India in Parliament.

ALLEGED MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE IN INDIA.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary for India whether Nuthoo Wilson, son of a British European subject, resident in Tehri, had been tried and convicted of three murders and of feloniously wounding five persons with intent to kill; whether Nuthoo Wilson had been sentenced to five years' imprisonment and £1,400 fine; whether that sentence on Nuthoo Wilson was submitted for confirmation to and approved and confirmed by the British Government at Kumaon; whether Nuthoo Wilson was confined in Bareilly Gaol in a separate apartment, and was allowed to receive visitors and to have special food, drink, and drugs; whether the Indian Penal Code applied to British European subjects in Tehri; whether, prior to the commission of the above-mentioned murders and wounding, several outrages by Nuthoo Wilson had, so far back as 1883-4, been reported in writing to Sir Henry Ramsay and to Sir Alfred Lyall; whether Nuthoo Wilson was very rich; and whether the Government would lay upon the table of the House the papers relating to the gross miscarriage of justice in the case.

Sir J. GORST: The only question I can answer with certainty is that the Indian Penal Code does apply to British European subjects in Native States. With regard to the other questions, the Secretary of State is aware that complaints have been made against Nuthoo Wilson, who is, however, as the Secretary of State is informed, not a British European subject. The Secretary of State has no official information on the matter referred to in the questions which has occurred in an independent Native State, but, if the hon. member has any evidence that a miscarriage of justice has taken place, and will lay the same before the Secretary of State, it will receive his careful attention.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIAN CADETS.

Sir R. FOWLER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether an officer who had been appointed an Indian cadet under the old regulations, and before it was decided that appointments should be subjected to any alterations deemed necessary by the Secretary of State for India, and who, in consequence, had not been called upon to consent to such alterations, had, notwithstanding frequent appeals, been compelled to serve in accordance with such alterations; and, if so, would compensation be granted to such officer for the heavy pecuniary loss he had sustained.

Sir J. GORST: There is no officer now in the service of the Government of India whose condition answers such as described in the question. On the assumption by the Crown of the direct government of India it was decided in December, 1858, that all future appointments should be subject to any alterations which might be made by the Secretary of State. There is no officer now on the general list whose commission is dated earlier than February, 1859.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACTS IN INDIA.

In answer to Mr. J. STUART,

Sir J. GORST said: The Indian Contagious Diseases Acts have been repealed. A Bill has been introduced to repeal the Cantonment Acts; and in the meanwhile, the compulsory examination of women and all provisions for licensing or regulating prostitution have been stopped.

INDIAN PRESS COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Press Commissioner's Office was a department under the control of the Government of India; whether the attention of Her Majesty's Government had been directed to a statement published in the Indian Mirror and other Indian papers of the 6th of November, purporting to issue from the Press Commissioner's Office, and to be "an authoritative statement of facts relating to Sikkim affairs," in which reference was made to a serious divergence between the views of the Government of India and those of the home authorities; whether there was any foundation for those statements; and whether the Secretary of State would cause inquiry to be made as to the source from which those statements had emanated, and on whose authority they had been made.

Sir J. GORST: The office of Press Commissioner was abolished in 1880, and the functions formerly discharged by that officer are now performed partly by the Local Government and partly by the Foreign Department. The Secretary of State, as I have twice informed the House, has no official information as to the memorandum referred to by the hon. member. The Secretary of State desires me to say that there has never, since he held office, been any divergence of opinion between the Government of India and the home authorities in reference to Sikkim affairs, and that he should not think it necessary to trouble the Government of India by inquiries into its reminiscences of events long passed.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked who was responsible at the present moment for the communiqués of the Press Commissioner that were inserted in all the papers in India.

Sir J. GORST: The hon. member would gather from my answer that that responsibility is partly that of the Local Government and partly of the Foreign Department.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The following question stood upon the paper in the name of Mr. J. MACLEAN:—"To ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the speech of Lord Dufferin made at Calcutta on Saturday, when he said of the so-called National Congress—"The members of the Congress are answerable for the distribution among thousands of ignorant and credulous men of publications animated by a very questionable spirit, and whose manifest intention is to excite the hatred of the people against the public servants of the Crown in India. The principal secretary boasts that he and his friends hold in their hands the key, not only of popular insurrection, but of military revolt." Whether this principal secretary, called by the Native Press 'The father of the Congress,' and the author of its most seditious pamphlet, is an Englishman named Hume, who was formerly a member of the Bengal Civil Service; whether urgent representations have been made to the Government of India by most of the Native Princes and by the leaders of the Indian Mahomedans as to the widespread mischief caused by the revolutionary speeches of delegates to a congress which aims at destroying the security of English rule in India; and what steps in these circumstances the Indian Government intend to take with regard to further meetings of the Congress."

Mr. BRADLAUGH, before the question was put, asked the Speaker whether the allegation in paragraph 2, that an Englishman named Hume was the author of "seditious pamphlets," and the reference in paragraph 3 to "revolutionary speeches of delegates to a congress which aims at destroying the security of English rule in India," were not irregular as containing debatable matter.

The SPEAKER said the paragraphs referred to were irregular. He must request the hon. member to withdraw them and defer the question until the next day.

Subsequently,

Mr. J. MACLEAN, who had been absent from the House, desired to make an explanation; but being greeted with cries of "Order,"

The SPEAKER ruled that the hon. member could not make any statement on the subject.

DEC. 6.

LORD DUFFERIN AND THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Mr. J. MACLEAN asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the speech of Lord Dufferin, made at Calcutta on Saturday, when he said of the so-called National Congress:—"The members of the Congress are answerable for the distribution among thousands of ignorant and credulous men of publications animated by a very questionable spirit, and whose manifest intention is to excite the hatred of the people against the public servants of the Crown in India;" whether urgent representations had been made to the Government of India by most of the Native Princes and by the leaders of the Indian Mahomedans as to the mischievous effects of these publications and of the speeches made by delegates to the Congress; and what steps, in these circumstances, the Indian Government intended to take with regard to further meetings of the Congress.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked whether the Right Hon. Sir Richard Garth, Q.C., late Chief Justice of Bengal, had declared the attacks on the Indian National Congresses to be "unjust, ungenerous, and impolitic;" whether he had stated that in "bringing to the notice of the Government what they considered to be defects and abuses in the present system" "they have done this in the most open, straightforward, and respectful way;" and whether he had declared—"For myself I have long been persuaded that many of the abuses complained of are real and serious, and that some of the proposed reforms would not only be of advantage to India, but would materially strengthen the hands of the Government." (Hear, hear.)

Sir J. GORST: The answer to the first two questions is in the affirmative. The Secretary of State has not yet received any intimation of the intentions of the Government of India. As to the question asked by the hon. member for Northampton, I received notice of it only ten minutes ago, when I entered the House, and I have not yet had time to study the opinions of Sir Richard Garth. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. J. MACLEAN asked whether it was not the case that the pamphlet of Sir Richard Garth must have been published long before the speech of Lord Dufferin.

Sir J. GORST: Yes; I saw the pamphlet some months ago.

DECEMBER 7.

COLONEL MARSHALL AT HYDERABAD.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR asked the Under-Secretary of State for India, with reference to Colonel Marshall's pecuniary dealings at Hyderabad, whether the subjoined was a correct quotation of the rule in force under the Government of India regarding pecuniary transactions of officials within the limits of their jurisdiction:—

"All covenanted civil servants, statutory civilians, uncovenanted officers who hold gazetted appointments, and military officers in civil employ are prohibited, under pain of dismissal, from taking loans from, or otherwise placing themselves under pecuniary obligations to, persons subject to the official authority or influence of such Government officers, or residing, possessing property, or carrying on business within the local limits for which such Government officers are appointed; whether Colonel Marshall's alleged lending of a large sum of the Nizani's money to his own brother-in-law was an infringement of the said rule; and whether, having regard to the fact that no report of the matter had been made to the Government of India by the Secretary of State, he would call for a report and inform the House what action had been taken in the matter.

Sir J. GORST: The rule is correctly stated. The Secretary of State is in possession of no information or evidence in reference to the alleged loan. The Secretary of State cannot call for reports from the Government of India unless some evidence is furnished to him upon which a reference to India can be based. If such evidence is furnished, he will immediately call for a report.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR: Am I to understand that the India Office in London is the only body in the world which is not acquainted with these notorious facts, and that the right hon. gentleman does not think there is ground for asking for a return on the subject?

Sir J. GORST: If any gentleman will lay before me any prima facie evidence which will justify me in making any reference to the Indian authorities I will do so.

LADY DOCTORS IN INDIA.

In answer to Mr. W. M'LAREN,

Sir J. GORST said: The Secretary of State has considered the report of the Surgeon-General of Bombay on civil hospitals, which is of a most satisfactory character as regards the services of the lady doctors. It was decided in 1886 that the appointments in the Cama Hospital should be temporary only, and should be revised at the end of five years in the light of the experience gained and the progress of medical education in India. The Secretary of State does not propose to shorten the period of probation which was then decided on.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE headquarters and wing of the 2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers embarked at Rangoon on the 9th Nov. for passage to Calcutta.

MAJOR T. M. MAXWELL, Commandant, Darjeeling Depot, has assumed command of the 2nd Battalion Derbyshire Regiment during the absence on leave of Lieutenant Colonel McCleverty.

CAPTAIN F. N. MAUDE, R.E., is appointed to the Staff of the cavalry camp of instruction at Delhi, specially in connection with the work of cavalry pioneers.

THE formation of equitation classes for the instruction of probationers for the Staff Corps appointed to Native cavalry regiments at stations where British cavalry regiments are quartered, has been approved by the Government of India.

THE 2nd Battalion Norfolk Regiment left Rangoon on the 6th Nov. for conveyance to Mandalay, which station it was expected to reach on the 16th idem and relieve the 2nd Battalion Royal Munster Fusiliers, the latter corps leaving Mandalay on the 19th Nov., arriving at Rangoon on the 26th, embarking on the 27th on the I.M.S. Canning for conveyance to Calcutta.

THE 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment left Lucknow on the 13th Nov. by rail for Calcutta, where it was to embark on the 19th Nov. on I.M.S. Clive for conveyance to Rangoon. The vessel is timed to reach Rangoon on the 23rd, when the battalion will encamp until required to leave on the 29th, for Thayetmyo and Myingyan, arriving at those stations on the 3rd and 7th Dec., respectively.

THE Shan Levy for service on the frontier of Upper Burma will be composed of three companies of Punjabis to be raised at Amritsar by Captain V.C. Tonnochy, Commandant, Railway Police Levy, Pyinmana, and three companies taken from the present Burma Railway Police Battalion, the latter being replaced by newly-enlisted Hindustanis from the North-West Provinces.

In addition to the Shan Levy, it has been decided to raise a Chin Levy of six companies on the same lines as the Shan Levy, composed of four companies taken from the Burma Railway Police Battalion and two companies of newly-raised Hindustanis at Lucknow and Agra. The latter will be recruited by Captain R. M. Rainey, Commandant, Police Battalion, Pokoko, who has been deputed from Burma for this purpose.

THE ILLUSTRATED NAVAL and MILITARY MAGAZINE. A Monthly Journal devoted to all Subjects connected with Her Majesty's Land and Sea Forces.

This important representative Magazine has attained a very high position in all branches of the Naval and Military Services. The aim and intention of the Proprietors is that the Magazine should reflect the progress and advancement of the Armies and Navies of Great Britain and other Powers equally with their shortcomings, in a spirit of patriotic candour and fair criticism.

Each Number contains important experiments, with drawings, connected with the advancement of Naval and Military Science throughout the world, together with historical and other matter of great variety, fully illustrated. There is issued quarterly a comprehensive list of the locality of the Army and Navy, including the whole of the Volunteer Force, with the names of Commanding Officers.

Vols. I.—VIII. already issued, 18s. 6d. each. Cases for binding, 2s. 6d.; Reading covers, 3s. 6d.

Price One Shilling.

COLBURN'S UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE, with which is now amalgamated the Army and Navy Magazine. The Oldest and only Shilling Service Magazine. Published Monthly.

This publication, while retaining the most approved features of both the component Magazines, and while continuing, like them, to devote the larger part of each Number to questions directly concerning the Regular Army and the Royal Navy, gives due attention to the interests of the Militia, Yeomanry, Volunteers, and all the other armed forces of the Empire, including Indian and Colonial Troops. It treats of interesting professional questions of the war, Naval and Military History and Biography, and contains Critical Reviews of Books and other Publications, Notices of Current Events, and a fair proportion of Fiction.

Vols. I.—XIV. already issued, 7s. 6d. each. Cases for binding, 1s. 6d.

SHOOTING and YACHTING in the MEDITERRANEAN. With some Practical Hints to Yachtsmen. By Captain A. G. BAGOT ("BAGATELLE").

"Mr. Bagot has written a capital little book, which every gunner and yachtsman, if not every sportsman should read. The reader, even if he has never seen the sea, becomes an enthusiastic sailor before he has read a couple of chapters, and he is then taken in the most entertaining manner nearly all round the Mediterranean."—Land and Water.

"The author of this brightly written book, being a practised sportsman, is enabled to present the reader with a work not only interesting from a yachtsman's point of view, but really valuable as conveying the result of dearly-bought experience."—Morning Post.

MILITARY MOSAICS: a Set of Tales and Sketches on Soldierly Themes. By JOHN AUGUSTUS O'SHEA, Author of "Leaves from the Life of a Special Correspondent." Crown 8vo. 5s.

Land and Water says:—"Military Mosaics" is a safe and healthy look for older boys who turn their thoughts towards the god Mars, and it is a delightful source of recreation to maturer readers."

The Scotsman says:—"They form a collection which will recommend itself to the good graces of lovers of a book of adventure, and they present several studies of the British soldier which are worthy of a deeper attention than is usually accorded to works of fiction."

Now ready, small 4to. 1s., with 14 Full-Page Coloured Illustrations, and 16 in Monotype.

FOLLOWING the DRUM. Sketches of Soldier Life in Peace and War, Past and Present. The Verses Selected and Illustrated by RICHARD SIMKIN.

"The volume is one of the daintiest books of Soldiering that has ever come under our notice."—Sheffield Telegraph.

"The little book is beautifully got up, being quite an artistic production, and in its way altogether unique."—Kentish Observer.

"Some of the illustrations are very spirited, and all are more or less clever, and are very correct."—Fun.

THE
AND

ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivaling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 25, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—
Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 30th November; from Allahabad and Madras to the 28th November; and from Calcutta to the 27th November.

THEIR Excellencies the Viceroy and the Marchioness of Dufferin had an enthusiastic reception at every place they halted at on their tour down country.

LORD DUFFERIN'S visit to Dacca is to be commemorated by the addition of a Lady Dufferin Ward to the Mitford Hospital. A lady doctor is to be appointed, and scholarships are to be founded for female medical students. The Nawab Ahsanullah has subscribed Rs. 50,000, and Raja Rajendra Narin Roy of Joydebpore Rs. 10,000, to the fund for this purpose.

THEIR Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught came to Bombay on Saturday, Nov. 24th, and on Sunday morning met their children, Prince Arthur and Princess Margaret, on their arrival by the mail steamer, the whole party proceeding to Poona on Monday.

LORD BINNING returned to Calcutta on the close of the Black Mountain Expedition, and joins Lord Connemara's Staff on the departure of Lord Dufferin.

THE Government of India in the Military Department has, it is said, sanctioned the formation of an Indian Reserve of officers, whose services would be utilised for the Commissariat Transport Department in the event of mobilisation being ordered.

THE Government of India has sanctioned the demolition of the city walls of Delhi. The Lahore gate will immediately be removed.

THE death is announced of another officer engaged in the Black Mountain Expedition—Major F. H. Thorndyke, of the Royal Sussex Regiment—from pneumonia, brought on by a severe chill.

THE workmen on the Thibet side of the Jelep Pass have now completed about a mile of the new road towards Rinchagong. The percentage of sickness amongst the pioneers engaged has been excessive.

THE fire that occurred recently at the Jute godowns of the Ganges Mills is said to have resulted in the damage to, or destruction of, jute to the value of some two lakhs of rupees.

THE latest claimant to the Delhi throne has now recovered from his hallucination, and is to be taken to Hyderabad, his native place, at Government expense, with the warning that he must stay there.

A SYNDICATE has secured from the Bengal Government a grant of 7,000 acres of land in the Julpiguri district for tea cultivation.

THE first petroleum well will be sunk in a few days by the Syndicate, to whom concessions have been granted, at Futtigarh, near Rawalpindi.

DR. NOETLING, of the Geological Survey of India, reports having discovered a hill of iron ore near Myituge, in Upper Burma, which he estimates covers an area of about a square mile, and rises about 200 feet, with quality of the iron ore of the best and most valuable.

LORD CONNEMARA has been installed in Madras as District Grand Master of Freemasonry in that Presidency. There was a banquet in the evening in honour of the occasion.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has visited all the posts on the new frontier road.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN has left Lucknow on his winter tour. The Misses Colvin join his Honour later on in the course of the tour.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is at Calcutta.

GENERAL NAIRNE, Inspector-General of Artillery, will inspect the batteries at Allahabad during Christmas week, arriving on Dec. 23rd and leaving on the 28th.

COLONEL C. R. MATHEWS, Deputy Judge-Advocate, has arrived at Jhansi in connection with the inquiry which is now being made into the accounts of the 30th Bengal Infantry.

COLONEL SANFORD, Inspector-General of Military Works, will visit Allahabad on behalf of the Government of India in connection with the new waterworks scheme.

MR. J. ANDERSON is permitted to resign Her Majesty's Bengal Civil Service, with effect from August last.

THE Inspector-General of Forests with the Government of India leaves shortly on a tour of inspection in Assam, returning to headquarters in March next.

MR. J. MCLEOD CAMPBELL, Collector of Land Revenue and Customs, and Commissioner of Income-tax in Bombay, obtained sick leave and sailed for England in the Arcadia, but died before reaching Aden.

MR. WILSON BELL, Acting Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, died on Nov. 27th at Lanowli. Mr. Barnett, the Agent, and Mr. Dawson, the Engineer, are at home, so Mr. Conder, the General Traffic Manager, takes charge.

THERE are doubts if the proposed Conference about the Provincial Contracts, which has been announced to take place in Calcutta immediately, under Mr. Westland's direction, will come off at present. It may possibly be indefinitely adjourned.

WHEN the mail left the Crawford Commission and the Bulkeley Court-Martial were still dragging their slow lengths along. In the former case, after twenty-eight days' sitting, only eighteen of the thirty-two charges had been investigated, and progress seemed to be as slow in the second case also. In both the Prosecution have had to withdraw or modify some of the charges.

A FURTHER scandal is continued in the Ross-Morgan case. The High Court of Madras has delivered judgment in the case in which Mr. Morgan applied for a revocation of sanction given to Mr. Ross by the District Judge of South Malabar to prosecute Mr. Morgan for giving false evidence. Their lordships observed with regret that Mr. Ross had acted in this matter of the petition for sanction with indiscretion, to use no harsher term; and he had no reasonable and probable cause to take criminal proceedings against Mr. Morgan. The Court was strongly of opinion that summonses to prosecute Mr. Morgan should not have been applied for or granted.

THE Upper Burma Summary to November 28th reports that nothing of special importance has occurred during the week, except an encounter with dacoits in the Myadounng District, in which seven police were killed. Particulars are unknown. In Pokoko the police captured fifteen dacoits and twenty-three guns.

THE Maharajah of Chatturpur has become patron of the United Indian Patriotic Association, and has made a contribution to the funds. His Highness is reported to be the best educated Prince in Bundelkund.

NOTES.

INDIA, by the latest intelligence received, was busy speeding the parting and welcoming the coming guest. Lord Dufferin has departed, and Lord Lansdowne reigns in his stead. With the former the hour of departure was the favourable opportunity to speak out boldly and fearlessly of India's present position, and of the condition, the hopes, and aspirations of her peoples. He had "done something to enable India to read her own thoughts, to discriminate between vain dreams and possible realities, and to comprehend that which she really wanted as distinguished from that which she neither needed nor wanted, and which could not be given her." Well and wisely spoken!

THE hour of arrival was, however, for Lord Lansdowne, the favourable opportunity to observe a discreet silence, and to say nothing of future plans or policy, although we are not surprised to learn that the Babu Municipality of Calcutta desired to draw from him a confession of political faith. We are glad to learn that, thanks to the English Press at the capital, the attempt failed.

FROM the little he did say, however, Calcutta appears to have come to the conclusion that the new Viceroy disapproves of the annual official migration to the hills, and will keep to Calcutta as the real seat of his Government during the coming hot weather. This may depress Simla for a time, and cause a sinking in the hearts of the proprietors of the many jerry-built houses there. But the hot weather has to come, and then —? It may be that Lord Lansdowne would like a little change from Canadian cold to Indian heat. But, then, there are others to be consulted—amongst them certain fair and gentle natures, who influence the destinies of monarchs and men more than the world will allow. What will Lady Lansdowne, and the ladies about the Viceregal Court, the wives of honourable members of Council—the sweet sharers of the joys (and sorrows, if such there be) of many Secretaries of Departments, say to a sojourn in Calcutta when the Indian dog days commence, and the punkah coolies begin to be sworn at? "Jan Larrana," when he came to rule India, was thought to be a seasoned Salamander, who would enjoy the midsummer heat of the plains; but he went to Simla, and so have done his successors ever since, and so they will continue to do until the oft-quoted (by the Calcutta editors) prophecy comes to pass, that "Simla will one day lose England India."

CALCUTTA this hot weather, it will be remembered, proved itself unfit for human habitation. Consequently, a Calcutta paper writes:—"Lord Lansdowne brings a conscience with him to India. It is said that he has determined to defer his departure for Simla, in the first year of his Viceroyalty, until May, apparently with a view to obtaining experience of the Calcutta hot weather, and testing its effect on a Viceregal constitution. We trust this may be accepted as an early sign that his Lordship desires and intends to do justice to India, and to commence with an honest and fair decision between the claims of high officials to indulgence in the shape of hot-weather picnics in the hills." We shall see.

THE ignorance and apathy with which the majority of English newspapers here regard all matters connected with India, unless they be of a sensational nature, has long been a complaint amongst all returned Anglo-Indians. There is, therefore, some satisfaction in reading here a genial notice like the following from a home contemporary concerning the good work which Lady Dufferin has done in India:—

The consort of Indian Viceroy or Colonial Governor has certain recognised and very onerous duties to perform. But the performance of such duties must be almost second nature to Lady Dufferin by this time, and anyone who has had the privilege of admittance to her circle at Ottawa, Constantinople, or Calcutta will readily acknowledge her distinction and tact. During her sojourn in India, however, Lady Dufferin discovered for herself a sphere of usefulness beyond the ordinary duties of Government House; and so zealously and successfully did she pursue her particular scheme for ameliorating the condition of Native women and children that her name has become a household word in nearly every zenana and harem in India. It in no way detracts from the credit due to Lady Dufferin that the idea of affording medical aid to Native women by means of lady doctors did not originate with herself. She found a local movement of the sort in progress in Bombay; but grasping the full significance of the idea she set to work in order to extend the movement throughout the length and breadth of the land. The result has been as gratifying as the need was great. Lady doctors are now found in considerable numbers in all the large cities of India; hospitals and dispensaries under their charge are established in the more important centres; the Indian universities have opened their doors to female medical students; and large funds are established under the immediate patronage of ladies in the highest social position in order to meet the increasing calls for female medical advice and assistance. It is well known that Her Majesty, the Queen-Empress, takes a keen personal interest in this movement, which is nothing less than the beginning of a vast social and moral revolution in India.

But why does not the Vernacular Press of India express itself to the same effect. The Congress Agitators, especially Mr. A. O. Hume, boasts that it is thoroughly loyal. Is it merely ungrateful?

WE fear, however, that Mr. Hume has fallen from his high estate of guide, philosopher, and friend to the Congress, if the following be taken as Vernacular opinion upon him now. We quote from the Pioneer:—"It is a dangerous matter to direct the aspirations of a nation one and indivisible, especially when that nation is given as much to repudiation as to agitation. In an unguarded moment Mr. Hume was weak enough to hint that the Viceroy was not absolutely black to the core, that he did not take a fiendish delight in trampling on the nation, and that, all things considered, Lord Dufferin really meant well. Mr. Hume's reward has been prompt and liberal. He ventured to disagree with some sweeping and virulent abuse as unguided by knowledge as it was untempered by courtesy. Consequently, 'he discourages and discourteously honest opinion freely expressed.' Consequently, 'Who is Mr. Hume?' He is 'the son of Joey, the Scotch Radical—an ex heaven-born.' Consequently, he does not represent anything in particular. He is a 'daring and disappointed foreigner.'"

'Such is popularity—in India.

THE Viceroy has sent a reply to the Sikh Address received at Lahore, thanking them for what they have said, and stating, with regard to the grievances of the Sikh community, that as he is leaving India, he cannot do more than promise them that questions they have raised will receive careful consideration, and he will commend the welfare of their community to his successor.

THE Government of Bombay denies the statements made regarding the appointment of a Committee to consider the expediency of retaining in Government service officials as have given evidence in the Crawford case, and regarding their repudiation of the guarantee given by Mr. Ommanney.

THE severe criticism which has been bestowed upon the resolution of the Surat Nagar Brahmins to levy a fine of Rs.2,880 upon the Nagar Medical adviser to the Gaekwar (Dr. Botukram) for having crossed the Kalapani on duty with his Chief, has had a wholesome effect upon the community. A meeting of the leaders of the caste in Bombay was held and unanimously passed the following resolution:—"That this meeting, admitting the necessity and desirability of a trip to Europe, and feeling grateful to the gentlemen who took up Dr. Batukram's cause, disapprove of the heavy penalty to which he has been subjected."

IN the agricultural part of the administration report of the Cutch State it is said that there is a superstition in part of the Province that if rain falls on the day "Shrawan Sud 7," wheat sown on the particular soil is affected by rust. The superstition is so far effective that the area under wheat last year was limited in consequence of a fall of rain on that particular day.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 16.

Lord Lansdowne formally assumed office as Viceroy on Monday last, when the Queen's commission of appointment was read by the Home Secretary in the Council Chamber, the usual State ceremonial being observed. Half an hour later Lord and Lady Dufferin left for Bombay. The streets from Government-house to the railway station were densely crowded with Natives, and great enthusiasm was evinced along the route.

On their arrival at Bombay the distinguished travellers met with a magnificent reception. Numerous addresses were presented, that from the Chamber of Commerce being the most important. This document, after dwelling on various salient points of the departing Viceroy's administration, proceeds as follows:—

In the annexation of Burma we meet with the same sound policy of true appreciation of the necessities of the situation. This measure was forced upon the Government at the time, in the interests of the people of India and Burma, and has since received ample justification from the course of events. Had you been daunted, as you might well have been, by the financial cost and immense responsibilities involved, and had you attempted any other mode of facing the difficulty, it is now certain, from the evidence available, that complications of the gravest character might have ensued, affecting the tranquillity of the Empire; and future expenditure might have been rendered unavoidable, the magnitude of which it is not possible to pre-estimate, but which it is certain would have enormously exceeded what has been and is being incurred.

"That Upper Burma, formerly disorganised and lawless, should within comparatively so short a time have been incorporated as a province of the Empire reflects the greatest credit on your Lordship's administration, and Her Gracious Majesty the Queen-Emress has most fittingly recognised this in the additional honours recently bestowed upon you, upon the reception of which we beg to render our hearty congratulations."

In the course of his reply, Lord Dufferin said:—

"If ever hereafter I shall be called on to defend my acts as Viceroy, I do not know what better defence I can prefer than that secured by simply submitting the paragraphs just read. This address will remain in my family as a proof of the reward accorded by our fellow-countrymen to anyone who endeavours faithfully and honestly to discharge his duty."

On Thursday Lord Dufferin was entertained by the Byculla Club. In returning thanks for the toast of his health, he said he thought it might be fairly said that he had handed over India to his successor without a cloud on the horizon—for they might consider the Thibetan difficulties as settled, the Chinese Ampa having arrived at Rinchagong—with her princes and people contented, and her finances in a state of equilibrium, and with no internal questions on hand that could not readily be solved by patience, firmness, and sympathetic sagacity, of which no one possessed more than the present Viceroy. He trusted that he had also done something towards enabling India to discriminate between vain dreams and possible realities, and to comprehend what she really wanted, as distinguished from that which she neither needed nor wanted, and which could not be given to her.

Lord and Lady Dufferin embarked at Bombay for England on Friday. A great crowd was present, from whom they received a most enthusiastic ovation, both Lord and Lady Dufferin being decorated by the Parsee ladies with garlands. The ex-Viceroy's administration is highly eulogised by the English Press.

Lord Lansdowne received the Calcutta Municipal Council's address on Wednesday. The whole tenor of it had been changed at the eleventh hour, in consequence of the publication by the Indian Daily News of some very interesting correspondence between a certain municipal commissioner and another person, exposing an attempt to entrap the new Viceroy into a declaration of sympathy with the Congress movement. This judicious and opportune publication saved Lord Lansdowne from the grave embarrassment sought to be imposed upon him of deciding between the ungracious alternatives of reversing Lord Dufferin's policy and of rebuking a professed address of congratulation and welcome. The address actually read was unobjectionable. In replying, the Viceroy laid great stress upon the exceptional position held by Calcutta among all Indian cities as the capital of the Empire and the seat of government. For Calcutta he must entertain feelings different from those with which he could regard any other city, as for some time it would be his own home and the home of those most dear to him. The expression of this sentiment has given great public satisfaction, as it seems to indicate an intention to look more to Calcutta and less to Simla as the principal seat of government. There is no doubt that the official segregation at Simla, remote from the faintest influence of public opinion for so many months in the year, has proved highly prejudicial to the administration. If only Lord Lansdowne have the strength of will to maintain this attitude, despite official pressure, he will win golden opinions from the non-official community, both English and Native.

In a recent durbār speech at Delhi the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab urged the zemindars to combine to suppress extravagance and the borrowing of money for marriage feasts and other social ceremonies, and for unnecessary litigation, their indebtedness being mainly due to this tendency. He referred to certain evil counsellors who preached the seditious doctrine that self-government and general progress required a spirit of distrust and hostile independence of the Government's officers.

A trial for murder at sessions has absorbed the interest of the Native community during the past week. The case, which lasted five days, ended yesterday in the conviction and sentence to death of the accused. A child-wife of tender years, aged eleven, was brutally murdered in cold blood by her husband, a Brahmin of good social position. The crime was apparently absolutely without motive, the murderer being solely actuated by lust of cruelty. The evidence was purely circumstantial. Mr. Justice Norris, the presiding Judge, in a very able summing-up to the jury, demonstrated in a conclusive manner the commission of the crime by the husband. In passing sentence, he said that the girl who, was young and beautiful, and possessed of unusual intelligence, had been murdered with more ruthless savagery than had been displayed in any other case of murder within his experience. Strong as is the aversion of Hindoos to capital punishment, in this case the sentence has given universal satisfaction. This system of child marriage, the root of most of the miseries in Hindoo social life, is severely condemned by a large section of the Hindoo community.

BURMA.

RANGOON, DEC. 15.

The time granted to Sawlapaw, chief of the Red Karens, to submit and pay an indemnity having expired without any reply having been received, active operations against him will commence without delay. The expedition will be commanded by Brigadier-General Collett. The troops will rendezvous at Fort Stedman about the 31st of December, and will march via Moby to Sawlon, which is Sawlapaw's capital. The force will consist of a Bengal mountain battery, 140 rifles of the 1st Battalion of the Rifle Brigade (the Prince Consort's Own), including 40 mounted infantrymen, 320 Rifles of the 1st Belooches, including 70 mounted infantrymen, and 50 rifles of the Madras Sappers. Two small columns, including detachments of the Cheshire Regiment, will co-operate from Lower Burma.

A novel and interesting feature in this expedition is that 3,000 Siamese soldiers will co-operate with us on the left bank of the Salween. The Siamese have suffered from depredations of the Red Karens almost as much as our subjects. Owing to the intended attack on Sawlapaw, the adjoining country is disturbed, and work in the forests is suspended. There will probably be a serious falling off this season in the supply of teak sent to Moulmein, as much of the best timber comes from Sawlapaw's country.

Sir George White will leave Mandalay on December 20th for Kanbala, to superintend personally the movements of the troops employed against the Chins.

Another force will attack the Kachyens on the north-eastern frontier. It is to assemble at Mogoung on Jan. 1st, and will consist of two guns of a mountain battery, fifty rifles of the Hampshire Regiment, 200 rifles of the 17th Bengal Infantry, and 600 of the Goorkha military police. Some sharp fighting is expected.

Some engagements with dacoit bands are reported from the Shwebo, Yau, and Myingyan districts. The Tsagain district is still much troubled by dacoits, and the police have had some sharp encounters with them. Attention was called some time ago to the fact that the police force in the Tsagain district was in charge of a superintendent of police unable to speak Burmese, and unacquainted with the people. This superintendent is still continued in his office by the local government, although the Rangoon Gazette announces on authority that two deputy commissioners successively in charge of Tsagain and Brigadier-General Stedman, commanding the military police, have recommended his removal.

The Mandalay Herald announces that two employes on the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway have been hacked to pieces by dacoits. The same journal announces that the town of Beelin has been attacked by dacoits, who burnt some houses, and states that it is reported that the dacoits tied three prisoners to stakes, and after pouring oil over them set fire to the unfortunate men.

The Moulmein Advertiser announces that eight prisoners concerned in the recent disturbances in Tenasserim were hanged in Tavoy on Dec. 5th.

Burma has been visited by two Siamese princes, brothers of the King, who were accompanied by a suite of Siamese nobles. They left yesterday for Bangkok.

The rice crop will be a very full one. The Government estimates the quantity available for export at over 1,100,000 tons.

LORD LANSDOWNE.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 13.

Lord Lansdowne, replying to-day to an address of welcome presented by the Calcutta Municipality, expressed the hope that during his term of office the Government would be able to attend uninterruptedly to legislation for the domestic benefit of the people, and to improve the machinery of Government to such an extent as the altering conditions of the country might require.

THE MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN.

BOMBAY, Dec. 13.

Lord and Lady Dufferin have arrived here from Calcutta. They met with a brilliant reception at the railway station, the Duke of Connaught being among the personages present to welcome them.

The Marquis of Dufferin was presented with an address from the Municipality, in reply to which he said:—"It is a great pleasure for me to know that the intelligent classes of this part of India comprehend the obligation of providing for the security of the North-West Frontier. Rest assured that the rulers of India will never enter upon expenditure of a war-like nature, whether with a view to being prepared for possible events of a serious character, or to repel the incursions of Native tribes or other enemies, except with extreme reluctance, and under the pressure of absolute necessity."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER DEFENCES.

The special correspondent of the Pioneer telegraphs the following description of the frontier defences from Quetta:—

To-day, 12th November, the great engineering works in execution at the Khojak came under the simultaneous inspection of the three members of the Government of India who are specially concerned in their progress. Sir Charles Elliot, accompanied by Colonel Wallace and Mr. O'Callaghan, had gone on the day previously.

At a very early hour this morning the special conveyance of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, General Chesney (military member) and the warden of the marches, Sir Robert Sandeman, left Quetta, its occupants having slept on board, and drew up with the dawn in a siding at the mouth of the great tunnel. The party, besides those mentioned, included the Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, General Sir John Hudson, Colonels Holdich and Nicholson, Major Broadbent, Drs. Taylor and Owen, and Captain Rawlinson. The heavy special was brought up the steep ascent of the temporary line from Killa Abdulla by two of the great Jumbo engines, which can take three and four 20-ton waggon up an incline of one in fifteen. The Commander-in-Chief was soon afoot inspecting the guard of the 23rd Pioneers—picked men, all wearing the Kandahar Star. An appreciative crowd of onlookers from the works broke into a cheer at his Excellency's approach. A start was then made for the tunnel, which anyone so minded can now penetrate for a distance of a quarter of a mile. For an hour or so its darkness underwent close inspection, and then its visitors were restored to the light, and were soon on the move towards the Kotal. On the way up Sir Frederick visited the lines of the Pioneers, which appear comfortably built on sites excellently chosen for protection from the weather.

A halt was called at the mouth of the first shaft, which marks the spot where another attack on the hill is being carried on 300 feet below surface, and then the party embarked themselves on the trolley, which, with the aid of a wire rope, goes up and down the list 600 feet at a gradient which the engineers assert to be one in two-and-a-half, but which looks like one in one. Fortunately the morning was exceptionally clear, and there had been no wind to stir the sands of the earth below and obscure the horizon. The unrivalled panorama from the summit was seen, therefore, to perfection. To the left the red sands of the great Biluch desert, stretching away from the foot of the range melted imperceptibly into the sky; while to the right the wide plain is broken by scattered groups of hills, the furthest of which are beyond Kandahar. In the foreground are the works of the other side of the tunnel, and down on what appears to be a flat plain are the few mud houses and mud forts that mark Chaman. As a matter of fact, however, the ground at Chaman has been found too steep to be suited for the site of the terminal station, and to fix upon a better one was one of the principal objects of the day's outing. Taking to horses, the party rode rapidly down the road, and visited first the old and afterwards the proposed new site. It is understood that the latter was very generally preferred, and may be considered as good as adopted.

The return ride was as quickly accomplished, and punctual to time the train left again for Quetta at 3 P.M. On all hands it is agreed that the progress made with the works has been more than satisfactory. Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Rose, Executive Engineer in charge, come in for many congratulations. The latter is the officer who shared with Mr. Buchanan Scott the labours and the credit of the Chappar rift, and much else of the most difficult work on the Hurnai construction; nor could the excellent work of Mr. Weighman, who has had the making of the wire ropeway, escape notice. It is remarkable that Mr. Rose and all his staff are Cooper's Hill Engineers, and the College is thus put to its proof before the world in a way that it has never been before. There is already small doubt of the result.

A SONNET OF WELCOME TO MISS MANNING.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Who that has sojourned in thy glorious land—
The anxious Student or the careless Prince—
Knows not the touch of thy befriending hand?
The warmth that marks thee let us all evince
In greeting thee to this our Island strand—
E'en as our sister, mother, kin of kins.
Sweet in thy simple ways and humbly grand,
Accept the homage grateful hearts command
In pleasant memory of thy regard.
As in our welcome of thee we rejoice
To Heaven proceeds a nation's prayerful voice.
"May danger vanish! God thy footsteps guard!"
Go as a Critic, Patron, Friend, whatever thy choice.
Where'er thou goest, find our doors unbarr'd.

INLAND TRADE WITH CHINA SHAN STATES.

(Mandalay Herald.)

The time fixed by the Local Government to take some steps to improve and encourage general trade with Yunnan and the Chinese Shan States is fast approaching, and we trust that the efforts of the Government will be crowned with success, and that a great impetus will be given to a trade that may be made a very large one. The Government intend to establish at Lashid, about 175 miles distant from Mandalay, something of a permanent post. Lashid is situated in North Theinni, which is a tributary State to us. At present, we believe, there is no road, but we intend to make one for carts up to Thonzé, and, results justifying an extension, to carry it on, in a year or two, right up to Lashid. We hear that a party equipped and rationed will start from Mandalay very shortly to establish the post at Lashid, and the Superintendent of the Northern Shan States, Lieutenant Daly, will reach that post, via the Shweli Valley, about the early part of January.

In this attempt we see the opportunity afforded to make the efforts of the Government successful. But no success can possibly attend them, if they are to be made in a hole-and-corner-way. The mere sending up of a Government party up to Lashid will do nothing of itself, so far as the outer world is concerned, to attract trade; nor will a purely departmental effort make matters either popularly known or better. The local Government ought to give the widest possible publicity to what they intend doing; newspapers and Chambers of Commerce ought to be invited to send out Correspondents with the party, and every shred of information regarding the prospects, wants, and probable demands of the country made widely known to those on whom the trade with these parts rests. It is well known that the plateaux and valleys in the North Shan country grow cotton in large quantities, and it is more likely than not that cotton cultivation there is capable of a tremendous expansion. Yunnan is known to contain tin and lead, but unless something more than the mere fact is known Yunnan tin and lead might be for the next century where they have been for past centuries. Why the Press in Burma has not been taken in confidence by the Government in this matter we cannot say. One consequence may, therefore, be that this party may start, may establish a permanent post at Lashid, and all this without the world being a bit the wiser about it. Such are the inevitable results of official conservatism in such matters.

A TAMIL LOVE SONG.

(Ceylon Observer.)

Nearly every nation on earth has its love-songs, but there appears to be a want in that direction among the Tamils. That the love-song is not absolutely unknown, however, among them, it is my pleasing lot to demonstrate by presenting to the public the following rough translation of a Tamil lyric, entitled:—

KOOPUMOOTU AND MEENATCHIE.

When the night has closed its curtains and tired nature seeks repose,
And the merry warbling birds have brought their concert to a close,

Will you come, my sweet Meenatchie to the cool cinchona grove,

And listen while I tell to you the story my love?

And she answered:—"Koopumootu dear, I'll come."

(Yumi Yum.)

When the little stars are blinking and the round, red, radiant moon

Promenades the azure Heavens like a patent fire-balloon,

We will sit, my own Meenatchie, together on one stump,

While the pohi-rothy in the store goes thump, thump, thump,

And she said:—"Dear Koopumootu, oh! how nice."

(Which it was.)

When the sound of music rises from the marshes and the bogs,

And the ear, enraptured, listens to the chorus of the frogs,

We will stroll, my love, together, 'mong the widely-spreading tea,

And talk about our wedding-day, and when it is to be.

And she said:—"Dear Koopumootu, we will stroll."

(Fol-de-rol.)

You know I've got the nicest, snuggest room in all the line,

And the very snuggest corner in that chamber will be thine.

My present wife (old Rakie) will, of course, be made to shunt,

And nestle 'mong the goats in the verandah at the front.

And she answered with a short, decisive grunt,

(Adé Appá.)

Why that grunt, my dearest ducky? You will not so foolish be

As allow one drop of jealousy to come 'twixt you and me?

Think you that, for one short moment, I will cast a tender look

On the withered skin of Rakie? No! not by a jugful! *

And she said:—"Dear Koopumootu, you're a brick."

(Such is life.)

Bangles of the purest silver will adorn your comely arms

And a pair of lovely earrings will add greatly to your charms.

Rings shall glitter on your fingers small and sparkle on your toes,

While a gem of purest light will throw a halo round your nose.

And she said, "Dear Koopumootu, that is good as far's it goes,

But I think I'd be the better of some clothes."

(Goodness knows.)

Why, of course, my sweet Meenatchie, the jewel of my life,
In the way of dress you'll take the cake from each kangani's wife.

Cloths of blue, picked out with yellow—cloths of bold refulgent green,

Of spotless white—of radiant red—of silk and of satteen

You have only got to wish for, and they're yours, my dusky queen.

And she answered with a 'witching smile—all very large and fine,—

"My own dear Koopumootu, from this moment I am thine."

(Wedding bells in the distance.)

When the jackal leaves his cover and steals round with cautious tread

On a visit to the poultry-yard before he goes to bed,

You will come, my own Meenatchie, to the sweet cinchona grove,

And listen while I tell to you the story of my love.

And she said:—"Dear Koopumootu, I will come."

(Yumi Yum.)

However crude my first attempt as a translator may be—and

* I have found it impossible to give this stanza the proper rhyming ending in English, and have, therefore, translated the last line literally.

I am painfully aware of my own deficiencies—I think a perusal of the above will help to give a better insight into the more lovable side of Ramasamy's character, while it shows that he possesses a warm heart beneath a probably very dirty cloth. At any rate, such are my hopes, and I would ask the gentle reader to join with me in wishing health and prosperity to the enterprising Koopumootu and his lovely Meenatchie.

ROAD TRACER.

CURRENCY REFORM.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It is well to bear in mind the lines on which the bimetallic struggle at home will have to be fought. As in most important matter of politics the chief contests will take place on side issues. That is to say, although nominally a question of international currency, which ought to be decided upon wide principles as laid down by the best authorities, it will really be controlled by the votes of a number of sections of the uninformed public, who, as consumers, farmers, merchants, or money-dealers, will, rightly or wrongly, consider their special interests affected. Thus the farmers who believe that a depreciated rupee and consequent cheap Indian wheat prevent them from getting a good price for their English wheat, will favour bimetallicism; while the British workman, who believes that the same causes produce the cheap loaf on his breakfast-table may oppose it. There are many other similar issues which, in the mind of the British elector, who controls the destinies of India, will be far more potent than any arguments which could be based on the ethics or politics of the question. It is not to the hearts of the benevolent or the heads of the wise, but to the pockets of the selfish and foolish that the latter day reformer must appeal. Yet we somehow get along pretty well, on the whole; and daylight is even visible now through the long gloom of the silver question.

BENGAL.

(Nov. 27.)

MR. NEY ELLAS arrived at Gnatong on the 18th inst. Mr. Paul left on the 20th inst. for Darjeeling, where he was to meet Mr. Durand. The Pioneers came in from Byutong on the 19th inst., being relieved by a detachment of the Goorkhas. The line of communications will also be taken over by the Goorkhas in a few days, the Pioneers now holding the line moving down to Pedong. Captain Travers, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, was expected on the 20th inst. He will proceed to Byutong at once.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Allahabad paper telegraphs from Guntok on the 19th inst.:—The road from Koppa to the Jalep is quite finished, although the greatest difficulty was experienced in keeping the coolies together on account of the excessive cold and difficulty in providing adequate shelter. The Raja's palace here is to be put into thorough repair in order to make it habitable for the troops during the winter. The weather has been perfect for the last few days, and there are no clouds about to spoil our view of the snows.

THE police have obtained a clue to the murderer of the two elderly native women recently discovered murdered in their house at Calcutta. The chopper and knife that were found have been identified by Mr. Thom, a European gentleman, who stated they were used in his kitchen and were missed on the morning the deed was committed. His masalchi had also, he said, been missing since the previous evening. The man is supposed to have absconded to Chupra, and a warrant has been issued for his apprehension.

MADRAS.

(Nov. 28.)

NOT very long ago a Madras paper published a story of certain aborigines of the south who informed a Sahib that the government of the Empire was in the hands of the high priest of a neighbouring temple, and that white men only appeared on the scene occasionally when they wanted to shoot. A companion story comes from the same Presidency, where an Englishman of Upper India, accustomed to the more civilised forms of government, was lately in camp. He was armed with a parwana from the Collector, and on one occasion, when there was a difficulty in the supplies, produced the document, thinking to overawe the mongar or headman of the village. To him this independent official with great scorn said:—"Collector Sahib! I've never seen your Collector Sahib." Madras seems to be in urgent need of "personal government."

BOMBAY.

(Nov. 30.)

ON Saturday evening last, Lady Reay, attended by Captain Brooks, aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Governor, arrived from Poona, and proceeded to Government House, Malabar Point.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT arrived at Bombay by the G.I.P. Railway train from Poona at 6.45 A.M. on Saturday last. In the course of the day his Royal Highness inspected the harbour defences and the fortifications at Mahaluxmi.

PRINCE ARTHUR AND PRINCESS MARGARET, the children of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, arrived by the mail on Monday morning. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess, attended by Colonel Beecher, proceeded on board and brought their children ashore. Lady Reay, who had ridden down to the Bunder, attended by Captain Hamilton, met the Duke and Duchess as they returned, and welcomed Prince Arthur and Princess Margaret, both of whom shook hands with her Ladyship. In the afternoon T.R.H. the Duke and Duchess, with their three children, left for Poona by the mail train. They were attended by Major-General Sir John McNeil, Colonel Cavaye, Colonel Beecher, and Captain Herbert, A.D.C. The ducal party took their departure from the Victoria Terminus, where Colonel Lyttelton, Military Secretary to the Governor, Colonel Cunningham, commanding Bombay District, Captain Roupell, Captain MacMahon and Captain Hamilton were present to see them off.

ON Saturday afternoon a goods train derailed on the G.I.P. Railway between Neral and Callian. The down mail train to Madras was detained at Budlapore for nearly two hours, until appliances were procured from Callian to clear the line. At the same time the up train from Poona, which had amongst its passengers H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught and H.E. Lady Reay, was detained at Neal. But little damage was done by the derailment, and when the line was cleared the two trains which were delayed proceeded to their destinations.

A CORRESPONDENT writes in reference to the death of Mr. J. McLeod Campbell:—Mr. Campbell was exceedingly kind and considerate to all his subordinates, who liked him immensely, and it is nothing but the bare truth to say that to almost all of them his death is a personal loss. It is to be hoped that his numerous friends and admirers will take some steps to perpetuate his memory in some appropriate way. He has left them all the example of a pure and blameless life, sacrificed to the call of duty.

SINCERE and general regret, says the Bombay Gazette, will be felt in Bombay society at the death of Miss Avabai Bhownagree, sister of Mr. M. M. Bhowangree, C.I.E. Miss Bhownagree's was a familiar and an always welcome figure in European and in Native society, and in both she had friends innumerable, for her bright intelligence and singularly amiable disposition made her a favourite wherever she went. During two somewhat prolonged visits to London Miss Bhownagree saw much of English society, and worthily represented the younger generation of Parsee ladies who have profited so largely from the movement for higher education in their community. Here and at home everyone who came in contact with her regarded her with esteem, and her death has made a void in society the consciousness of which will not soon pass away.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the last week:—Rain during week in parts of Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapore, Satara, Bijapur, Belgaum, Dharwar, Kanara, Rutnagherry, and Kattywar. More wanted, especially for late crops, throughout Khandeish and in three talukas of Nassik, six of Ahmednugger, and two of Belgaum. Exotic cotton damaged by blight in two talukas of Dharwar, and crops generally by blight, drought, and rats or insects in Kurrachee and Rutnagherry. Cotton in one taluka of Sholapore, early jowari in one taluka of Dharwar, and crops in parts of Baroda damaged by the late rain. Standing crops otherwise good. Harvesting of early crops and sowing of late crops progressing in several districts, and cotton picking in parts of Shikarpore, Kaira, and Khandeish. Probable outturn of early crops ten annas in Kurrachee and from six to nine annas in Nassik. Fodder scarce in parts of Hyderabad, Khandeish, and Baroda, and in six talukas of Nassik and one of Ahmednugger. Agricultural stock in poor condition in three talukas of Nassik and parts of Kattywar. Scarcity of water felt in parts of Broach, Khandeish, and Baroda.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Nov. 28.)

SIR DONALD WALLACE, still at Simla on special duty, was to leave for Calcutta on Thursday, and rejoins the Viceroy at Calcutta on the 2nd prox.

A NEW and beautiful east window is about to be placed in the church at Simla, in memory of Mrs. Matthew, the late wife of the Bishop of Lahore. It is an altogether spontaneous offering of her many friends, and the project was unknown beyond their immediate circle until ripe for being carried into effect.

No rain was reported from any of the districts in the Punjab during the week ending Nov. 14th. The prices of food grains still remain unsettled, but a rise is reported from only two stations. Reaping and harvesting of kharij crops, and ploughing and sowing of rabi crops are still in progress. More rain was urgently wanted at Hissar and Sealkote for rabi sowings. The outturn is reported to be considerably below average in some districts, and a very poor one was reported from Hissar; while the crops dependent on the Bara Canal had almost dried up.

THE general superintendence of the arrangements in the Punjab Native States in connection with the maintenance of special corps will be entrusted to Major H. Melliss, assisted by two officers to be appointed hereafter. These officers will visit the States periodically for purposes of instruction and inspection; but it is not the intention of Government to appoint any British officers in connection with these arrangements to reside permanently in any of the Punjab Native States.

THE Lahore paper is informed that a company is being formed to extend in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies the system of local banking that has proved so successful in Northern India. Of the required capital (Rs. 10,00,000) eight lakhs have been subscribed by four Punjab capitalists, and the remaining two lakhs will be offered to the public, where branches are opened, so as to secure local shareholders and influence. The managing directorship will be in the hands of a well-known Punjab business man, and two branch managers are being engaged from a Scotch bank in Edinburgh.

BURMA.

SEEING that we must always count specially upon the supplies from Burma in the event of a scarcity, it is of great importance that the state of the crops in that province should be clearly understood. The area under rice cultivation in the ten chief rice-producing districts is now estimated at 3,602,766 acres, or 127,199 acres more than the area actually under cultivation in 1887. The damage resulting from floods is considerable in Akyab, Pegu, Bassein, Shwegyin, and Amherst districts. At the end of October and in the first week in November rain was everywhere insufficient, and the crop, which promised very well indeed, is now not likely to be above the average, unless more rain falls.

It is stated that the Government intend to establish at Lashid, about a hundred and seventy-three miles from Mandalay, a permanent post for trade purposes, and to construct a road for carts up to Tonzi, and then, in a year or two, to carry the road up to Lashid. Our Mandalay contemporary learns that a party equipped and rationed will start from Mandalay very shortly for this object, and the Superintendent of the Northern Shan States, Lieutenant Daly, will reach that post via the Shweli valley about the early part of January. It is suggested that every possible publicity should be given to what the Government intend doing, and every information obtained regarding the prospects, wants, and probable demands of the country, and made known to those on whom the trade with these parts rests.

THE police constables at Bhamo have a grievance. They object to being whipped for thefts. Not long ago fifteen geese were stolen by three sergeants of police, just allowing of five to each; but the matter being traced to them, they were found guilty and whipped. Now there may be reasons why whipping should be particularly objectionable to the erring constabulary—who in certain localities steal, not for the whipping, but for the dismissal which such offences entail, following any trifling time in jail. It has all along been understood that this was the procedure to be followed. A dissatisfied constable should steal, be detected, and receive a fortnight's imprisonment with dismissal from the force. Whipping was not in the contract. When, therefore, it was introduced the other day, it was felt that it was an innovation which, as Native editors would say, was prejudicial to the interests of the country at large. Some retirements from the force have taken place in consequence, and there is much sullen feeling about this whipping question. It is, however, reassuring to hear that their defection does not cause alarm. One correspondent, indeed, writes that there should be more such. There is no doubt that many people who think they cannot be spared can be spared.

DR. NOETLING, of the Geological Survey of India, records a most astonishing discovery made by him in his researches in Upper Burma. He came across a mountain of iron. He says:—"Having noticed on the way numerous pieces of iron ore, which became still more frequent on the southern side of the hill, I examined this hill in several directions, and seeing its surface everywhere covered with large blocks of iron ore, originating evidently from superficial decomposition of lower beds, I venture to conclude that the whole of the hill consists of a huge mass of iron ore. I was unable to ascertain the geological conditions under which this iron ore occurs, and to ascertain its exact limits and extension on account of the dense jungle and the stopping of my compass in consequence of the tremendous attraction; but I estimate the hill covers at least an area of about a square mile, and rises about 200 feet above the level of the Twinng valley. . . . The iron ore . . . consists of hematite (peroxide of iron), which is one of the best and most valuable iron ores, and which is always more or less magnetic; thence the "magnetic rock" of Singaung. As iron without coal to work it would be hardly of any value, the importance of the discovery is enhanced by the fact that coal also abounds in Upper Burma. Here will be an accession of wealth before which the Ruby mines will be a mere toy.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DECEMBER 10.

ARMIES OF INDIAN NATIVE STATES.

Mr. VINCENT asked the Under-Secretary for India whether any measures had been taken during the past few years to induce the feudatory chiefs and princes of India to reduce their armies from 350,000 men and 4,000 guns to a more reasonable number, so that a larger share of their revenues might thereby be diverted from expenses of military display to the internal development of their States; and, if so, whether the Government of India had been able to devise any means for utilising the forces thus reduced towards the general defence of the Empire.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has no official information on the subject, but is aware that the question of the utilisation of the armaments and military resources of the Native States has engaged and is engaging the attention of the Government of India.

NATIVE CHRISTIAN GIRLS IN INDIA.

Mr. STUART (on behalf of Mr. H. Wilson) asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was aware that a telegram had been received on December 7 by several members of that House from Mr. Alfred Dyer, editor of the Bombay Guardian, in which he alleged that a European magistrate at Patna on the day previous had ordered a Christian girl, whom he held to be under fourteen years of age, to be taken from the charge of Miss Abraham, Church Missionary Zenana Mission, and handed over to an immoral man to whom her mother had sold her; whether he had telegraphed for further particulars; what reply he had received; and what action would be taken.

Sir J. GORST: The Secretary of State has received the following information from the Government of India in reference to the alleged case of withdrawal of a girl from the custody of the Church Missionary Zenana Mission:—

"Quinn, magistrate of Patna district, reports that girl alleged to be under fourteen years of age left reputed husband's house in October last. Application made to magistrate of district under section 551, Criminal Procedure Act X. of 1882, to restore girl to her mother. Orders issued under section to show cause why girl should not be restored. Inquiry made about it shows that girl's marriage has been proved and Court's orders issued for the restoration of the girl to her husband and mother. Bengal High Court, on application, pending inquiry, has refused to interfere with district magistrate's proceedings. Affair apparently dispute between the missionaries and natural guardians for possession of Native child. The Government of Bengal has called for record of district magistrate's proceedings."

I will read to the House the section of the Indian Procedure Code referred to:—

"Section 551. Upon complaint made to a Presidency magistrate or district magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman, or of a female child under the age of 14 years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian, or other person having the lawful charge of such child, and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary."

The Secretary of State desires me to remind the House that Indian magistrates are bound to administer the law as it is, and that the Government of Her Majesty is under the most solemn obligations to respect the religious and social customs of the Hindoos and all other classes of Her Majesty's subjects in India. (Hear, hear.)

DEC. 11.

PAY IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT OF INDIA.

In answer to Mr. H. S. WRIGHT, as to the equalisation of the pay of the military and civil branches of the Public Works Department, &c.,

Sir J. GORST said: The proposal of Lord Kimberley in 1883 was to equalise the pay of civil and military engineers, by discontinuing the military pay proper of the latter. It was not carried out because the Government of India by subsequent representations convinced the Secretary of State that it was inexpedient. As the circumstances of the two services are essentially dissimilar, the Secretary of State sees no occasion for equalising the conditions of furlough and pension.

INCREASE OF CRIME IN CEYLON.

In answer to Mr. S. SMITH,

Baron H. DE WORMS said: The question of the increase of crime in Ceylon is now being inquired into by an experienced officer lent to the Ceylon Government by the Government of India. The Secretary of State cannot undertake to say what was in the mind of the Governor when using the expression referred to by the hon. member. He spoke of "reasons many of them deep-seated, some of them obscure, some of them very delicate to mention." The Secretary of State has already directed the Governor to introduce an ordinance repealing the contagious diseases ordinance as soon as possible. The subject will no doubt be brought up during the present session of the Council, which was opened on October 31st last.

INDIA AND TIBET.

Sir G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was true, as recently stated, in regard to the late misunderstanding with Tibet, that when, some three years ago, a commercial mission was pressed on the Government of India, they saw strong objections to adopting that measure under the circumstances of the time, and declined; but that the Home Government took a different view and decided on deputing to China, with the above object, an officer who happened to be in England at the time.

Sir J. GORST: No; the statement is inaccurate. The Secretary of State has no reason to believe that any serious divergence of policy existed, as the hon. member supposes, between the Government of India and the last Home Government but one.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—DEC. 11.

DOCKS AT GIBRALTAR AND BOMBAY.

Viscount SIDMOUTH asked Her Majesty's Government whether it was intended to undertake the construction of a dock for men-of-war of the largest class at Gibraltar, and what progress was being made towards the completion of the docks at Bombay for ships of Her Majesty's Navy. The noble lord said that the case of Gibraltar had been under the consideration of successive Governments for many years. And yet it was one of immense importance in view of the possibility of a ship being damaged in action or by accident. The construction of a dock, he was told, would not be an expensive affair; it could be completed for £150,000; and there were three available sites. No doubt the dock would be used by private ships, of which twenty pass Gibraltar daily; but a dock could not be constructed by private enterprise because every portion of the rock belonged to the Crown. The question had been so long under consideration that it was reasonable to expect that a definite answer might be given.

Lord KNUTSFORD said that he had been requested to answer the question relating to Gibraltar on the part of the Admiralty. The importance of the matter was fully recognised, but a definite answer could not be given because the subject was still under the consideration of the Admiralty. Reports were being obtained, but it had not yet been decided that a new dock was to be constructed.

Viscount CROSS said with regard to Bombay he was able to assure their lordships before the House rose for the summer recess that he was as anxious as any one that the docks should be made; but there were then considerable difficulties in the way. He was happy to say they had been, as he believed, removed. It was decided that there should be a conference between the Admiralty and the India Office on the matter. The conference had since taken place, with the result that a modified scheme had been prepared which he expected to receive next week, and which was designed to meet the requirements of both the Admiralty and the Government of India.

Lord BRASSEY said that he wished to support the noble Viscount in advocating the construction of a dock at Gibraltar. Such a dock would be of great use to the mercantile marine, and he had reason to believe that, with the assistance of a subsidy from the Government, which assistance had been given in the case of Vancouver and Hongkong, a dock might be provided at a small charge to the public.

THE Bally Paper Mills Company, of Calcutta, has declared a dividend of 12 per cent. for the year ended 31st July. The Directors say that it has from time to time proved impossible to move off the production without running heavily into stock.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

SIR CHARLES MACGREGOR.*

This work will be very eagerly read in India, where chiefly Sir Charles MacGregor won his way to fame and high military position. It should also have a large circulation amongst regimental officers, for it tells the story of a life which was devoted to the profession of arms, and the early closing of which was a loss to that profession, and to England and India. It is a work which should be an encouragement to the youngest officer in the Service who aspires to command to persevere in the determination to succeed, to have confidence in himself, and to seek for and seize every opportunity of distinction. This is what the subject of this biography did from the day he became a soldier. It may not, however, be in the power of every aspirant to military fame and honours to write as young Charles MacGregor did:—"I have the pleasure of knowing that whatever I am it is not owing to headquarters' interest, and that the only interest I have is owing to my own exertions." He wrote this when he became fifth lieutenant by a death vacancy, and expected to be a captain "in five years more." But it must be allowed that the youth who wrote in this strain of self-satisfaction in his third year of service could have written truthfully in much the same strain at the close of his career. He won his spurs by his own merits; for as Sir Frederick Roberts said of him when unveiling his portrait at Simla in July last:—"His grand record of service, his indefatigable industry, and his determination to bring to a successful issue any kind of work entrusted to him, had made him a marked man." And Lord Dufferin added:—"Not among the many distinguished captains I have known could I mention one who came nearer in martial bearing, love of his profession, devotion to duty and knowledge of the art of war, to the ideal of a powerful chivalrous warrior." Those who knew him intimately, although they were few, for his hasty temper and brusque manner made many misunderstand him, know that in addition to his great soldierly qualities he had one of the kindest of natures, and was, in the widest sense, a true and generous friend.

The biography of such a man should be written; but truth compels us to say that the one which his widow has just given to the public is not calculated to do the justice she would wish done to her husband's memory. The book will, as we have said, find many readers; but it will be read not without pain in some quarters, and with considerable regret in others. For there is much made public in its pages in the shape of extracts from letters and diaries of the dead man which he never could have intended to have been so used. Lady MacGregor, in the preface to the work, pleads that "it is not easy for a wife to write impartially of a departed husband"—a plea which will be charitably accepted, but with the feeling that better justice would have been done to MacGregor's character and memory had stronger hands undertaken the task. The story of his life might have been told, and well told, too, in a work of much smaller compass, from which not only redundant and irrelevant matter would have been excluded, but in which no place would have been found for the crude and ill-natured opinions of youth, or the bitter reflections of maturer age carping continually on the theme of great services rendered and extraordinary merits neglected. This, unfortunately, is the theme which runs through these volumes from beginning to end. In April, 1858, when he had scarcely seen eighteen months of soldiering, Lieut. MacGregor writes home:—

"I don't think I shall stop much longer in this horrid service. To like the army a man must have no feeling of sensitiveness; he must be able to stand being bullied, insulted, and bothered, without a word. To enable him to obey any order, however wrong, without a word, if he has not interest or money, he must stand by and see himself wronged; see others, far junior to him, placed over his head, see himself after years and years of meritorious service still at the bottom of the list. I feel that a soldier's calling is not mine. I can't stand being bullied and snubbed continually for no other reason than that if you are encouraged you may prove yourself a good man and swallow up all the appointments that otherwise would go to the bigwig's friends. All I want is your permission to cut the whole concern and go into the Agra Bank. I should get on much better there, and be able to make a little money, and get out of this cursed country altogether."

Of course, with the promotion which came very shortly afterwards, he abandoned the idea of leaving the army, but the feeling that he was being unjustly dealt with always was present with him; and so we find him writing in 1885, after his tenure of the high office of Quartermaster-General in India had expired:—"I do feel most acutely the fact that even twenty years' work which I put against twenty years' service of any other man in India has done nothing for me." Yet, during this period, he had held numerous high staff appointments—had been Chief of the Staff with the Northern Afghanistan Force, and a Brigadier-General in the Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, and even on relinquishing the Quartermaster-Generalship had been appointed to the coveted post of the command of the Punjab Frontier Force. His grievance was that he was not allowed (contrary to precedent) to retain the rank of Major-General on giving up the Quartermaster-Generalship. His biographer states that his wish was not acceded to on account of "jealousy excited by his unusual merit"—"the unlooked-for ingratitude of his superior officers"—and she adds:—"Instead of resigning and throwing up the service in disgust, as many a man in his position might have done, and as one or two doubtless wished he might do, he resolutely determined to serve on, doggedly concluding to force his way to the highest post obtainable in the Indian Army; and with this view he decided to accept the command of the Punjab Frontier Force when it was offered to him!"

That MacGregor rendered great and gallant service to his country official records fully prove, and in them will be found his highest meed of praise. He was ever ready to volunteer for any enterprise, and in the day of fight he showed himself to be not only a dashing, but a cool and sagacious, leader. His personal courage must have been an inspiration to his followers, and he certainly deserved, as Sir Henry Daly wrote, "the purest Victoria Cross" which the Queen could bestow. After reading of his individual deeds of daring in India, in China, and in Afghanistan, of his having been seven times wounded in action, one cannot but regret that the bronze cross "For Valour," which he so much coveted, was not amongst the other decorations which he had gained in "honour." But it is hardly fair to say that his services were neglected and unrewarded. On his thirty-ninth birthday he was a C.B., a C.S.I., a brevet-colonel and deputy quartermaster-general at head quarters, and he died a major-general and a Knight Companion of the Bath. Yet throughout these volumes, either quoting from himself or stating her own opinion, his widow complains of official jealousy preventing his merits being recognised and rewarded.

These continual complainings are the chief blemishes in a work not free from other faults; but it would be unjust to a brave man's memory to conclude this notice without showing a brighter side to his character. Sir Charles MacGregor is stricken with a complaint which the doctors tell him threatens his life, unless he goes home for rest and careful treatment. At the time there was reason to suppose that the Government were about to send an expedition against one of the frontier tribes, and it was possible that he would be nominated to the command. The doctors positively insist upon the fact that if he goes on service it will bring on an acute attack, and probably kill him outright. He sends the following letter to his wife:—

"This is fearfully unfortunate, not only because it must end fatally sooner or later, but coming just as they are going to have a campaign in which I was to command it is impossible for me to refuse to go now. If I don't go I am ruined in reputation; if I do go I shall probably die in the middle of it. The latter would be the best for me; but, my darling, what is the best for you?—to have a husband with a damaged reputation (I know the world will not let me off), or to lose me and be able to say—'He knew he was going to his death but he would go.'—Good-bye, my darling. I little thought this letter would end so; but if there is war, I must go. If death is to come, I would rather it was with my claymore in my hand. I can face anything, but not disgrace! Say good-bye to Viva (his daughter) for me. Don't tell her; it will do no good. I had half a mind not to tell you, but I could not show such want of trust in you and your nerve; and you and your nursing (if I can only get home) might be the means of pulling me through. Remember, I have apparently been nearer death than this Good-bye."

The expedition did not take place, and he was free to go home. But the hand of death was on him. He reached London, but was ordered by his physician to Cairo, whither he and Lady MacGregor went. But he only went to die. He expired calmly on the 5th of February, 1887, dying young, for he had not completed his forty-seventh year. He had written some little time before, when he knew that the end was coming: "I hope everyone will allow that I died with a clean sheet, and no one can throw stones at my honour. I only want a stone (plain and rugged as the hills of the clan) to say, 'Here lies C. MacGregor, of the old stock of the Clan Gregor, who did his best for the old name.'"

The epitaph has the merit uncommon to most epitaphs of being true, and under the mountain shadows which kiss the border of Loch Katrine, the gallant warrior rests mid the kindred dust of clansmen.

SAKUNTALA ; OR, THE LOST RING.*

Twenty-five years ago Raja Lachhman Sinh, a deputy collector of the North-West Provinces, snatched from his faithfully-discharged duties the time to translate into Hindi the ancient Sanskrit drama "Sakuntalā," the reputation of which is world-wide. The learned Raja had the satisfaction of seeing his translation acknowledged as a work of exceptional merit, and, besides finding much favour in India, had the honour of being edited in England, copiously annotated, and made a text-book for selected candidates destined for the Indian Civil Service. That translation was in prose, and was, therefore, admirably adapted for the purposes of teaching the Hindi language.

After a time the translator discovered that he had worked with a corrupt version of the drama, and, being dissatisfied with his work from other reasons, he has now re-translated the whole, and produced it in better form. The text he has chosen is the scholarly edition of Sir Monier Williams, and he has rendered it into Hindi with painstaking accuracy. This time he has preserved the form of the original by translating the prose into prose, and the verse into verse. He has done this with such skill and elegance that his work will become the standard form of the drama, now that the Sanskrit language has ceased to be the chief study of Hindus.

Great care has been taken to bring out the book in a worthy manner. It is beautifully printed, on good paper, and each page is adorned with a handsome border. Another evidence of care is the regularity of the spelling. Very few Hindu authors pay regard to the niceties of orthography. Words are too frequently written down on the phonetic principle, without the least regard to consistency or uniformity. Raja Lachhman Sinh seems to have realised the position that a settled orthography is essential to the cultivation of his vernacular language.

The translation now available is a more scholarly work than that which formerly appeared. It accurately represents the original in a Hindi dress, preserving the dramatic form, retaining its suitability for scenic representation. But the poetry with which it is adorned, while adding to its charm, reduces its value as a text book for learning the language. For this latter purpose the older prose rendering is far more valuable; because the dialogue form in which it is written abounds in colloquialisms, and the language is idiomatic and polished, without being over-refined. The present translation is a more finished work, and one of which India may be proud. It is a veritable Hindi classic, and raises that language to the level of its sister Bengali, as the polished vernacular of an advancing people.

HISTORY OF THE MONGOLS.†

It is an idea far from uncommon even amidst cultivated and intellectual circles that the irruption of the Mongol Hordes into Central Asia and surrounding nations was an unmitigated and intolerable curse. Mr. Howorth's masterly history of this extraordinary race will tend in large measure to dispel such notions. It is not denied—it could not be seriously argued otherwise—that the track of these savage hordes was marked with ruin and destruction. Their paths were discernible by the ravages which characterised the desultory and haphazard movements of wandering and uncivilised hordes; but this is only one side of the picture. Take the instance of the conquest of Persia—the subject-matter of the volume under review. Kulaku, who overran the land of Iran, was cruel, ruthless, and void of mercy, but—and what a but!—he swept away the most odious, most dreaded, and most abominable race which ever raised a standard in any kingdom in the world's history. The Ismaelites, or assassins known to fame in Europe as the followers of the "Old Man of the Mountain," as their name implies, preached the Gospel of Assassination. Murder was with them a creed; life had no sanctity, blood no claim. Old and young women and children, maidens and matrons, all fell beneath their devouring sword. To have swept away such ruffianism and purged the land of such villainy, placed the world under a debt of gratitude to the avengers, albeit themselves cruel, vindictive, and barbarous.

This was much, but more was to follow under the reign of Kalaku's successors. When the Mongols had become converted from Buddhism to the faith of the Prophet of Arabia the land made great strides. Literature flourished, architecture attained a zenith of perfection, brass work took its rise. Nor were the results less remarkable in other directions. These Mongols planted cities; they broke the power of the Franciscan and Dominican friars, which once threatened to overwhelm Christendom in a sea of bigotry and superstition; they poured forth a stream of able administrators, some of whom stand forth unrivalled in the annals of the Middle ages. They inspired the world with that love of travel and adventure which, pre-eminently the characteristic of those times, still stand forth in this the nineteenth century of grace as the keynote of England's national greatness.

Surely all these various claims to consideration should not—indeed, cannot—be altogether overlooked as regards the Mongols! To blame is easy; to give praise requires a large mind and generous aspirations; but it is clear that this crude, barbaric race played an important and not altogether disadvantageous part on the stage of life; and Mr. Howorth deserves the thanks of all reflecting persons for the light he has thrown upon a little known subject. His labours must have been enormous; his reward can scarcely be commensurate; but commendation is, at least, due to careful research and laborious diligence.

MACCABE AT THE NOVELTY THEATRE.—Frederic Maccabe, whom most of us remember from the days of our early youth, is paying a short visit to Bombay, and delighting large audiences nightly with his ever fresh and ever sprightly performances. Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Maccabe has been so long before the public it is generally admitted that as an entertainer he is still young, and that while behind the footlights he still enjoys himself as much as any member of the audience. The programme, which is subject to slight variations each evening, includes the popular entertainer's best performances—his essays in ventriloquism and his comic sketch of the street minstrel. During the earlier part of the entertainment the audience is kept in a continuous row of laughter; during the latter they have a pleasant variety, Mr. Maccabe being joined by a gifted and attractive young lady, Mdlle. Minnia, by whose aid a pleasant little sketch is given, and one or two remarkably pretty dances are introduced.

THE PROPRIETORS OF THE EMPERESS are to be congratulated on the success they have attained in founding a Lady's Newspaper in India. Following in the wake of its sister journal at home, The Queen, it often contains, in addition to much special matter relating to such important topics as dress, household management, and hints whereby ladies may make their homes and even themselves more attractive, information of great interest to their fathers, husbands, and brothers also. The journal is published in Calcutta, and counts among its subscribers Lady Dufferin, Lady Reay, Lady Connemara, and the élite of Anglo-Indian society. It is well printed on excellent paper, and its illustrations are of a high-class character. It is to be hoped that a greatly increased circulation will repay the enterprise of its promoters.

THE LATE COLONEL CROOKSHANK.—A correspondent writes to the Civil and Military Gazette from the River Column regarding the biding sorrow which is still expressed whenever Colonel Crookshank's name is mentioned, and the admiration for his extreme coolness under fire. At Kotkai, on the 4th October, he was sitting on his horse between two of the guns when a shot passed so close to his charger as to make it plunge, whilst another fell in rear of it. The only effect of this close firing was to make the Colonel pat his horse and say: "You don't like being fired at, old boy, eh?" On the 6th, when part of the Column moved toward Kunhar on reconnaissance duty, a short distance from Kotkai, it was necessary for the troops to wheel abruptly to the right. At the point where they wheeled there was a large flat stone, and close to this stone the Colonel was struck.

THE COST OF THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.—A Calcutta paper remarks:—"When it comes to paying the costs of the Congress the popularity of that body will be put to a severe test. A subscription list would be very interesting, if only to show whether any men of position and wealth are inclined to follow the example of the Trans-Atlantic supporters of the Irish Nationalists in an attempt to achieve a vicariate revenge on English authority. If there be any powerful patron of the Congress in the background, he may learn that it is a ticklish game to subsidise sedition. But funds for the Congress must be found. Mr. Hume says that it is proposed to allow Mr. Digby £500 a-year for the charge of the Agency in England, the total cost of which will amount to £2,500 per annum. Mr. Bradlaugh will lecture twice a week all over England for the next year or so. Where the lectures do not pay the cost of hiring and lighting the rooms, &c., it is proposed to make good the deficit. Mr. Hume sets down the total of these deficits at £15 to £20 a month, but he is making a double error in this calculation. Forgetful of empty benches on Indian Budget nights, he thinks that audiences are to be found in England who would pay to hear a lecture on India, when he does not seem to know the class of subjects on which Mr. Bradlaugh has formerly exerted his eloquence. The 'unwashed' audiences would hardly think the imaginary woes of Bengal a satisfactory substitute for the old spicy themes."

Derangement.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigne's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1888.

THE BABU'S NEW FRIEND.

BABUDOM can take fresh heart. The Congress agitation had received rather a severe blow in India, owing to Lord Dufferin's speech at the St. Andrew's Dinner in Calcutta, and the scheme was not flourishing in England; but there is now hope on the horizon. Mr. Gladstone has spoken, and declared himself to be on the side of the Babu agitator. In his very foggy address to the great unwashed at Limehouse he explained his sympathies with India. He had been greatly shocked at Lord Salisbury having spoken contemptuously of Mr. Dababoi Naoroji, for Mr. Gladstone never speaks himself contemptuously of a political opponent. The unfortunate lapsus lingue of the Prime Minister was not likely to pass without comment by Mr. Gladstone when the opportunity of turning it to account came. So he informed his audience that Lord Salisbury's expression "had given deep offence to many millions of our fellow-subjects in India." But Mr. Gladstone is not so much moved to anger in consequence of Lord Salisbury having spoken as he did, but rather to astonishment that "after having committed a fault in any unhappy moment of forgetfulness he should not yet have offered an apology for it." This is "quite too charming." That it is the general opinion of friends and opponents that some explanation or apology on the part of his lordship should have been immediately forthcoming after the blunder may be allowed, but the comic part of the business is that Mr. Gladstone should be the one to inculcate the virtues of retraction and regret for words uttered. Well may the Times of this morning say, "It is difficult to understand why Mr. Gladstone should be so anxious for an apology from Lord Salisbury for what was avowedly a joke, though a very indiscreet one, when he himself sets so very bad an example in that respect. Were he to repeat outside of the House of Commons what he said about Dr. Barr under protection of privilege he would probably be compelled to apologise under pressure of the kind used by Colonel Dopping. But what does Mr. Gladstone care? He succeeded in getting his hearers to applaud himself and to cry "Shame" at Lord Salisbury's bad manners. But while, according to his own account, he and the people of India are waiting for that apology, we turn to what he had to say about those "people." And here it is:—"The people of India are in a condition most interesting to every man qualified to comprehend the large principles and responsibilities of British domination. They are a rising people; they are a people of awakening mind, desiring to enter more and more into the public life of their own country, and their own country is beginning to have a public life. I rejoice to say there never was a period when the principles of loyalty to the Queen and attachment to the English nation and the English Power—there never was a period when it was as high as it is now: but contemptuous denunciations by the Prime Minister of England are not the way to increase that feeling. (Cheers). You may have observed that they are endeavouring to cultivate amongst themselves the development of public opinion. They are meeting in what are called congresses. I can only say this—I have read many of their declarations, and I am delighted at the spirit both of intelligence and of attachment to this country which they manifest. It is our business to do everything we can to foster and nourish that sentiment, and to avoid indignities either of indifference to their interesting work or contempt for their race feelings." (Cheers.)

If this is all that Mr. Gladstone has to say on behalf of the "rising" millions who are "meeting in what are called Congresses," it need not cause much alarm to those who see in those "Congresses" elements of political danger. But the remarks of the ex-Premier will be made much of by English agitators who are fanning the flame of discontent in India, and trying to throw English rule there into contempt. The disloyal Native Press will be instructed to call attention to the fact of so great and good a man as Mr. Gladstone having enlisted in their cause, and this will, of course, be retold with many additions, although the truth may be that this momentary "clap-trap" about the "people of India," having served its temporary party purpose, will be with India itself altogether ignored or forgotten by Mr. Gladstone. Beyond a liberal gift of words the great Liberal orator and statesman will bestow nothing upon his friends of the "Congresses." But these friends want something more in England than the gift of tongues. They want funds. Sad as the fact is, it is true. Their representative in London, Mr. Eardley Norton, is now in India trying to raise enthusiasm of a more substantial nature than he has been hitherto favoured with by his Native friends, to whom before he left England he dictated an urgent appeal from the National Liberal Club. "Let me intreat," he says, in piteous terms, "my many Native friends and all the many more who are interested in the success of those reforms for which your National Congress is striving to make a resolute effort, to place their Political Agency upon a sure and sound financial basis." And here follows "what is wanted" :—

We need a home in London ; an expert ready with pen and tongue to watch our interests, and repel the attacks which ignorance or jealousy, or alarm may make upon our cause. We need some one to carry on the good work begun—a man of action, a man of knowledge, a man of resource, one with the knowledge how to push a people's wants, and one with influence among those who can teach and educate constituencies. Such a man is Mr. Digby. The labourer is worthy of his hire, and we must pay Mr. Digby as handsomely as we can. The work is no child's play. It entails great labour and the expenditure of much time and talent. You have spoken. Now you must act. Unless you desire to see the fabric of your political edifice crumble away and fall in ruins through want of vitality you must back your speech by money. No great reform was ever carried without a corresponding expenditure. Within a fortnight the enthusiasts of the Anti-Congress League Association subscribed something like £250,000 for the triumph of the cause they held so sacred. You are not expected to do as much.

It has been said that "Blessed are those that expect nothing, for they shall not be deceived ;" but Mr. Eardley Norton cannot be expected to say "Amen" to that beatitude. Let him appeal, then, to Mr. Gladstone, and to those eighty-five members for Ireland of whom he writes in the same letter, "We shall have eighty-five Irish votes when we come to a fair fight on the floor of the House." These be your gods to-day, O Babú ! See that they send you not "empty away," in reply to the modest request of your Representative for £250,000 to secure the triumph of your "sacred" cause.

SIR OWEN TUDOR BURNE, K.C.S.I., &c., &c., has been elected a director of the Peninsular and Oriental Company. The board and shareholders are to be congratulated on a selection which will meet with unqualified satisfaction and approval by all—and they are a multitude—who are interested in the success of this great company.

In the report of the Bengal Central Railway Company, Limited, for the half-year ended June last, the directors state that there was a profit on working of £598, as compared with a loss of £2,391 in the corresponding period. Warrants for interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum are to be issued on January 5 for the current half-year. The line is in future to be worked by the company.

COLONEL PARRY NISBET has taken over the office of Resident in Kashmir from Mr. Plowden, at Lahore. It is understood that, as his Highness the Maharaja was absent at some little distance in connection with the marriage festivities of his brother Prince Amar Singh, Mr. Plowden, on leaving the Railway, was prevented from taking formal leave of his Highness. Prince Ram Singh has come to Lahore to represent the State in the Viceregal Durbar.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE 27th Bombay Infantry and the 42nd Gurkha Light Infantry will be withdrawn from Burma at the end of the cold season.

THE following changes in the musketry circles of the Bengal Commands have been approved by Government:—1st Circle, Presidency and Assam Districts; 2nd Circle, Allahabad and Nerbudda Districts, including Sehere and Itarsi stations; 3rd Circle, Oudh and Rohilkhand Districts; 4th Circle, Meerut District, including Goona, Deol and Ajmere Stations; 5th Circle, Sirhind and Bundelkhand Districts; 6th Circle, Lahore and Quetta Districts; 7th Circle, Rawalpindi and Peshawar Districts; 8th Circle, Punjab Frontier Force.

THE 1st Madras Lancers will be moved from Burma to Madras in four parties. The headquarters and one third will leave Pokoko on the 7th March and embark at Rangoon on the Clive on the 15th March. One third will leave Myingyan on the 22nd March, embarking at Rangoon on the 29th March on board the Canning. One troop will leave Myingyan on the 25th March for Pagan, picking up the remainder of the regiment at that station for conveyance to Rangoon, where they will embark on the 1st April, on the Clive for passage to Madras.

THE following rules, laid down by the Government of India, are published for general information, and are applicable to all continuous service officers of the Royal Engineers who may be permitted to proceed to Chatham for a course of instruction under the provisions of Clause 76 of India Army Circulars, 1877:—1. The period passed at Chatham does not interrupt privilege leave previously earned, but it does not count for further privilege leave. 2. Privilege leave may be taken either—(a) between the date of giving over charge in India and joining at Chatham; or (b) between the date of leaving Chatham and embarking in England for India. 3. In case (a) the officer will pay the expenses of his journey to England, and in case (b) from England.

It is not often that the British soldier offers violence to commissioned officers, but an instance has recently occurred at Umballa which formed the subject of investigation by a general court-martial. Private Robert Clements, 2nd Battalion (The Queen's) Royal West Surrey Regiment, was arraigned on the 24th October for having, while a prisoner in the cells and when asked by the Orderly Officer, Second Lieutenant Charles Edward de Lisle Solbe of the same battalion, whether he had any complaint to make, thrown at that officer an earthen vessel containing water. Subsequently the man aggravated his offence, when brought before Colonel Hood in the orderly room, by making use of filthy language to this officer. Prisoner was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, and to be dismissed the Service with ignominy. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief confirmed the sentence.

THE Deccan Times of the 17th Nov. says:—"General Luck went away on the morning of the 8th, and we think the three Cavalry Regiments were very glad to think that their inspection was over, as they had very hard work." As a sequel to the "hard work," the Deccan Times has omitted to mention, says the Englishman, that the parade has cost the State the loss of nine horses, worth collectively Rs. 7,000. Eight, we are told, died from congestion of the lungs, and one broke its back. Beside this the horse hospitals are full of cripples. Dashing Cavalry movements are, no doubt, good in their way, and in the field on actual service an occasional sacrifice of both men and animals may be necessary to secure an advantage; but we fail to see the use of this kind of thing in the time of peace.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

Mr. T. Sutherland, M.P. (the chairman of the company), presided on Wednesday over the forty-eighth annual ordinary general meeting of the proprietors of this company, which was held at the offices in Leadenhall-street. There was a very large attendance of shareholders.—In proposing the adoption of the report, together with the statement of accounts, the Chairman said that when they last met he thought they were on the eve of an improvement in trade. In June last, so far as the outward trade was concerned, that impression was confirmed, but the homeward business from India and China was still very unsatisfactory. There was no improvement in the homeward trade. In their outward-bound traffic, however, they had an augmentation to their receipts to the extent of no less than £80,000 during the past year, and they had also experienced the development of their homeward traffic from Australia to the extent of £20,000. Their receipts from India and China had been such that the net difference between 1886-7 and 1887-8 was that instead of £100,000 increase in freight it had only been £40,000, because what they had gained in their homeward trade from Australia, and the outward trade from London, they had lost to the extent of £60,000 on their traffic from India and China. The figures of their freight receipts for the past three years were, 1886, £1,029,000; in 1887, £934,000; and in 1888, £974,000. So that notwithstanding the improvement that had taken place in trade during the past twelve months their total freight receipts were still £55,000 less than they were in the year 1885-86. Since July last there had, however, been a considerable revival in the trade from the Far East, whilst from Bombay and Calcutta there had been a considerable rise in the freight, and the improved returns, so far as Australia was concerned, continued at the present time. The only drawback to their revenue was the unsatisfactory condition of the China trade, and that he feared was likely to continue for some time, because an inferior class of vessels was being employed in the trade than what had hitherto been the case. The passenger receipts had been very satisfactory indeed, and the increased trade for England was also continuing well. The increase in their passenger receipts for last year, as compared with the previous year, amounted to no less than £60,000 sterling. That was almost the largest increase the company had ever experienced in one single year, and that, too, without any assistance in any measure from the Government. The reason, however, why the shareholders were not able to realise the full benefit of the increased receipts was owing to three causes. The first was owing to the reduction of the subsidy which this year appeared in the accounts to the extent of £60,000. Secondly, they had had no transport receipts this year; and the third cause was due to the increased consumption of coal owing to their having to run their vessels at a higher rate of speed than they had hitherto been obliged, so that they could carry the mails under the contract. With respect to the future he did not like to be too sanguine, but he thought their prospects were very satisfactory. Having alluded to several other matters, he concluded by formally moving the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Mr. William Fane de Salis.—The report was unanimously adopted, and the dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. for the year having been declared, Sir Owen Tudor Burne and Mr. Edward Duncanson were elected directors of the company in the place of two members of the board who had resigned. The usual compliment to the chairman terminated the proceedings.

CLAIM AGAINST THE ORIENTAL BANK.

On Dec. 11 Mr. Justice Chitty delivered an exhaustive judgment in the matter of the Oriental Bank Corporation, now in liquidation, on a claim made against the bank's liquidator by Messrs. Walsh, Hall and Co., of Yokohama, Japan. The claim was for damages in respect of an order for gold, which, it was alleged, the bank had failed to deliver. In the year 1872 Messrs. Walsh gave an order for $1,000,000 of bar gold, to be delivered to the bank in Yokohama, but the gold was not delivered till the value of gold had gone down. Messrs. Walsh set up that the gold had been actually delivered to the bank from California, but had been kept back by a Mr. Robertson, now deceased, the manager of the bank at Yokohama. They alleged fraud, but contended that they did not discover the facts at the time. In 1884 the bank went into liquidation, and the claim now made was made in that liquidation.

Mr. Justice Chitty, in giving judgment, said that if there was fraud the evidence showed that it was not discovered till 1878, and that Messrs. Walsh had not had an opportunity of discovering it till then. So far they were not barred by the Statute of Limitations. As to the sufficiency of evidence to establish the fraud, Messrs. Walsh were to blame for their delay, as during the period of delay Mr. Robertson died. There was great difficulty in accepting statements charging fraud to a dead man, and proof of fraud against a deceased person must be very strong indeed. The reasons for putting any construction on the evidence of fraud adverse to the honesty of Mr. Robertson were not sufficient in this case. And there was this to be said, that Mr. Robertson himself made disclosures to Messrs. Walsh which, if fraud had been committed, would have shown it, being made to shrewd business men. He (Mr. Justice Chitty) held that there had not been fraud, and he dismissed the claims of Messrs. Walsh, Hall and Co., with costs.

At the Oothamna, or third day ceremony of the late Miss Avabai Bhowmagree, her brother, Mr. M. M. Bhowmagree, C.I.E., gave a sum of Rs. 25,000—Rs. 10,000 in his own name and Rs. 15,000 in the name of his mother—for the purpose of commemorating the name of the deceased by founding a charitable institution for the benefit of women. Miss Bhowmagree had a large circle of friends and admirers who, we hear, are anxious to raise a memorial fund in her honour. Mr. Bhowmagree has received a large number of letters and telegrams of condolence, including those from the Governor and Lady Reay, and H. H. the Thakore Saheb of Bhownagar.

THE

 BROAD ARROW
 AND
 ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to appointments and other service news, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of illustrated articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

Commenced in June, 1881.]"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India,
the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America,
Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLIC, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This assertion is necessary, as many persons desire purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA." From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of PAIN, BRUISES, COLIC, PALESTATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNREPUTABLE IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all chemists. Is. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURERS, J. T. DAVENPORT, 38, St. Russell St., W.C.

Cheques and Post Office Orders must be made payable to J. B. DENT. Catalogues Free.

Wanted, at home and abroad, travellers, agents, canvassers, shopkeepers, timekeepers, foremen of war s, clerks, and others, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved, to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Our naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers are invited to apply for the post. The means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th December; from Allahabad and Madras to the 5th December; and from Calcutta to the 4th December.

THE MARQUIS AND MARCHIONESS OF LANSDOWNE arrived in Bombay on Monday morning, Dec. 3rd, and met with a cordial reception. On landing at the Apollo Bunder, which was gaily decorated for the occasion, the Viceroy-elect was presented with an address of welcome from the Bombay Corporation. Having returned thanks for the generous and cordial terms in which he had been welcomed, he said that he recognised that it was one of the first duties of the Indian Government to render the Queen's possessions in this part of the world so secure as to give the utmost scope to the progress of all peaceful pursuits.

In the afternoon Lord Lansdowne visited the School of Art, and addressed the students. In doing so he mentioned that he sometimes thought when he heard people talking of their efforts to teach art in India that they should be a little cautious as to how they attempted anything of the kind, because they had already so much good art of their own that Europeans should think twice before they arrogated to themselves any supremacy in matters connected with art.

On Tuesday Lord Lansdowne received an address from the Chamber of Commerce. In reply he said that "ordinary caution as regarded himself, as well as the respect which he owes to his future colleagues and advisers, demand of him that he should be slow at the very outset of his career to give premature public utterances to his thoughts in regard to the affairs of your country." He subsequently visited the Elephanta Caves, in company with Lord and Lady Reay, and T.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

On Wednesday the new Viceroy inspected the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute. He told the students, in the course of a short speech, that he considered they had a right to look forward to the time when the Indian people should be less exclusively engaged in agriculture, and when a larger space should be given to other industries and professions. He afterwards opened a new ward at the Hospital for Animals at Parel. A purdah party was given the same afternoon in honour of Lady Lansdowne at Government House, and her ladyship at the close visited the Cama Hospital.

On Monday, December 10th, at all military stations throughout India the proclamation of Lord Lansdowne's assumption of the office of Viceroy was to be read under a royal salute.

THE last few days of Lord Dufferin's viceroyalty were busy ones. The Oudh Talukdars presented their address Dec. 5th; the Calcutta Municipality gave theirs Dec. 7th; Lord Lansdowne arrived next afternoon, and a State dinner took place at Government House that evening in honour of the incoming Viceroy.

THE ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the new Lady Dufferin Zenana Hospital took place Dec. 6th. The stone was laid by her Excellency the Marchioness of Dufferin. The élite of Calcutta society, European and Native, were present; nearly 1,500 persons in all attended.

LORD DUFFERIN, in addressing the assembly, said:—"Ladies and gentlemen, it is indeed a very great sorrow, both to Lady Dufferin and myself, that this should be the last occasion upon which either of us will have an opportunity of taking part in any public ceremony in Calcutta, but you need be under no apprehension that those eminent personages who are about to occupy our places amongst you will fail to continue the good works, and, as I trust, bring it even to a more successful issue than has been accorded to Lady Dufferin and myself. At all events, we shall have the satisfaction of knowing that our last public act in this great and prosperous capital has been an act of beneficence and mercy undertaken on behalf of the afflicted."

THE Marquis of Lansdowne was to hold his first Levée at Calcutta on Dec. 17th, and Lady Lansdowne a drawing-room on the 20th.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS was still on tour when the mail left. He had inspected Nowshera, Peshawur, Cherat, and Attock during the previous week.

LORD CONNEMARA AND LORD AND LADY JERSEY had returned to Madras from a short visit to the Seven Pagodas.

LORD AND LADY REAY go into camp, spending Christmas at the famous Gairsoppa Falls, near Goa.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE, Chief Commissioner of Burma, and the Hon. Mr. Scoble, the Legal Member of Council, Rangoon, have arrived at Calcutta.

MR. THOMAS, First Member of the Madras Board of Revenue, has applied to retire from the Service from January. By his retirement Mr. Garstin will be confirmed as First, Mr. Wilson as Second, and Mr. Whiteside as Third Member. Mr. Garstin goes into the Madras Council in February on the retirement of Mr. Master.

MR. J. R. NAYLOR, Legal Remembrancer to the Bombay Government and temporary Member of Council, left by last mail on eighteen months' leave to England. He may possibly retire from the Service at the expiry of the leave.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL MCQUEEN is in Calcutta on a visit to the Viceroy.

COLONEL PARRY NISBET, the new Resident in Kashmir, was received by the Maharaja in Darbar on Dec. 4.

SIR ALFRED LEPPOC CAPPEL, Director-General of Telegraphs, has been granted fifteen months' extension of furlough, at the end of which he will retire.

MR. D. E. MCCracken officiates as Superintendent of Thuggee and Dacoity during Colonel Henderson's absence on leave.

At a recent meeting of the Calcutta Health Society Dr. K. McLeod was elected president in the place of Mr. Justice Cunningham, resigned.

MR. HIGGINBOTHAM, the publisher, has been appointed Sheriff of Madras for the ensuing year in succession to Sir Savalay Ramasawmy Moodelliar, who has held the position the last two years. The appointment of Mr. Higginbotham is generally approved.

THE troops forming the Black Mountain Expedition have all marched for their cold-weather quarters.

THE Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association has declared against the Congress.

AFTER sitting twenty days, the proceedings of the Lieut.-Colonel Bulkeley Court Martial have been completed, but judgment has not yet been given.

A FRESH charge was to be brought against Mr. Crawford, in which that gentleman is accused of having taken a bribe of Rs 10,000 from the Raja of Akalkote.

THE Calcutta High Court has reinstated Mr. Moylan as a member of the Rangoon Bar, reversing the judgment of the Recorder. The Chief Justice has announced that he will deliver a written judgment in the case.

REPORTS from the Amir's camp beyond the Hindu Kush show that his Highness is proceeding by slow marches towards Balkh. The whole country northwards is in a peaceful state.

THE four great territorial divisions into which the Indian Army will be divided on the passing of the reorganisation scheme will be entitled "Armies" and not "Army Corps."

THE two vacancies in the Bengal Legislative Council are to be filled by Prince Firokshah and Dr. Rash Behary Ghose.

BEFORE Lord Dufferin left Calcutta a deputation of the Dufferin Memorial Committee waited upon him to ascertain the wishes of himself and Lady Dufferin regarding a proposed statue to himself and a bust in marble and portrait of Lady Dufferin. His lordship expressed himself in favour of a bronze statue against an equestrian one. He also added that, with the permission of the Committee, the matter might stand over, and he would communicate with them from Rome as to the statue for himself and from London as to the bust and portrait of Lady Dufferin.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—"The Nizam's Government have submitted to Mr. Watson a certain offer, and the Pioneer hears that the Nizam's solicitors in London have, by telegram, conveyed Mr. Watson's refusal to deliver up or cancel a single share. It seems that the Nizam was willing to sacrifice the rights of the State in order to let the shareholders down easily, and even at the cost of securing to Mr. Watson the bulk of his gains. It will now have to be decided by the English Court of Law whether Mr. Watson obtained his concession by corrupting a State official.

MR. SHAW, late Deputy Sheriff, Madras, died on December 5th at the General Hospital there from cancer on the tongue. He had held the appointment of Deputy Sheriff for twenty-nine years.

BANKING BUSINESS.—The Lahore paper says:—"We are informed that a company is being formed to extend in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies the system of local banking that has proved so successful in Northern India. Of the required capital (Rs. 10,000,000) eight lakhs have been subscribed by four Punjab capitalists, and the remaining two lakhs will be offered to the public where branches are opened, so as to secure local shareholders and influence. The Managing Directorship will be in the hands of a well-known Punjab business man, and two Branch Managers are being engaged from a Scotch Bank in Edinburgh. On the other hand, we hear that a Madras local bank is about to open a Branch in the Punjab—at Rawalpindi—which looks like 'carrying coals to Newcastle.' Either this is a very doubtful experiment, or the Managers of the various other banks in our own Province have been sadly blind to their own interests in not establishing a second branch bank three years ago."

THE LATE MR. DALGLEISH.—A most interesting memorial of a melancholy occurrence has been brought back to India by M. Dauvergne. He passed over the spot where Dalgleish was murdered, and found the bloodstains on the snow, and a piece of the scarf which Dalgleish was wearing at the time. This was stained with blood, and had the mark of sword cuts. It had evidently become frozen to the spot by the congealed blood, while Dalgleish was lying there; and when the body was carried away, it was so firmly embedded that a part was either torn or had to be cut off. M. Dauvergne searched the spot also to see if any relics remained of Dalgleish's faithful dog which was clubbed to death after his master had been murdered; but the wolves had left nothing.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN.—The Lahore paper makes a suggestion for keeping the Black Mountain tribes friendly to us:—"A fleet of three small, flat bottomed, stern-wheeled, armed and armoured boats should be established upon the Indus, and periodically patrol its waters. Nothing that the tribes could do would be able to hinder them or injure them, and they would dominate all the villages from Kotkai to Thakot. The cost would be very trifling, and the little fleet would provide a constant source of communication with the tribes. Presents might occasionally be exchanged, and not only would the tribes be overawed, but in time brought round to friendship, and the Indus become a fairly frequented route."

NOTES.

THE old proverb is a wise one which advises one "not to holloa till clear of the wood." Lord Dufferin took credit to himself of having handed over India to his successor in a state of profound peace, with nothing to disturb the new Viceroy's mind regarding frontier troubles. This was all right enough at the time when Lord Dufferin spoke, but India is a country of surprises—and what seems fact to-day may turn out to be fiction to-morrow. We now learn by telegram this morning that a military expedition under Colonel Vincent Tregear, 9th Bengal Infantry, has been detailed to proceed against the Lushais on the Chittagong border, who murdered Lieutenant Stewart some time ago, and who have lately been murdering Native British subjects on the frontier, and carrying away their women. It is not the first time that the Lushais have stood in need of punitive measures, and it is to be hoped that the lesson of correction will be administered quickly and sharply.

ANOTHER expedition is required to put matters right on the Chin frontier. So Lord Lansdowne commences his first year of Viceroyalty with two of the "little Indian wars" which philanthropists in England, who do not know what mosquitoes are, vigorously condemn in stump orations, and attribute the action to the bloodthirstiness of Englishmen, and their passion for annexation when they become Viceroys and Governors-General.

It is also in keeping with Indian "unities" that Lord Lansdowne should be abused by the Native Press as soon as possible. The Times correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs that his Lordship, having supported a magistrate in carrying out the law as laid down in the Statute-book, is now being made the subject of unfair attack. The case referred to is the sensational one which Mr. Dyer lately telegraphed to the Pall Mall Gazette, and which, as explained in the House of Commons, was grossly exaggerated and misrepresented by him.

AMONGST the English communities and the respectable Natives Lord Lansdowne is reported to be winning golden opinions. The Bombay Gazette says:—"His public utterances have been extremely cautious. He has made no promises except that he will do his duty, and he plainly recognises the difficulty of the task before him. He certainly shirked no trouble while in Bombay, and he has left a general impression here of frankness, straightforwardness, and courtesy."

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce presented an address, in which several attempts were made to elicit some definite expression of policy from his Lordship, but he skillfully avoided the traps laid for him, saying:—"I suppose, indeed, that every new Viceroy arrives in India with ideas of his own in regard to the great task which lies before him and the policy by which he would like to be guided during his administration in dealing with questions such as those which you have raised. There is, however, one conviction which should, I cannot help thinking, prevail with him at such a moment—the conviction that any ideas with regard to Indian matters formed at a distance, and of necessity without that full knowledge which can be acquired only upon the spot, are almost sure to be modified by subsequent experience of men and things derived in the country, and from direct contact with persons having an intimate knowledge of it to which he cannot pretend. For this reason ordinary caution as regards himself, as well as the respect which he owes to his future colleagues and advisers, demand of him that he should be slow at the very outset of his career to give premature public utterance to his thoughts in regard to the affairs of your country, and you, on your side, will be slow to find fault with him if he exercise what I fancy most people will look upon as a judicious reserve in speaking about them."

SIR GEORGE CAMPBELL, whose musical utterances in the House of Commons are such a charm to members who are deaf or dead to strange noises, can hardly be considered a wit. He is a Scotchman; but he certainly can make others merry, and the House fairly shook with laughter the other evening when he informed it that he intended to take the British Constitution in hand with a view to amend it. The joke was better than any of Sir Wilfrid Lawson's most studied ones, for it was the natural outburst of unconscious modesty. But when Sir George asked if the Sultan of Zanzibar was "off his head" the House laughed again, and honourable members repeated the question amongst themselves, but put as if it referred to the honourable member for Kirkcaldy himself.

SIR W. W. HUNTER, speaking, the other evening at the London Institution, of the new forces at work in India, is reported to have said:—

With regard to the effect of the new forces upon the religious conceptions of the people, his view of the matter was that a new religion would before long arise in India. The forces at work were so powerful and so productive of some result or another that a new religion would arise. But he did not think that new religion would be our modern Christianity, although he believed that the Christian missions were at this moment amongst the most powerful factors in designing what that new religion should be.

Upon this the Pall Mall Gazette remarks:—

It would be interesting if our prophet would condescend upon particulars, and tell us what the new religion is likely to be. Are we to regard Rammohun Roy, or Mme. Blavatsky, or Commissioner Tucker as the John the Baptist of the new faith, or must we look for one who is still to come?

There are philosophers who say that a new religion is much wanted just now to replace some of the worn-out creeds; but our contemporary ought to be the very first to welcome a change, for he has been striving to make one for a long time. We should, however, prefer a "gospel according to Hunter" to a "gospel according to Stead."

BUT perhaps the majority of Englishmen here and in India are content to remain satisfied with that said to have been introduced one Christmas night some centuries ago. It has not been particularly well followed either in England or in India, but its formula is just now on many lips. And although with a depreciated rupee the words may seem a mockery to all Anglo-Indians, yet in the hope of a better currency we may be allowed to wish all "A Merry Christmas."

THE NEW MURREE CLUB.—In the advertisement columns of the Civil and Military Gazette appears the prospectus of "The New Murree Club Co., Limited." The proposed capital is Rs. 2,50,000, in Rs. 100 shares. Our contemporary observes: "The names of the directors (Col. Parry Nisbet, Gen. Black, Mr. A. M. Ker, Mr. D. P. Masson, and Mr. H. M. Whymer) and the good business which a properly-conducted club at Murree could not fail to do ought to put the success of the undertaking beyond a doubt, and the money should be easily subscribed."

THE LATE MR. DALGLEISH.—We had occasion to notice recently the interesting memorial of Mr. Dalgleish's melancholy death, brought back by M. Dauvergne. It seems that that gentleman, before he left the scene of Dalgleish's murder, gathered his servants together and, placing an upright stick in the ground with a piece of cloth attached, on the spot where the crime was committed, made them pile around it a pyramid of stones. The Lahore paper alluding to this says:—"We would ask, however, if this is all that is to mark the spot where one of our best and bravest pioneers sacrificed his life! Dalgleish did wonders for the English name through all that wild country and policy, to say nothing of gratitude, should cause the Indian Government to identify themselves with his loved memory by a lasting memorial and inscription on the spot. If the Government should neglect the opportunity, sufficient money for the purpose of erecting a simple inscribed slab of stone should easily be contributed by those who value British pluck, who honour Dalgleish's memory, and would perpetuate the kindly memories which he has left behind him in Central Asia."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 23.

A serious raid by the Lushais on the Chittagong border has forced the new Viceroy to sanction the immediate dispatch of a small military expedition to the Chittagong hills. It was fully anticipated by experts that the unwise policy of allowing Lieutenant Stewart's murder to remain unavenged would soon bear bitter fruit. The tribes, emboldened by Government inaction, have now swarmed into British territory and perpetrated wholesale massacres of British subjects of a very barbarous character. On the 13th they attacked the village of Pakuma, within four miles of the frontier military station of Demagiri. Forty-three men, women, and children, including the chieftainess, were murdered, and a large number of women carried away into captivity. The chief of this head-hunting expedition was the son of a prominent Lushai leader in the disturbances of 1872. The force will probably consist of one Goorkha battalion, a wing of the 9th Bengal Infantry, a detachment of Pioneers, and two Coolie corps for transport. It is intended to concentrate the force forty miles east of Demagiri and thence despatch the various punitive forces against the offending tribes. The military force will be supported by the frontier police. An endeavour will be made to guard against future disturbances by opening out communication by permanent roads. The residents of Chittagong complain that the memorial presented some short time ago to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, setting out the existing insecurity of life and property and advising immediate changes in view of frontier disturbances, was disregarded. Before this raid, since 1882, as many as 43 British subjects have been killed, 13 wounded, and 126 carried away into captivity. The forest revenue in consequence had fallen from Rs. 1,20,000 to Rs. 50,000; while we are now committed to a new border campaign.

Various addresses have been presented by important associations to the Marquis of Lansdowne. His replies have been characterised by the same discreet prudence. He is evidently resolved not to commit himself at present to any definite views.

The Legislative Council met on Friday, but the business was merely formal. The two most important measures for discussion are the Railway and Merchandise Bills.

A meeting of Bombay millowners was held at Bombay on Thursday to protest against the application of the English Factory Acts in India as merely endeavours on behalf of Lancashire to cripple the competing mill industries in India. It was resolved to memorialise the Secretary of State.

The Bombay defences are rapidly approaching completion. Colaba Point is being strongly fortified with guns of heavy calibre. It is expected that the preparations of torpedo field and fort guns will be completed before June next.

The case for the prosecution has been concluded at last in the Crawford Commission. The defence begins next Thursday.

Lord Colin Campbell has been admitted to the Bombay Bar.

Great indignation is expressed by the Press at the sensational and unjustifiable attack directed against a Patna magistrate telegraphed to English journals. Mr. Quinn is a man of exceptionally good record, distinguished both for high character and sound judgment. He has simply endeavoured to apply the law regardless of race and creed. If any error has been committed it is error of interpretation, not of conduct. This case has been made the pretext for an improper attack on the Marquis of Dufferin.

The Native Congress meets at Allahabad on Thursday.

BURMA.

RANGOON, DEC. 22.

Although Sir George White proceeds to Kamballa personally to superintend the movement of troops on the Chin frontier, operations on any extended scale are not contemplated. Brigadier Faunce remains in command of the troops. Sir G. White's main object in visiting the frontier is to ascertain how far we can subdue the tribes who recently raided into our territory without being committed to any extended operations. The movement of the troops must largely depend on the extent to which coolie carriage can be organised for an expedition to the hills. The road has now been completed almost to the foot of the Chin hills. Three companies of the Norfolk Regiment, the 42nd and 44th Goorkha Regiments, with four guns, the Kubo Valley levy, and a body of military police will be employed. Major Raikes accompanies the Chin field force as Political Officer.

The local Government have discontinued issuing a weekly bulletin on the condition of Upper Burma. During the past week the following incidents have been reported. Bochoe's band attacked Pagan. Another dacoit band made an attack on Laungshe. In Tsagain the police attacked a body of ten dacoits and killed six. The Rangoon Gazette of the 19th states that two small columns were sent out to pursue the dacoits in the Tounghoo districts. In Minbu a small column has been despatched against Ootama, who still keeps the field. The Mandalay Herald reports that the Madaya subdivision is disturbed. The large dacoit bands have been all broken up, but petty dacoity is still very prevalent.

The Tounghoo-Mandalay railway is practically completed, with the exception of thirteen miles in the Kyluksed district. The line will probably be opened throughout for both passenger and goods traffic by the 15th of February, 1889. The progress of the railway has been delayed by the difficulty of bridging the Suithay river. This obstacle has now been overcome. Much credit is due to Mr. Byers, the chief engineer, and his staff for the rapidity with which the railway has been constructed and the manner in which they have overcome many serious difficulties.

The local Government have instituted a number of criminal prosecutions in Mandalay against various native money-lenders for breach of the Ruby Mines regulations, in having sent through the Post Office to India large quantities of rubies without holding licences or paying Government duty. Rubies to the value of ten lakhs have been thus sent to India. The Government claims on these rubies amount to some three lakhs. The cases are still pending.

CHINA AND TIBET.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 23.

It is satisfactory to know that there is every prospect of settling matters peacefully with the Tibetans. The latest telegram from Gnatong states that the Chinese Legate or Ampa arrived yesterday at two o'clock, and was received by salute from a guard of the Goorkhas and the Derbyshire Regiment, the latter drawn up close to the pavilion prepared for the reception. In accordance with the Chinese custom three guns were fired from the fort as the Goorkha guard presented arms. The Ampa was preceded by a body-guard of 50 Chinese soldiers, picturesquely dressed, half in red, half in white, with large banners of corresponding colours, and armed with spears and halberds. The great man himself travelled in a green sedan-chair, supported by six bearers, with 32 coolies assisting with drag ropes. On alighting he was received by the chief Political Officer and subordinate political and military officers, while the guard of honour presented arms and the Ampa's band sounded a flourish of barbaric music.

The interview which followed was purely complimentary and exceedingly cordial on both sides. The Tibetan officials are expected shortly. The Ampa pays an official visit to the Political Officer to-day. It is believed the Ampa consents to discuss matters as the protector of the minor Dalai Lama and as plenipotentiary of China. From Gnatong he will be enabled to consult the Pekin Government directly by wire. In the negotiations the Tibetan officials will be treated as a subordinate authority to the Chinese Legate.

THE ACREAGE OF INDIA.—According to the new Indian Statistical Abstract, the total acreage of India according to the Survey Department is 480,667,094 acres. Deduct 116,615,483 acres, the area of the feudatory and tributary States and of other districts for which agricultural returns are not obtainable, and with which the figures do not deal, and we get 364,051,611 acres as the area of British India for agricultural purposes; of this less than half, or 152,834,640 acres, is actually under cultivation, including 22,725,391 acres of current fallows. Of the 166,492,458 acres which is cultivated rather more than half is fit for cultivation, and the remainder is not available for that purpose, so that an area of 80 millions of acres in British India still awaits the husbandman. The area under forests, which is not included under either cultivable or uncultivable land, is 40,185,729 acres. The distribution of crops was as follows:—Rice, 23,114,662; wheat, 19,883,040; other food grains, including pulse, 71,439,218; tea, 226,412 (almost wholly in Assam); cotton, 9,852,654; oil seeds, 7,678,382; indigo, 1,034,889. It thus appears that there is practically unlimited scope, so far as area is concerned, for the increased cultivation in India of crops which are mainly intended for export such as wheat, cotton, indigo, tea, coffee, &c.—Times of India.

THE COMING K.

(Pioneer.)

And George my lawful king shall be Until the times do alter. —Vicar of Bray.

President (of the Dufferin Medical Fund Assistance Society, Bebusteehghat) log.—Gentlemen of this so honoured institution, and Alumni of First Arts, under all circumstances the question before our considerations to-night is of singularly preposterous and variegated character fundamentally complicated because of spelling. How you spell Lansdahn?

Secretary.—This question demands explicacy and is not at all before the meeting. Financial difficulties pave the way as registered in minute-book of last proceedings. Dufferin Medical Fund Assistance Society, pre-eminent factor in national progress, but no subscriptions paid.

President.—Go-ray ko lat, admi ko bat! Are you all mud heads? Dufferin Medical Fund Assistance Society dead as Queen Anne's hair-ring on account of funds. How does this matter? Not a swear—not a two annas swear! Gentlemen, I have honour to be connected with this and kindredly similar enterstutions ever since my connection with service of gorgeous and beneficent Sirkar, and continued honour in public service and this, in my o-pee-nion, is fitting time for the back-slide. Ease her! Stop her! As my friend Captain Pereira on the Hughli steamer pertinently says in crossing over to our offices. I am distinguished member of local administration and all known down both banks of the river for twenty years. You are so young men you do not comprehend political status in its comprehensiveness. Lât Sahib gya! Medical Assistance Fund Society bhi phut gya! What use any more bother and voting addresses. When I was ommedwar I took deep interest in national progress marching to glory through social elevation on empty stomachs; and this society, you can see by minute books, was the Mayo Athenæum for enlightened discussion. Babu Ahutosh Mookerjee—alas poor Yorick!—Was our president, but he is now gone the way of all flesh which is green as ghauts and in the evening is burned up; but he was Sudder Munsif and he was my true friend. I am your true friend, gentlemen, by seniority and honour you have done me in electing me president of this rapidly moribund institution. But I pause for a reply to my previous digression. When Ahutosh Babu jumped the branches I feathered my oars in my nest, and it was I suggested vital alterations in society and voted address to Lord Northbrook with maximum of public spirit. Mayo Athenæum was dead by gentle process of athenasium (very earnestly). That, gentlemen, is a pun. And we all became Northbrook Young Men's Improvement Association, and I was Nazul Darogah and headed all the addresses. (Hear! hear!) Gentlemen, by God we wrote addresses day and night and then Pitamber Babu took the cash-box and levantined to Behar with ninety-seven rupees ten annas four pie. So Northbrook Young Men's Improvement Association was hit upon the hat, as the joke is, and lay in abeyance till Lord Lytton came. I was possessed of all the minute books and enormous bump of public spirit with studious bent towards the glories of oriental poetry—not Madabharat nor other Rigs but Hafiz (sensation). Gentlemen, I see that you are ashamed because Hafiz was Mahomedan voluptuary, but I beg you hang your verdicts till I tell. At that time we became the Lytton Literary Society and I tell you this, that his Late Excellency came by steamer to Bebussteehghat and I personally in presidential capacity presented him with velluminous address and His Excellency gave a gold medal for poesies after the style of Hafiz upon female orientals. There was no competition, but I have the medal and I was appointed being E. A. C. Gentlemen, now you remember that millenium of Ripon the Good when all was pure politics and abstract ideals, from the Pax Britannica at Peshawar to the Adam's bridge at Comorin and freedom of debate! Then Lytton Literary Society became Ripon Political Club and sent addresses direct by post, advocating supreme validity of Rousseau's Social Confessions and other things on a similar platform of pure Liberalism. So we were reorganised in a commensurate scale and promulgated progress in all directions and never salaamed to the Deputy Commissioner! By God, that was elevated old period and Lord Ripon was very much pleased and our true friend. I had promise of Rai Bahadurship, but Lord Ripon went away in the centre of popular demonstrations and nobody knowing how the all and devil illustrious successor would think. Thus Ripon Political Club sank upon its ashes. But nevertheless I subsequently discovered that a medical fund was up the wind and took proper measures, so that Bebussteehghat sent first address of this nature that ever was to Lord Dufferin, and the Political Club was recalled Medical Assistance Organisation! Also, first and before any other place, I beg you will remember gentlemen that promptitude is the mother of promotion and this fool-talk over defunct corpse of effete organisation because the Lai Sahib is going away, may be inimically prejudicial to our all true interests. Now this new Viceroy is most enlightened ruler, but I do not know his political proper gander and perhaps we have been making too much political platform in these last days since, however great, however grand, however superior in aspiring, nothing can do without bamboozling the Shahib log, which is tantamount to inviting to co-operate in stupendous labours of national elevation. And just these present times, the Shahib log are not so pleased as Panch. Wherefore, still retaining minute books of previous Societies, in my o-pee-nion it would be sound temporary measure capable of further expansion, that this Medical Fund Essistance Organisation constitute itself Bebus-teeghat Chamber of Commerce and guardian of mercantile interests up and down the river and anywhere else. Commerce is innuocuous and pleases everybody, and if Lord Lansdahn is unfortunately devoiding commercial instincts so necessary to the proper conservation of this resourceful country we will do no harm ad interim but only watch which way the cat runs. How so great as Commerce? How so stabile? How so imperatively necessary? Let us become commercial and make Captain Pereira an honorary member by acclamation, because we travel daily in his steam-boat and he may ameliorate fares. But Chamber of Commerce certainly; and an address will conduce to our true interests. Wherefore I move that Dufferin Medical Essistance Fund is now abrogated and Lansdahn Chamber of Commerce and Mercantile Union supersedes there sub. protem. till alterations are necessary. But first how you spell Lansdahn, Honorary Sekuttar Sahib?

Secretary.—L-a-n-s-d-o-n. I have much pleasure to second and President shall draft address in strict commercial lines.

Extract from Sachi Durpan, December 2nd 1888.—"It has been truly observed that a period of rest and commercial enterprise is, after political regeneration, one of the most urgent needs of this unhappy country. We are truly rejoiced to see that a step in this kind of enterprise has been taken at Bebus-teeghat which has always been foremost in all the public movements of the hour. The step has been taken under the guidance of our public spirited countryman Harindra Oko Deb, E.A.C., a veteran in all kinds of things, from whose sagacity and intelligence we hope the utmost. Commercial enterprise is lamentably backward throughout this province, but under the fosteringegis of our new ruler it should grow to immense proportions. The Chamber of Commerce which has been inaugurated at Bebus-teeghat is clear proof of the intellect of the Bengali and sufficient answer to the cavillers against our nation. It will regulate commercial enterprise and encourage the development of trade and legitimate commercial aspirations. Harindra Babu will not be trodden down by the voice of public clamour. Why should not all Bengal follow his illustrious example? Why should not—et cætera, et cætera, et cætera."

LOCAL ARMIES.

(Madras Times.)

Not long ago, writing on the redistribution of commands in India, we urged the advisability of surrendering the empty dignity of a local army and a local Commander-in-Chief for the real benefits that would be conferred on the service in general, and the Madras Army in particular. A small event that has just occurred illustrates the correctness of the theory we then held, and still hold, namely, that the present arrangement is distinctly bad for Madras and Bombay. We notice that of forty-five direct appointments from England to the Staff Corps, five were to the Bengal Army, and forty between the Bombay and Madras Armies. At first this may not seem a very great thing, but further reflection will show that it is. Having regard to the relative size of the three armies, this distribution can have but one meaning, viz., that it is impossible to obtain officers in this country for the Bombay and Madras Armies, and, consequently, they had to be obtained from England on the condition that they would join one of the less popular armies. Those who have been foremost in resisting all attempts to abolish the local commands have succeeded in creating a feeling of dislike for their own armies which has resulted in an objection on the part of young officers to enter them. Perhaps some of our readers may be disposed to deny this, but recent events prove that we are right. It has been so difficult to obtain volunteers for the Bombay and Madras Armies that the Secretary of State has to revive an old and disused rule to enable him to keep them supplied with officers. Some years ago, when direct appointments were given from home, the majority were for either Bombay or Madras, and there would not have been even five appointed to the Bengal Army out of the forty-five but for interest, which has managed to get five of these youngsters posted North. The efforts made by young men and by their parents to get them posted to the Bengal Staff

Corps are too well-known to be denied, and when they fail in that endeavour, they try tooth and nail to get into the Punjab Frontier Force, or into one of the regiments under the Government of India. Even officers who have served their whole lives in the Southern and Western armies, and are proud of their service, try to get their sons into the Bengal Staff Corps, and the distinguished officer who lectured early this year before the United Service Institution (London) on the Bombay army, especially referred to, and lamented, this tendency. Is there a single instance of an officer who had served all his life in the Bengal Staff Corps trying to get his son into either the Bombay or the Madras army? Not one. And yet the nature of the service is the same, and the conditions are alike. There must be some reason for this. It has been said that the lonely stations are against us, but we doubt whether such an idea affects a young man at all early in life; and even if it did, Bangalore, Secunderabad and Poona are the best stations in India. Yet we see young officers trying all they can to get into the Punjab Frontier Force, where they will be in comparatively lonely stations all their lives. The true reason is that the Bombay and Madras Armies are left to enjoy their local dignity as best they may, and all the fighting, all the honour, all the plumus go to the Bengal Army. Our records are as glorious as any, our soldiers are good fighting material, as the Burman and many other records show; and yet there is a difficulty in obtaining officers. This is due to the Presidency system of separate armies. The position of affairs would be different if there were no more Staff Corps, but one Indian army; if the troops were moved freely from place to place, and all officers interchangeable—in short, if there were no more Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Army Lists, but one Army under one Commander-in-Chief and four Army Corps Generals. Were India owned by any country in the world but England, the Commander-in-Chief would be as he ought to be, a local Field-Marshal, and the Army Corps Commanders, Generals; but, as we think this absurd (though we do not think it absurd to have five Field-M Marshals in the British Army), let the Commander-in-Chief in India be a General, as now, and let the Army Corps Commanders be Lieutenant-Generals. Let them have the power that the local Commanders-in-Chiefs have now, except that of appointments and of publishing general orders. As a matter of fact, they would have as much of the patronage then as now, and perhaps more, as there would be no friction, while corps, orders would have full effect in the commands referred to. In every way the change would be beneficial to Madras. The officers and men would feel that they were considered on a par with those of other army corps, and there would be no humiliating difficulty in recruiting the commissioned ranks.

MR. CAINE'S CRUSADE.

(Times of India.)

We have a good deal of sympathy with the cause supported by Mr. Caine, so long as the supporters do not carry their views too far. But we cannot follow them when they say that the English rule here is encouraging the people to drink, or when they blame our administrators for having inflicted the curse of drink on the country. The habit of drinking is as old here as at home, and the people among the races who drink are, we should fancy, very much as at home, more temperate than their great-grandfathers. The cause of temperance is progressing in England, no doubt, but in spite of Mr. Clutterbuck we still think that the days of total abstinence are as remote in India as in England. He thinks that the day "is very near at hand." But we can only judge of the future by the experience of the past. By all means let temperance be encouraged, but it is no use pretending that we are living on the very verge of the millennium. In the meantime the Government here, as at home, should check the sale of liquors made from stuff that must be injurious to the public health. Mr. Clutterbuck objects to our recommendation of the manufacture of pure whiskey instead of making "Europe spirits" out of spirits of wine. "Did they," he asked his audience, "ever hear of such a thing as pure arsenic? When they talked about pure whiskey they might just as well talk seriously of the existence of such a person as the man in the moon." We fancy, however, that we have heard of the existence of pure arsenic.

LATEST PHASE OF THE CRAWFORD CASE.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The invitation that has been addressed to the Government of Bombay by an adviser who can scarcely be called amicus curiæ, to deal with all who admit the payment of bribes as they have dealt with Hanmantrao is intelligible enough, but there is on the face of it nothing that need make it a matter of regret that Government has a large discretion in dealing with such cases. The High Court, it has been seen from the first, could never give us an inquiry into the state of the subordinate administration of the Deccan; yet no one, we suppose, will at this time of day deny that such an inquiry is a matter of the gravest public necessity. Above and beyond even the serious personal element in the inquiry, the supreme purpose, so far as the more abiding considerations are concerned, is to get at the truth about the condition of the subordinate service. It is evident that there are influences antagonistic to this view. It is believed that there are ways and means even now of limiting the scope of the inquiry, and of reducing the bulk and the efficacy of the testimony available. It is the easiest thing in the world for lighthearted commentators upon the proceedings to spread terror in the hearts of witnesses yet to be called by hanging over their heads the threats of prosecution and deprivation of office. It is not to be supposed that these lucubrations are prompted by a desire to get upon record a body of frank and unbiassed testimony. Meanwhile, the public, aware of the discretion with which the Government are entrusted in these matters, will look to it for firmness and impartiality, subordinating every exercise of the discretion which the law gives it to the primary purpose of ascertaining the truth concerning the allegations impugning as to the purity of the administration.

PROSPECTS OF THE COMING VICEROYALTY.

(Englishman.)

Unlike his less fortunate predecessor, the Marquis of Lansdowne will not take up the reins of Government over a country politically disquieted, in which long-slumbering race animosities have been stirred by reckless legislation into fierce activity. Our future Viceroy has not found it needful to declare, as did the present one, ere leaving the British shores, that this country, above all other things, requires rest, nor will the prime necessity of quieting disturbed political forces hinder his immediate initiation of a policy of internal development and Imperial consolidation. The effects of the purely pro-native policy of the Marquis of Ripon, so far as they were revealed in the distractions attending the close of his administration, have almost disappeared; and even that latest phase of Bengali agitation, the so-called "National" Congress, excites but little attention outside a certain section of the official community. Sir Auckland Colvin has, unwisely we think, given the movement an importance for the moment, if not an impulse, by his laboured condemnation of its purposes and proceedings. We say "unwisely," because the head of a Local Government will gain little in a dispute with illogical Bengali agitators and their sympathisers. The difficulties with which Lord Dufferin has had to contend have been in many ways exceptional. A new extensive territory has been added to the Empire, but at a cost which the conquered country will not for years repay. A weak frontier has been strengthened, but only by the sacrifice of the much-needed Famine Fund. The British garrison in India has been reinforced, but the security is paid for out of an unpopular income-tax and an enhanced salt duty. Lastly, the foreign trade of the country has increased gradually (not, as once, "by leaps and bounds"), while an ever-falling exchange has yearly enlarged the subsidy which England draws from her Eastern dependency.

As the result of all this, however, Lord Lansdowne will not, at the outset of his Viceroyalty, find himself confronted by any serious complications abroad. The Burmese business is ended; the "Divine figure from the North" has, for a time, ceased to trouble; and, though the exchange difficulty still blocks the way, its more hopeless features stand out less prominently from the background of a Royal Commission's Report and the faint shady glow of an approaching International Monetary Conference. The Government of Lord Lansdowne will, then, so far as can be seen at present, be an essentially pacific, and, as has been said, "commercial" one. The agricultural outlook in India, recently so dark, has in many directions brightened. Where scarcity still threatens there will not, we trust, be distress on such a scale as will seriously tax the resources of either the Local or Imperial Government. A policy which will develop the internal wealth of the country; will give us back the Famine Fund, so lightly spirited away; and will proceed with commercial legislation on a liberal scale, is, above all others, now desirable. But before such a policy can be successfully inaugurated the Indian exchequer must be partially, if not entirely, relieved of its ever-growing "exchange" burden. We infer from the Report of the Currency Commission that measures of temporary alleviation are held to be quite within the power of the Indian Government if its freedom of action is sanctioned. We are, however, very doubtful if real benefit would accrue to India from any isolated action short of actual repudiation in a matter affecting the relations of half the countries in the world—a matter which, we think, will not be satisfactorily settled by other than international agreement. But, allowing that by united or isolated action the fall in the sterling value of the rupee is checked, if not exchanged for a rise—and between this and the ultimate bankruptcy of India we can see no middle course—there remains no obstacle to the carrying out of a policy of commercial progress and internal development on such lines as we have drawn. Until this currency problem is solved; until the Famine Fund is again devoted to its legitimate purpose, and the funds of Provincial Governments are once more proportioned to the wants of the respective provinces instead of being curtailed to make good Imperial deficits, we cannot hope to see the country enter upon a period of unalloyed prosperity and progress. In the meantime the development of British India, the freedom from extreme taxation, and, to no small extent, the future of its many millions, must be dependent on the right settlement of a question which has baffled the financial experts whose inquiries have recently come to so disappointing a conclusion.

TEA PLANTATIONS.

(Indian Planters' Gazette Correspondent.)

I have often wondered wherein lies the difference between tea in the hills and tea down below. One hears a good deal about "hill flavour," and hill teas commanding better prices than Assam or Cachar tea; but this fact is by no means self-evident on carefully looking through the tea sales as reported in the Englishman or as tabulated in the Planters' Gazette. The highest averages are not conspicuously those of hill-gardens. And yet hill-gardens pay, on a yield of three to four maunds an acre. Cachar or Assam gardens which cannot make a bigger outturn than that, make but small profit there-out, unless they happen to be plucking fine, and going in specially for quality. Four maunds an acre for the ordinary hill-garden is, I think, a very good outturn: five maunds would make a bumper crop. But the latter figure is a very common one for Assam gardens, while eight to ten maunds is far from an unusual outturn on a good many estates, notwithstanding the incredulity on the subject of such returns evinced a year or two ago by the Assam Government. Most of the Sadya Road gardens (Debrooghur) and not a few here and there in other districts, will pass the standard of 600 lbs. per acre. But the profits given by the paying Darjeeling gardens are quite as large all round as those made by the big outturns of Assam. Prices being fairly even, notwithstanding the "hill flavour," I can only conclude that Darjeeling must work cheaper.

Another popular delusion about the hills is that all hill-gardens are necessarily healthy. I was rather surprised to find that on several gardens I visited, the death-rate from fever was pretty high. Of course there are no returns under Act I. to vex the soul of the manager: he reports casualties to the nearest thana, and is done with them. His labour is free, which is a comfort, from the point of view of the expense of importing, and the worry of returns and "Act" impositions generally; it is free to die uninquied into; and free to abscond unrestrained whenever it pleases, worse luck. Generally speaking, it may be held that the lower gardens in the hills, up to 2,000 or 2,500 feet, are as unhealthy as in the Terai; while malarial influence may be felt as high as 4,000 feet. Above that I fancy one is pretty secure from fevers of a malarial type.

The mortality amongst the Europeans in the Terai and Dooars has been something appalling the last two or three years. If Assistants and Managers for these Districts were Natives recruited under the Act, Government would have interfered and held a Commission—that sovereign remedy for everything from financial difficulties to famine—long ago. But as it is only Europeans who are dying in the endeavour to open out the country by their energy and capital, on the chance of enriching themselves, and with the certainty of improving the revenue—why, they can go on. If they can be induced to take situations where the mortality is about 25 per cent. per annum, that is their own look-out. What is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander, with all due deference to old saws. Eight or nine deaths within two years, amongst the handful of Europeans in the small district west of the Balasan, is rather alarming. I wonder Agents don't find some difficulty in filling vacancies.

THE BRITISH SERVICE AND THE STAFF CORPS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A very serious danger is confronting the British service in India, and though it is to a certain extent recognised, no steps are taken to stop or remedy it. It is this. The Indian Staff Corps is supplied by the British regiments in India with officers; and these officers are not supernumerary to their British regiments, but are the only Subalterns whom the British regiments have to train or depend upon. It is easy to note how the system works. In nearly every regiment that has been in India any length of time, we find the full complement of Captains followed by one or two Subalterns of six or seven years' service, then a number of Subalterns whose names are in italics, and the baleful word "probationer" after them, and then the first Subaltern doing duty with the regiment, with some eighteen months' or two years' service, followed by a limited number of Subalterns of still less service. Now, if a Captain is temporarily detached for Staff duty, for Garrison class signalling, leave, or any of the perfectly legitimate calls which may take him away from his regiment, the chances are that the only man available to take his place is a Subaltern of some two years' service. The duties of an Officer Commanding a company are yearly and yearly becoming more and more onerous. To carry out the annual company training efficiently, an officer of considerable professional knowledge and experience is required; yet the chances are that, at the time the training takes place, the officer in charge of the company may be an inexperienced Subaltern who possibly may have been in independent command of a company half of his short service, and with every intention of doing his best, yet is utterly devoid of the training which every Subaltern requires under the eye of an experienced Captain. Nor is this all; owing to the manner in which the present system works, the battalions in India are kept so short of Subalterns that it is often the exception rather than the rule for a Captain to have a Subaltern under him at all. If war were to break out in India to-morrow quite half of the regiments in India would find themselves in this condition:—Eight Majors or Captains commanding companies, two of whom, they might reckon, would either be required for Staff work or would be medically unfit for a campaign; some three or four (if they are lucky) Subalterns of five or six years' service, one or two of whom would probably be required for transport, signalling, or other special duties; and then by scraping together all their Subalterns, who have probably an average of two years' service or less, they may get together some ten more Subalterns; this is supposing that they have time to recall their officers from leave in England. Now what would be the condition of these regiments after the first serious battle? The mortality among officers under the existing circumstances of war is always enormous, and especially in the British army, where officers are never backward in leading their men. There is little doubt that, after the first battle, at least two or three companies in every regiment would be under the command of lads quite unfit for the responsibility; and that three or four companies would be reduced to one officer apiece, which we think all who consider the subject will agree is a very dangerous state of affairs. The real root of the evil is that the Government are trying to officer two armies with the same men. They represent that both armies are fully officered, yet both armies are cheated. The Indian Army is largely officered by probationers who are not supernumerary; but are supposed to be efficient officers, which they are not.

ENGLISH AND INDIAN SOCIETY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Professor Datta, "of Calcutta," has been writing some long articles upon Indian and English society in India in an English paper. These are for the most part conceived and expressed in a thoughtful and impartial spirit, even where he traverses opinions universally held by Englishmen and many of the best of his own countrymen. The Hindu family system, he rightly argues, is ideally beautiful; and if widows were better treated, if mothers-in-law were less tyrannous, and wives and daughters less immured in zenanas, we might agree with him that it could be made beautiful in practice also.

It is, however, no answer to the admitted evils of enforced widowhood to allege that mercenary marriages sometimes made by English widows are worse. Of course, it is true that many English widows would not marry so soon again, and some not at all, who are now forced into second marriage from poverty, because there is no English family system to provide them with an assured home. But the evils of the two systems represent two extremes; and the hardship of the one does not excuse the cruelty of the other. A perfect system, in practice and theory, from the point of view of the widows, might be one in which, either in her own or her husband's family, a home would be assured to her until such time as she wished to marry again, if ever. By a little change the Hindu system can admit of this, by simply allowing the widow to re-marry; then fewer unhappy women would be forced to live a life of misery and imprisonment. On the other hand, before the widow under the English system could be saved from forced re-marriage, a radical legislative change would have to be introduced, giving her a legal claim upon her own or her husband's family for the maintenance of herself or children. But it is, as we have said, no real excuse for the greater, yet easily remedied, evil of the Hindu system to say that a lesser evil which would be extremely difficult to remedy exists in the English system.

The error in the Hindu treatment of widows rests on a fundamental misconception of modern human nature. It may have been the case in ages long ago that a widow was, as a rule, inconsolable for the loss of a husband for the rest of her natural life; but we fancy that it was not. The old fable of the lion and the artist suggests that if women had possessed in old times the social influence and the legal rights which they possess in civilised countries to-day, the laws and traditions of the past would have drawn a different picture of the status of widowhood. Men, however, had the making of the laws; and they flattered their vanity by taking it for granted that their widows would never, never wish to re-marry. Hence they provided, if not suttee, a decent form of social burial for life for their poor relicts. In civilised countries the sham has long been exposed; but it may be that, as Professor Datta's strictures would seem to show, we have gone into the other extreme and relieved the widow so completely of the ties which used to bind her to her husband's family, that we have caused her injury, and have deprived her of her right to bare-maintenance. Of course such a right under modern conditions of life, which permit of a man's marrying without the consent of his family, could not possibly be retained, nor could his parents or brothers be saddled after his death with the burden of maintaining a woman to whose entrance into their family they were from the first opposed. While human nature remains imperfect no social system can be otherwise; but we think that the freedom enjoyed by the Western woman, in comparison with her Eastern sister, immensely outweighs the occasional hardship of poverty or enforced re-marriage, which falls to her lot.

But we need not, all the same, ask the admirers of the Hindu system to agree in this with us, or to rush all at once to the opposite extreme in imitation of our system. They cannot refuse to see that evils of a very serious and saddening kind exist in the condition of the ordinary Hindu widow. They cannot pretend that the unhappy prisoner, reduced to a daily round of drudgery and illusage, really cherishes so inconsolable a grief for her dead husband as to prevent her, were liberty allowed, from seeking again a happy lot with another husband as loved and loving as the first. All that we ask—and some of the best of their own countrymen ask—is that they should admit the evil; should recognise that a wife's human nature is not the perfect ideal of lifelong devotion that their traditions pretend; and since, under the cruel restraints which these impose, she is and must be often most unhappy, let them open the prison-door. If she elects to remain, let them hold her in high honour for her wifely constancy. If she elects to go, let them bid her God-speed, and recollect that women are only human, and humanity is weak. When lasting unhappiness thus becomes the exception rather than the rule in an Indian widow's lot, it will be time enough for Professor Datta, of Calcutta, to point out in English papers the exceptional hardships of the English widow, and to point to the superior symmetry of the Hindu system.

THE PUTIALA TREASURE HOUSE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

On Sunday, the 18th Nov., his Excellency the Viceroy visited the palace in the fort, and the museum of valuable objects collected there. Sirdar Pertab Singh, son of Sir Deva Singh, K.C.S.I., President of the Council, did the honours on the occasion, and pointed out to her Excellency the Marchioness the different objects of value and interest, explaining at the same time their history.

The jewels were remarkably splendid, especially a magnificent diamond necklace, in which figures the Sanel diamond, one of the famous diamonds of the world, and purchased from the Empress Eugénie. Other necklaces from uncut stones were almost of greater splendour, though less value. Enormous emeralds, some of them curiously carved, diamond aigrettes, strings of large pearls and emeralds; a galaxy of rings of every kind of clustered jewel, and one with a miniature, encircled by diamonds, of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, a gift of his Royal Highness. Another jewel contained a miniature of her Majesty the Queen in her youthful days, and presented to a former Maharaja. There were also a watch, gloriously encrusted with diamonds and rubies, and brooches and belt-clasps of huge emeralds. To this collection will be added the Viceroy's gift of the previous day.

In another room was a magnificent collection of presentation swords bearing tokens or portraits marking the illustrious donors, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Lords Lytton and Ripon, and others. Here too, his Excellency the Viceroy will be represented by the sword presented in Durbar on this occasion.

Here also was the worked banner presented to Putiala at the Delhi Assemblage, and carried before the Maharaja at all great State functions. It is of sky blue silk with gold fringe with the State arms and the motto "Heaven's Light our Guide."

In another room was an immense array of weapons, many of curious antique kinds and some of the most costly character; coats of mail and complicated pistol-sword-battle-axe arrangements side by side with the very latest improvements in sporting rifles. Of the latter it is said one tableful represented a single purchase recently made—of the whole of Rodda and Co's stock at the time. There were some well executed animal pictures on the walls and some marvellously luxurious travelling cases containing everything that a traveller, who was artist, sportsman, writer, gourmet, and dandy, could or could not possibly want. They are scarcely adapted to any of lesser rank than Maharajas on their travels, because they require an elephant to carry them.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 4.)

THE Bengal Government has sanctioned an estimate amounting to Rs. 1,47,477 for the survey and settlement of the Angul estate at Cuttack.

WE regret to hear that, in consequence of threatened scarcity, the Dumraon Agricultural Show, which was to have been held in January next, has been definitely abandoned by desire of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

THE Bengal Government has purchased on the Continent some of the most improved silk-worm apparatus for use in connection with the silk-rearing experiments now being conducted in Berhampore and elsewhere.

A CALCUTTA paper says that Mr. E. C. Colvin, the Bengal Lieutenant-Governor's private secretary, after his marriage proceeds to Bangalore, where he is appointed to be Assistant Political Agent under Sir Oliver St. John. Mr. P. C. Lyons, who arrives from England shortly, succeeds Mr. Colvin as private secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor.

MR. C. T. DAVIS, an attorney, who had been for many years chief clerk on the Original Side of the High Court, and who is now on pension, met with a very serious accident at the General Hospital. He was admitted as a patient into the hospital some days back suffering from fever, and while in a state of delirium was heard to call to his bearer from the third floor. Shortly afterwards he was found lying insensible on the pavement, with severe injuries to his head and fracture of one of his arms. It was evident that he must have got towards the window and tumbled over.

MADRAS.

(Dec. 5.)

THE Commander-in-Chief has arrived, and gone into camp on the fort glacis. He remains a fortnight in Madras.

DR. JESUDASEN, Health Officer of the Municipality, died Nov. 30, after a short illness, of pneumonia.

MR. THOMAS, first member of the Board of Revenue, has applied to retire from the service from January. Mr. Garstin will then be confirmed as first, Mr. Wilson as second, and Mr. Whiteside as third member of the Board of Revenue.

MR. GARSTIN goes into the Council in February on the retirement of Mr. Master.

APPLICATION has been made to the High Court for admission to bail of the Deputy Collector of Calicut and his brother, who were sentenced to imprisonment and a fine for bribery, pending the appeal against the sentences. Bail has been refused.

SPEAKING at the Saidapet Agricultural College, in reply to an address, Lord Connemara, who was accompanied by Lord Jersey and Mr. Ashton, said that, watching with great interest the work of the College, he was extremely glad that many of the pupils intend taking to practical agriculture in after life, and were not merely passing an agricultural course with a view to obtaining Government employment. The former was of far greater benefit to their fellow-creatures than the latter. He instanced Lord Jersey and Mr. Ashton's father as setting a good example in this direction.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 7.)

ON the arrival of the Sutlej at Aden on the 27th ult., the Marquis of Lansdowne, after receiving an address from the Officer Commanding the station, landed and inspected the troops.

MR. W. DIGBY, C.I.E., who was well-known here nine years since, as secretary of the Famine Fund and Editor of the Madras Times, arrived here by Monday's mail steamer, and intends spending some four months in the country.

A TELEGRAM has been received in Bombay from Kurrachee stating that a bungalow belonging to Moomunbhoy Gangji from Bombay picked up seventeen persons from the buggalow Palkhi, who say that they were eye-witnesses to the Vaitarna being completely engulfed by two enormous waves beyond Verawal.

THE Bombay Natural History Society has offered a prize of Rs. 100 for the best painting of animal life, either in oils or in water-colours, at the Exhibition of the Bombay Art Society, which is to be held in February next.

THE appointment of Mr. F. L. Charles, C.S., to act as Collector of Land Revenue, Customs, and Opium, Bombay, Superintendent of Stamps and Stationery, Registrar of Bombay, and Commissioner for the purposes of the Income Tax Act in the Town and Island of Bombay, till further orders, is gazetted.

COLONEL H. N. REEVES, Political Agent, Kolhapore, does not return to India, but that in February next he retires from political life on pension. Colonel C. W. Wodehouse, now Acting Political Agent, Kolhapore and Southern Mahratta Country, is to succeed him in this appointment.

THEIR Excellencies the Governor and Lady Reay will spend Christmas at Gersappa Falls in the Camp of Mr. Propert, Commissioner, S.D. They will leave Bombay by sea on the 19th December in H.M.I.M.S. Dalhousie, visiting Karwar en route to Honawar, where they will arrive about the 22nd. On the return journey H.E. the Governor will disembark at Mormugao and visit Dharwar and Hubli, H.E. Lady Reay returning direct to Bombay on the 30th December.

IN addition to the sum of Rs. 25,000, recently given in charity by Mr. M. M. Bhownuggree, C.I.E., to perpetuate the memory of his sister, the late Miss Avabai Bhownuggree, a further sum of Rs. 1,950 has been subscribed by him to be distributed among the following charitable institutions:—Bombay Gymnastic Institute, Rs. 500; the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution, Rs. 500; the Jamsetjee Nusserwanjee Petit's Parsee Orphanage, Rs. 100; the Parsee Lying-in Hospital, Rs. 100; the Bombay Deaf and Dumb Institute, Rs. 100; and the Parsee Tower-of-Silence Fund, Rs. 50.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

FEMALE education in the Punjab has not so far made very great progress, but the Government is hopeful for the future. There are now six secondary schools for native girls with sixty-two pupils, whereas five years ago hardly any girls had passed beyond the primary stage. The number of girls in the upper primary classes has also increased by about 25 per cent., and the willingness of the parents to send their girls to school is increasing, but in this respect the province is still backward.

EVICTING THE INDIAN MUSEUM.

THE "SOUTH KENSINGTON GANG" AT IT AGAIN.

A meeting of the body known as the India Committee of Advice took place on Thursday, at the South Kensington Museum, to consider the correspondence which has recently passed between the Science and Art Department and Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1881. The Commissioners have called upon the Department to surrender possession of a portion of the galleries which have for many years contained the India collections, in order that they may be leased to the School of Art Needlework. The meeting was attended by Colonel Henry Yule, C.B., Lieut.-General Richard Strachey, C.S.I., F.R.S., Sir John Strachey, G.C.S.I., C.I.E., Sir Alfred Comyns Lyall, K.C.B., K.C.I.E., members of the India Council, and General Keatinge; General Donnelly, secretary of the Science and Art Department, was also present. The committee, after carefully considering the correspondence, decided—we believe unanimously—to protest against the proposed scheme, and to report the facts to Lord Cross, Secretary of State for India, in order that joint action may be taken to preserve the Indian collections, which, under the management of the Science and Art Department, have largely developed. If the Commissioners have their way one effect will be to cause the withdrawal of the architectural collections, so much admired by visitors to the Museum. The architectural collections, as examples of applied wood and stone-carving, metal work, and wall decoration in marble and tile, have attracted more public interest, and been more used by students and artificers than anything else in the building. It may be mentioned that the number of visitors has increased from 58,000 in 1885 to 146,000 in the present year. After such a proof of the utility of the collection, it becomes a serious question how far the Commissioners are justified in departing from the purposes of their charter in obstructing the further development of one of our most interesting and important museums.

It is to be hoped that the correspondence will be published. As described to us it is very curious, and it is not without bearing upon the question Mr. Samuelson intends to ask in the House on Monday. The proposed inquiry of the hon. member refers to the manner in which the Commissioners are covering a portion of their estate with residential houses, and probably to a certain plan for covering the upper part of the Horticultural Gardens, now occupied by the conservatory and arcades, with huge blocks of residential flats. As Lord Randolph Churchill, it appears, is not after all going to South America, it might be worth his while to turn his attention to the management by the Commissioners of the surplus of the '51 Exhibition, amounting to from £190,000 to £200,000. His lordship might arrive at the conclusion which has long since been reached by others, that the time had almost come for the appointment of another Royal Commission of Inquiry. In using their trust to create the Horticultural Gardens and to substantially support the Albert Hall, the Commissioners of the 1851 Exhibition were, of course, within their tether, even though they had to borrow enormous sums to carry out these schemes. But the fact that they are now compelled to sell portions of their land for speculative building purposes seems to suggest the desirability of a thorough investigation. At all events, the public have a right to know what explanation the Commissioners can give for spending so much money upon the formation of the Horticultural Gardens, and then breaking them up.—Pall Mall Gazette.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

CONVERSATIONS WITH THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.*

Notwithstanding all that has been written about the Duke of Wellington in the shape of reminiscences, biographies, anecdotes, &c., another contribution to our knowledge of him as he was in private life is neither redundant nor out of place. Earl Stanhope is but a poor kind of Boswell, and his son has not attempted by any literary art to put his father's notes into a form likely to satisfy a very exacting critic; but the book as it is will be read with much interest and pleasure, for it contains much that will be new to the general reader, while at the same time a perusal of it will only enhance the general opinion of the great Duke's lofty and noble character. It helps to confirm the truth of the Poet Laureate's poetic prophesy regarding him that "whatever record leaps to life he never shall be sham'd." This volume when first printed was circulated only amongst private friends, but the interest excited by its perusal has induced the present Earl Stanhope to offer it to the public, "to whom," as he truly says, "every authentic record of the great Duke must always be welcome." In this sense this book will be very welcome to the general reader.

The guests of the Duke at Walmer Castle and Strathfieldsaye were not backward in asking their host questions of rather a difficult and delicate nature to answer. For instance:—

"Lady Salisbury asked 'which was the greatest military genius, Marlborough or Napoleon?' Why, I don't know; it is very difficult to tell. I can hardly conceive anything greater than Napoleon at the head of an army—especially a French army. Then he had one prodigious advantage—he had no responsibility—he could do whatever he pleased; and no man has ever lost more armies than he did. Now with me the loss of every man told I could not risk so much. I knew that if I ever lost five hundred men without the clearest necessity, I should be brought upon my knees to the bar of the House of Commons."

Questions about the battle of Waterloo were put to him without number, and he was always ready to reply kindly, although he is reported to have said that the answering of the innumerable questions gave him more trouble than winning the battle itself.

There is much about India in this volume.

"The Duke spoke of his Indian despatches lately published by Gurwood. I have been much amused at reading them over; the energy and activity were quite as great then as ever afterwards. I don't think I could write better now (1834) after all my experience. . . . In India, during three years, I was always in tents, never slept in a house. . . . Mrs. Arbuthnot asked him whether it was not true that at the siege of Garneghar he had had, in addition to all his other duties, to ride fifty miles daily? Yes; Colonel Stevenson was attacking the fortress on another side—he was taken ill—he was then an old man; I was obliged to attend to his business as well as my own, and thus I rode every morning to his station, which, by the circuitous road round the hills, was twenty-five miles from mine and twenty-five back every day."

It may interest the many who are at present suffering from the depreciated rupee to learn that the Duke was strongly in favour of bimetalism. He was in favour of making silver as well as gold a legal tender for large sums, and of the Government fixing in the Gazette from time to time the precise rate at which the two metals should stand to each other.

He was strongly opposed to British colonisation in the hills, or, indeed, anywhere else in India. He would have allowed no European to purchase land there, for he had the strange notion that such settlements involved danger to our hold on the country. "I confess," he writes to Lord Mahon, who had forwarded for his perusal a Memorandum on the Colonisation of the Himalayas, by Captain Henry Drummond, Bengal Cavalry, "that I feel no great security in any English colony. I see how precarious our dominion is in North America, in our Australian colonies, even in the most considerable of our West India Colonies."

It may please Calcutta editors and the Trades' Association there to know that the Duke held similar opinions to theirs: that Calcutta should always be the seat of government in India, and that there should be no removal up country "even to Agra." Simla was an "unknown quantity" with the Duke.

There is much more about Indian matters, but it would be unfair to quote more. The book itself should be bought and read.

THE EUPHRATES EXPEDITION.*

To the superficial inquirers after geographical or historical research it may seem rather late to publish, at the close of 1888, the narrative of an expedition made at the close of 1834. But Dr. Ainsworth may say that he has not compiled his elaborate work for the instruction or amusement of such persons. He looks for the reward of his labours to the satisfaction and approval with which antiquarians and those who delight in recondite learning will hail the appearance of these volumes. Such readers will be charmed with his work, for it abounds in researches geographical, topographical, and historical. It is a book which no geographical library will be complete without; and as it possesses an excellent index it will be always a useful book of reference concerning the route and places it refers to. "That blessed word Mesopotamia" has inspired the author to tell all he knows—and it is a great deal—of that country—its past and present, and of the adjacent districts into which he wandered, exploring as traveller, botanist, and geologist. The Biblical scholar will, doubtless, be interested in the localisation of the resting-places of Elijah, of the tombs of Daniel, Baruch, Ezekiel, Ezra, Nahum, Jonas, and others; and it may be a reflection for sinners that sulphur is precipitated at the "Gates of Paradise," but "not in sufficient quantities to be of any commercial value." The work abounds in antiquarian and archaeological lore, and the learned doctor has followed in the tracks of other travellers, from Xenophon to Sir A. Layard. The expedition he accompanied, which was that commanded by Francis Chesney, was one fraught with many dangers and difficulties, as all who have the "Narrative" and "Life of General Chesney" know, but Dr. Ainsworth is a philosopher of calm courage, who treats dangers and difficulties merely as matters to be surmounted, and who passes over slightly personal perils of no trifling kind. He was more than once in danger of being murdered, and the reviewers have, one and all, noticed that he was once nearly caught in a Turkish bath which, on awaking from a faint, he found to be full of Turkish ladies disporting their charms. But he also records another danger from which he—perhaps unwillingly—but fortunately, escaped. He went to sleep one night in the Persian Apennines in a kiosk, in a garden enclosed in a shrubbery of laurel and pomegranate, with avenues of roses and orange trees. When he awoke early next morning he caught a glimpse of a beautiful girl who had been assiduously fanning him in his slumbers. "The opening of my eyes was the signal for a precipitate retreat, and I had to leave Kazerim without the opportunity being afforded to me of thanking the young lady, perchance a scion of a princely house, for her favours. To have asked who she was, or how I could see her, would have been an unpardonable breach of Persian etiquette. The Doctor was not so fortunate as Byron's hero, whose unconscious slumbers Haidée watched.

Although the work displays so much learning and painstaking research, there is a jumbling in the spelling and accentuation of several of the Oriental names—especially the Arabic—which will be irritating to many who have even a moderate acquaintance with Eastern languages. But the book is a valuable one, and has a special interest at this time, when public attention in England is being attracted towards our communications with India. The Euphrates Valley route to that country has been the waking dream of some of our most eminent men, from Chesney, who advocated its adoption half-a-century ago, to Sir William Andrew, who died, advocating it to the last, only a few months ago. And Dr. Ainsworth concludes his work with this prophecy:—"Great Britain lost its chance in not securing the Euphrates Valley as a highway to India, and the chance of restoring the ancient empires of the world to some degree of prosperity and happiness. One of the next phases will be Anglo-India and Russia fighting for supremacy at the mouth of the river, which Russia will probably reach by the uplands of Persia."

Derangement.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigne's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1888.

BOMBAY AND CALCUTTA.

LORD LANSDOWNE is at the present time being courted by two rival beauties, each of which desires that he should abide with her during the summer sultry days instead of following the example of previous Viceroys of running away when the weather got warm to seek attractions elsewhere. These rivals, it need hardly be explained, are the beautiful cities of Bombay and Calcutta. The rumour has got abroad that the new Viceroy does not approve of the summer exodus to Simla, but is not decided whether he should remain in Calcutta during the hot weather or divide his time between the capitals of the two Presidencies, for, of course, Calcutta and Bombay both ignore Madras as a comely sister—the "benighted" one being still looked upon as the Cinderella of the Indian family of cities. The rumour having got to the stage when editors and correspondents see it can be turned to account, is now being made the most of, with the hope, no doubt, that some of the lucubrations which are being penned on the subject may sooner or later come under the favourable notice of the Viceregal eye. Bombay and Calcutta both claim the Viceroy as their own, and they will not be content with his adopting the attitude of Captain Macheath in the Beggars' Opera, and singing :—

"How happy could I be with either Were t'other dear charmer away ;"

they insist upon his lordship making up his mind at once. To assist him to do so each contributes a portrait of her rival. The portraits are not flattering ones, but they may be correct likenesses for all that. A writer, who has been a "Wanderer" in both cities, has undertaken the task of comparison, but he contributes his views to the Press at a length which we cannot afford space to reproduce. We can only afford room for some artistic touches. The question of climate is, he says, of course, the first consideration. In this matter, however, he allows that "Cæsar and Pompey" be very much alike, sar—specially Pompey. In some ways the climate of Calcutta is like that of Bombay, and in some ways it is not. "In both you may expect to stew. In both there is a moistness and a mugginess that robs starched shirts and stuck-up collars of all their beauty and all their virtue. In both the hot weather and the rains are purgatorial." But Bombay is said to be less intolerable. Here is a picture of Calcutta during that period :—

Calcutta at this time, in fact, is a vast prison in the middle of a swamp, with a large exercise-ground called a maidan in the interior. The mansions of Chowringhi and the streets horizontal from it represent so many cells, from which the male prisoners matutinally creep forth to reach their offices in closed carriages, and from which the female prisoners dare not issue until the sun is about to set. When the angry sun does go down a miserable effort at vitality becomes apparent. The maidan—fondly called by Calcutta people the lungs of their city—becomes dotted over with strollers, while the Red Road, or the Strand along the Hooghly's bank, grows crowded with slowly-moving carriages full of gasping humanity. A set or two at tennis satisfies the most enthusiastic player; cricket is, of course, impossible, and only a few amiable lunatics—whose number, strange to say, is increasing every year—assemble to play football, and jeopardise their constitutions under the pretence of sport. A stray zephyr now and again is wafted over the maidan after travelling up the Hooghly from the sea. Quite as often a cyclone presents itself, or a hurricane of wind and rain, at once injurious to property and uncomfortable to man.

Anglo-Indians who have served in Calcutta, either in the Services or as a business man, will hardly, we think, acknowledge that the above is a perfectly correct picture. The mansions of Chowringhee are hardly cells; and locomotion, although in closed carriages during the day, is considerably indulged in amongst all classes of Europeans, merchants, lawyers, brokers, &c. The evening drive along the Strand is not altogether such a trying affair, and the zephyrs blowing up the Hooghly from the sea are happily more common than cyclones or hurricanes.

Bombay is far better off. You have there the sea and sea breeze. The early morning heat is trying, the midday heat this side obnoxious, but the moment the Rajabai Clock Tower peals forth four, relief has come; soft airs blow with varying degrees of coolness upon the countenance, and by five or six o'clock everybody has been lulled into an optimistic and even lively frame of mind. Now Bombay is possessed of, and exhibits, real vitality. Carriages roll briskly about from Elphinstone Circle to the Apollo Bunder, or from the Fort to the luxurious and luxuriant region of Malabar Hill. The Yacht Club and the Bombay Club fill with healthy faces, and resound with—yes, with laughter—a sound never heard in Calcutta from March to December.

Calcutta must have changed considerably if nobody laughs there now from March to December. Surely the reports of the Municipality are still published? They alone were an inexhaustible fund of farce in days gone by. They cannot have become sensible and serious things now. The description given of the Municipality does not show that it is more dignified than it used to be. "In Calcutta the Municipality is a congress of factions, pulling all ways but the way of the common good, with two Municipal bodies where one would serve, and with half the total Municipal population still lacking wholesome drainage, or water fit to drink." But if the dwellers in Calcutta be as described, foul drains and unwholesome water are fitting for them. Here is the description:—

Listen for a while to the inhabitants of the City of Palaces to-day. A people confessing themselves greedy for money, greedy for power, and almost contemptuously careless of any interests but their own. Merchants demanding annexation to increase the number of their markets and the extent of their sales; citizens forgetful of civic obligations; masters who have reduced their servants to a state of sullen service or open refusal to serve; Christians who regard church as a parade and religion as "unscientific" and effete; administrators tongue-tied by authority, and fearless of naught but the ill-will of their "chiefs;" and the European wholly and bitterly at feud with the Natives about him.

In Bombay, we are told, this is all different. There may be there "a desire for fresh markets" or "a neglect of civic obligations," but "if so they are found in a marvelously small degree. Nothing strikes the stranger so much as the freedom of the inhabitants of Bombay from prejudice." This last assertion ought to be italicised, as we think it "takes the cake." But there is nothing to redeem Calcutta in any shape or form. "It is the sport of cyclonic tempests of great violence and considerable frequency. It is the home of malaria and the conservatory of cholera. The river on which it stands requires an army of pilots to conduct every vessel above a hundred tons burthen that trusts its tortuous and deceitful channel. There is no harbour, although the place calls itself one of the most important ports in the world." Nay, more than this:—"Who has ever heard of a sail on the Hooghly or of a Calcutta yacht club." This is true: Bombay has a yacht club, but how many are theyachts? But this question is a digression. The description proceeds:—"In Calcutta there is nothing picturesque, nothing to gratify the architectural instinct (whatever that may be), no scenes of Oriental colouring and association—all is filthy, mean and sordid." Even the punkah coolies partake of the general degradation. The punkah coolie of Bombay is a spirit of health compared with the goblin-damned who in Bengal shows himself in dark corners to enjoy long and refreshing slumber. A gentle reminder—the gentlest possible growl—is sufficient to recall the Bombay coolie from dreamland; the "cold water cure" must be followed up by the stick in Calcutta, and in ten minutes he is off to sleep again as bad as ever. After this need it be wondered at that the writer comes to the conclusion that, "in point of social and political character, the Bombay people and their modes of thought are vastly superior to the people of Calcutta," and that, "all these truths considered, it is no wonder if the Government of India and every man in it who can annually flee away to Simla or Mussoorie from the worst managed and worst conditioned city in the Indian Empire!" The drawer of these pen-and-ink sketches of Calcutta does not display the most picturesque grammar, but he has possibly been carried away by his emotions. It will be interesting to see how a Calcutta artist will now draw a picture of Bombay. The pot is not likely to allow the kettle to have it all its own way.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE services of Colonel E. D'O. Twemlow, Royal Engineers, have been placed at the disposal of the Government of Bombay, Public Works Department.

ON return from field service Captain H. P. Chesney, R.E., is transferred from the Lahore Division, Military Works, to the Barrackpore Division, Military Works.

SURGEON C. G. WOODS, M.S., having returned from the Black Mountain Expedition, has been directed to proceed to Benares, and resume his substantive duties at that station.

SURGEON W. HEFFERNAN, M.S., who has just reported his arrival from England, has been directed to remain in the Allahabad district. He has accordingly been attached to the Station Hospital at Cawnpore for duty until further orders.

NATIVE commissioned officers are to be admitted into the native military survey class at Rurki in future, but the number per class will be restricted to two, and they will join as pupils under the same conditions as other native soldiers. Those entering the College will not be allowed the special survey allowance now given to those trained non-commissioned officers who attain commissioned rank nor will non-commissioned officers who may hereafter pass through the College and attain commissioned rank receive the allowance, but it will be continued to all those now in receipt of it.

THE following appointments are made:—5th Bengal Cavalry: Lieutenant C. C. Boileau, supernumerary on the establishment of the regiment, to be Squadron Officer, vice White, vacated. 31st Punjab Infantry: Lieutenant J. E. Waterfield, Wing Officer and Quartermaster, 45th Sikhs, to be Wing Officer, vice Ewart, seconded for employment in the Commissariat Department. 45th Gurkha Light Infantry: Lieutenant J. McD. Baird, supernumerary on the establishment of the 40th Bengal Infantry, to be Wing Officer on probation. 2nd Battalion 4th Gurkhas: Lieutenant A. Grant, officiating Wing Officer 1st Battalion 4th Gurkhas, is transferred in the same capacity. 2nd Battalion 5th Gurkhas: Lieut. A. H. G. Kemball, Wing Officer, to be Adjutant.

ON the 26th November last the warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Highland Light Infantry sumptuously feasted the native ranks of the 29th Punjab Infantry on their return to Peshawar from the Black Mountain Expedition. The hosts provided the materials for the banquet on a lavish scale, and these were cooked in the sepoy's lines by men of their own depot. Tents had been pitched on the parade ground separately for Sikhs, Dogras, and Mahomedans, and two hours after the arrival of the regiment every man of the 29th Punjab Infantry not on duty was seated with appetite whetted by a twelve-mile march on a Punjab winter morning. The Britishers made capital hosts, and though few on either side could speak the other's language, there was plenty of laughter and good humour. The men of the 29th Punjab Infantry were much flattered by the kindly forethought of their fellow-soldiers, and were delighted when the pipers of the 74th came and played round the tents, and afterwards danced the reel of Tulloch. Colonel Beddy with his officers visited the ground, and thanked the men of the 74th for the compliment paid to the regiment. After the reel the Colonel called for three cheers for the generous entertainers, which were heartily given; with one cheer more for Sergeant-Major Quirk, who seemed to be a great favourite with the men of the 29th. The pipers, too, were loudly cheered before hosts and guests parted with feelings of mutual goodwill.

THE proceedings of meetings in connection with the National Congress usually terminate with "three cheers for the Queen." This prompts the Muslim Herald to say that:—"The mot d'ordre of the Congress is—'God save the Queen,' but the devil fly away with her representatives."

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—DEC. 18.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS IN INDIA.

Lord FITZGERALD said a good deal of attention had recently been drawn to a case at Patna, in which a magistrate ordered a girl, alleged to be under the age of 14 years, to be handed over to a man for alleged immoral purposes, to whom the mother was alleged to have sold her. Sir J. GORST, replying to a question on the subject in the House of Commons a few days ago, stated that the magistrate acted under section 551 of the Indian Procedure Code, and added that the Secretary of State desired him to remind the House that Indian magistrates were bound to administer the law as it was, and that Her Majesty's Government was under the most solemn obligations to respect the religious and social customs of the Hindoos, and all other classes of Her Majesty's subjects in India. He entirely agreed with that statement, which was in accordance with the recommendation of the English Commissioners for the codification of the law of India, who, in the course of their report, said:—"And such code, prepared, as it ought to be, with a constant regard to the conditions and institutions of India, and the character, religions, and usages of the populations, would, we are convinced, be of great benefit to that country." The section under which the magistrate acted, it should be borne in mind, only applied to female children who were under the age of 14 years, detained for an unlawful purpose—and an immoral purpose would, of course, be an unlawful purpose. It was, therefore, very important to clear up distinctly whether the child was under 14 years or not. The Under-Secretary, in his answer to the House of Commons, did not mention a strange fact in this case—namely, that this child had already been twice married. The case threw some light on the system of child marriages in India, which, in a recent trial of a Brahmin, convicted of murdering his child wife, Mr. Justice Norris pronounced to be the root of most of the miseries in Hindoo social life, and which, he added, was now severely condemned by a large section of the Hindoo community. He did not desire to discuss or express any opinion on this case at Patna, but it was one which had aroused immense interest in the district and which required careful consideration, touching closely as it did the social customs of the people. At present the House was not in full possession of the facts, and it being the first province of this House to supervise the administration of justice in all the dominions of the Crown, he would ask the Secretary of State for India whether he would procure further information as to this important case.

Viscount CROSS deprecated any discussion of this matter at the present moment, as the House was not in possession of full information. The case was recently brought to his notice, and after communication with the Government of India the following information was received, which was recently at his desire, given to the House of Commons:—

"Quinn, magistrate of Patna district, reports that girl alleged to be under fourteen years of age, left reputed husband's house in October last. Application made to magistrate of district under section 551, Criminal Procedure Act 10 of 1882, to restore girl to her mother. Orders issued under section to show cause why girl should not be restored. Inquiry made about it shows that girl's marriage has been proved and Court's orders issued for the restoration of the girl to her husband and mother. Bengal High Court, on application, pending inquiry, has refused to interfere with district magistrate's proceedings. Affair apparently dispute between the missionaries and natural guardians for possession of native child. The Government of Bengal has called for record of district magistrate's proceedings."

He gathered that the case was still pending in the High Court of Bengal, but he had telegraphed for the fullest information, and when it was received he should communicate it to their lordships.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DECEMBER 17.

THE GRAVING DOCK AT BOMBAY.

Mr J. MACLEAN asked the First Lord of the Admiralty what were the dimensions of the graving dock at Bombay for ironclads, the plans of which had now been approved by the Admiralty and the India Office; what was the estimated cost of the dock; and in how many years' time it was likely to be completed.

Lord G. HAMILTON: Sir John Coope's last design for a new graving dock at Bombay has been received, but it has not yet been formally approved by the Admiralty and India Office. The dimensions of the proposed dock are as follows:—Length of floor, 500 feet; width at entrance, 85 feet; depth on sill at high water, neap tides, 35 feet; depth of approach channel at high water, neap tides, 32 feet. The estimated cost is £221,000, and the estimated time for construction is four years.

INVESTMENTS IN INDIAN RAILWAYS.

Mr. WARMINGTON asked the Attorney-General whether his attention had been called to the rule of the Supreme Court, November, 1888, providing for the investment of cash under the control of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division; and whether such order, so far as it related to investment in Indian guaranteed railway shares, was within the powers conferred by the statute 23 and 24 Vict., cap. 38, or whether it was ultra vires.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL: The point put to me by the hon. and learned member is one which can only be determined by judicial decision, and on which he is more competent than I am to form an opinion. The question is whether Indian guaranteed railway shares are "stocks, funds, or securities" within the meaning of the Act of 1860. I am not prepared to say that the order of November, 1888, is ultra vires. But if the hon. and learned member desires further information upon the point, I would refer him to my hon. and learned friend the member for North Norfolk, who has, I believe, made this subject his special study.

DEC. 21.

BUDDHIST TEMPORALITIES IN CEYLON.

In answer to Mr. W. M'ARTHUR.

Baron H. DE WORMS said: A draft ordinance has been brought in by the Government of Ceylon in the Legislative Council dealing with Buddhist temporalities, which provides, among other objects, for the maintenance out of the property belonging to Buddhist temples of Buddhist services, rites, processions, and buildings. The draft ordinance proposes to vest the temporalities in trustees whose accounts will be audited by persons appointed by the District Courts, and the District Courts will be empowered to prescribe the form in which such accounts are to be kept. The policy of this ordinance was referred to at great length by Sir A. Gordon in his speech opening the Legislative Council on the 31st of October. He explained that the measure is an attempt to carry out the principles laid down by his predecessor, Sir J. Longden, and by Lords Kimberley and Derby; and stated that the draft had received the approval of Her Majesty's Government. It is not unusual for the Governor of a Crown Colony to obtain the approval of the Secretary of State before introducing an important draft ordinance, and to inform the Legislative Council of the fact.

THE Lahore paper says:—"We live in hopes of seeing it stated that, among his other light and genial tasks in India, Mr. Caine, M.P., proposes to regulate the hours of sunshine bestowed upon the ryots' crops, and to thoroughly expose the nefarious practices of cholera. The drink traffic and the National Congress might have been enough for any ordinary flying visitor to 'thoroughly examine' in a few weeks; but, in addition to this, he is to thoroughly go into—and 'expose,' as a Radical organ puts it—the entire working of Missions in India, and will write a series of letters ex cathedra on the subject afterwards, in the English Provincial Press."

THE ORCHID TRADE.—The Rangoon Times hears that the finest shipment of orchids from Burma goes to England by an early steamer. Mr. Richardson, who has recently returned from Bhamo to Rangoon, has been very successful in getting a fine assortment, including, we believe, some new species. Mr. Roxall has recently proceeded up country, and will, no doubt, return next month, heavily laden, but in this case he has been distanced by local talent.

A STORY FROM SIKKIM.—The Darjeeling News states that a report has just reached us of a most unfortunate contretemps at the front. It appears that three men, being the advance guard of the Ampa's retinue, came to our advance picket, consisting of Sergeant Gray and three men, and by way of announcing their arrival, fired a shot. Our men immediately returned fire upon the new-comers, believing them to be the enemy, and killed all three. One of the men before he died, stated that the Ampa might be expected in ten days. The news may be somewhat exaggerated, but, if true, it is certainly very unfortunate.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares on Saturday were unaltered. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3½ to 3½, Nundydroog 1½ to 1½, Indian Consolidated 5s. to 5s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (17s. 6d. paid) 9s. to 11s., ditto fully paid (£1) 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., Ooregum 29s. 9d. to 30s. 6d., ditto Preference 1½ to 1½, Devala-Moyar 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d., Nine Reefs 9s. to 10s., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 5s. 6d. to 6s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., South-East Mysore 11s. to 12s., Indian Glenrock 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 15-16 to 1 1-16, New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 1s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 1s. to 1s. 6d.

surance are furnished on application.

BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux
of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour. —Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name — J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims. — Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India. —Westminster Review.

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

BRADFIELD COLLEGE, BERKS.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

The numbers in this Public School have risen from 57 in 1882, to 155 in 1888.

Successes since 1880:—22 open scholarships and exhibitions at Oxford and Cambridge; also admissions to R. M. C., Sandhurst, and R. M. A., Woolwich; direct Commission; place in I. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th December; from Allahabad and Madras to the 12th December; and from Calcutta to the 11th December.

THE first meeting of the Legislative Council at Calcutta was to be held on Friday, the 21st December.

ONE of the most important questions likely to engage the attention of the new Viceroy will be the transfer of Sind to the Punjab.

LAST Saturday's Gazette of India contains a Resolution by the Governor-General in Council thanking the officers and men of the Hazara Field Force for their services on the Black Mountain Expedition. General McQueen in his despatch gives the estimated losses of the enemy at 400. The British losses were 35 killed and died, and 59 wounded and injured.

SIR ASMAN JAH, Prime Minister to his Highness the Nizam, had an interview with Lord Lansdowne at Bombay on the 4th December. His Excellency had also a meeting with H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, and expressed an earnest desire that his Royal Highness should visit Hyderabad this cold weather.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has visited Rawalpindi, where his Excellency inspected the defence works and reviewed the troops.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT is about to proceed on inspection duty to the Central Provinces.

SIR JAMES LYALL, the Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab, has reached Delhi in the course of his Honour's winter tour.

GENERAL CHESNEY, the Military Member of Council, has arrived in Calcutta from his recent tour on the frontier.

THERE is no truth in the rumour that Sir Charles Crossthwaite is going on a year's leave. He returns to Rangoon from Calcutta on Friday.

SIR D. MACKENZIE WALLACE has taken over charge of the duties of Private Secretary to the new Viceroy. Mr. J. P. Hewett resumes his duties as Under-Secretary to the Home Department on the 18th.

MR. J. WARE-EDGAR, the Chief Secretary to the Bengal Government, has returned to Calcutta.

MR. HENVEY, Governor-General's Agent in Central India, has returned to Indore from his annual tour in the Bhopal Agency.

COLONEL J. P. STEEL, R.E., has returned from leave and taken up his new substantive appointment of Chief Engineer and Secretary to the D.P.W. of the North-West Provinces.

MAJOR BARR succeeds Colonel Bannerman as Resident at Gwalior, Major D. Robertson becoming Political Agent at Rewah.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL DEANE, Deputy Secretary, Military Department, goes home on privilege leave next month.

MR. P. C. LYON has taken over charge of the office of Private Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal from Mr. E. G. Colvin. Mr. Colvin has just been married to Miss Bayley, a daughter of Sir Stuart Bayley.

MR. T. H. STEWART, C.S., Commissioner of Surveys and Settlement, acts as Legal Remembrancer to the Government of Bombay and as additional Member of Council during the absence of Mr. J. R. Naylor, on furlough.

SATURDAY, December 22nd, has been fixed as the day on which the Conference on Provincial Finance will assemble at Calcutta. Mr. Robert Smeaton, C.S., will represent the Government of the North-West Provinces on the occasion, while Mr. Colman Macaulay will represent Bengal. Mr. Macaulay will probably proceed home on leave in January.

CAPTAIN C. W. MUIR vacates the command of the Viceroy's Body Guard, and proceeds home, on leave, at once. Captain Onslow, formerly Adjutant of the Body Guard, will probably be appointed Commandant.

MR. J. E. L. EZRA has been appointed Sheriff of Calcutta in succession to Dr. Mohendro Lal Sircar.

LIEUTENANT PALMER, R.E., has been severely wounded by some Chins. He was road-making to facilitate the advance of the punitive force now approaching the Chin country when he was wounded.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—No change took place in these Shares on Saturday. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3 5-16 to 3 7-16, Nundydroog 1 9-16 to 1 11-16, Indian Consolidated 5s. to 5s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (17s. 6d. paid) 12s. to 13s., ditto fully paid (£1) 15s. to 16s. 6d., Ooregum 32s. to 34s., ditto Preference 32s. to 34s., Devala-Moyar 5s. to 6s., Nine Reefs 9s. to 10s., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 6s. to 7s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d., South-East Mysore 11s. to 12s., Indian Glenrock 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 to 1½, New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 1s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d.

A DEED OF GALLANTRY.—A case of distinguished gallantry is reported from the Jeypore district of Vizagapatam, to which we hope the attention of the Royal Humane Society will be promptly invited. Four women crossing a rotten temporary bridge over a swift stream fell into the water. A person—the report gives us no indication of his calling—named Pogono Kiranasi, who happened to be on the bank at the time, jumped into eighteen feet of water, and after being carried a considerable distance down-stream rescued two of the women. He then brought the third to shore, and when she was safe, ran along the bank for a considerable distance in search of the fourth woman, who was sinking for the last time as he swam to her and disappeared before he could save her. Very naturally the district authorities think that the sanctioned reward of twenty rupees is too little for such a deed as Pogono Kiranasi's; and the Governor of Madras has sanctioned the presentation of a gold bangle "with a suitable inscription in Oorya," and promises to send home the story to the Secretary of State for the consideration of the Royal Humane Society. The highest honour at that body's disposal should without question be awarded on this occasion. It is not every day that a man saves three lives.—Pioneer.

EUROPEAN LIFE IN INDIA.—Under the auspices of the East India Association, a conference of gentlemen interested in the affairs of the British Empire in the East, and especially in the promotion of life assurance, was held at Exeter-hall on Tuesday, Sir Roper Lethbridge, C.I.E., M.P., presiding. The subject for consideration was the value of European and Native life in India, and the relative prime cost of life assurance in that dependency, introduced by Mr. P. Tait, the well-known insurance statistician. There is a very general impression that a vast improvement has taken place within the last few years in the value of European life in India, and there are those who stoutly contend that Englishmen run as little risk in India as they do in England. On the other hand, it is said that the unparalleled overwork now imposed on Europeans in India, the comparative impoverishment of men on fixed incomes by reason of the rise in prices, the heavy burden on many arising out of adverse exchanges, and the general deterioration in the staminal elements of the dietary of Europeans outside the Presidency towns, all adversely affect the health and longevity of Europeans in India. The result of Mr. Tait's elaborate and complete investigations of all the available facts presented to the meeting is that the value of life among Europeans in India has improved, is improving, and that this amelioration is likely to continue; that at present we are without the means of exactly measuring the extent of this amelioration; that hence it is quite premature reducing the rates for India to the European standard. At the close of the conference votes of thanks were accorded to Mr. Tait and the chairman.

NOTES.

BEYOND the sayings and doings of the Native Congress, which have been wired in detail to London by Reuter (the Baron is not always so liberal in his supply of Indian intelligence), there is little of importance to record from India. Some Native abuse follows, of course, in the wake of the departing Viceroy, for Babú will not readily forgive the St. Andrew's dinner speech, in which his lordship drew Babú's portrait in true colours. Vituperation of the ex-Viceroy, and flattery of his successor, will be for the nonce the rôle of the disloyal Native Press, in Bengal especially.

If Englishmen who talk glibly about the modest demands of the Native Congress would only read a little on the subject we would commend to them an article in the current number of the Asiatic Quarterly, by Mr. A. Rattray, in which, writing with thorough knowledge and experience gained on the spot, he lets the light of truth in upon the doings and aims of the would-be reformers.

ANOTHER article in the same Review on "Native Volunteering in India," by Sir Lepel Griffin, is also a valuable contribution to truth and facts. Sir Lepel has been accused of giving all his sympathies to the more northern or the warlike peoples of India, and misrepresenting poor Babú, but all who know Babú will find no misrepresentation in the pages we refer to. The writer tells only the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, of the cowardly, servile class of Bengali agitators, who, clamouring to be enrolled as Volunteers for the defence of the Empire, would be afraid to strike a blow in protection even of their own homesteads, and who have the tongues of braggarts with the heart of sheep.

MADRAS appears to have had another scandal all to itself, but this time one which concerns those in high places. The information given in the papers to hand by the present mail is very meagre, and perhaps might have been better omitted altogether—but it is curious reading. The Madras correspondent of the Allahabad Post telegraphs to that journal:—

The separation of Lord and Lady Connemara is the absorbing topic of conversation in Madras. As I telegraphed to you, her Excellency left Government House on Wednesday last, and is now residing at one of the local hotels. It is reported that she proceeds to England by an early steamer. It is significant that Captain Wyndham Quinn, Aide-de-Camp, has applied for leave, and that Brigade-Surgeon Briggs, Surgeon to the Governor, has resigned his appointment.

Lady Connemara arrived at Madras on Monday from Ooty. At Wednesday evening's Government House dance she was missed by the guests; and on inquiry it was found that there had been a domestic squabble. Lady Connemara left Government House that day, and took rooms at the Albany Hotel. The dance was kept up, Lord Connemara enjoying himself thoroughly. The reports why her ladyship left her husband's residence are too delicate to unveil at present; but it may be conjectured that there is something very serious for the lady to have taken this step. Madras is simply disgusted at the nature of the reports, and, accepting them as true, sympathises with her ladyship, though in some quarters it is considered that Lady Connemara acted indiscreetly in leaving Government House and creating this scandal. The pressing solicitations of friends failed to induce her ladyship to rejoin her husband.

Captain Quinn, A.D.C., who obtained leave immediately after this occurrence, left for Calcutta by the Rohilla, with his wife, Lady Eva Quinn, both of whom, it is said, will not return to Government House.

Although we extract the above from a Bombay paper, the probability is that if the report rests upon the authority of the Allahabad Post and its correspondent, it is not true.

THE question of coolie emigration to British Borneo is engaging the attention of the Government of India; and it is hoped that this new outlet for India's surplus population will be opened in a little time. The Government are only anxious to see that proper arrangements are made for protecting the interests of the emigrants and ensuring their health and comfort before sanctioning the measures usual in such cases. The climate of Borneo is believed to be well suited to Natives of India.

CLEARLY, in the judgment of the Calcutta High Court—and it is difficult not to agree with it—the Recorder of Rangoon put himself in the wrong by his mode of dealing with Mr. Moylan. "But," says the Pioneer, "if Mr. Moylan is free to return to Rangoon rejoicing the shady episode of the Grenada Court has been writ large on the record of his dispute with Mr. MacEwen, with whom, moreover, the sympathies of the entire community must remain. We conclude that Mr. MacEwen will seek relief from his present judicial post as soon as he can be otherwise provided for."

LORD DUFFERIN will not be allowed to leave India without a special introduction to Native literature. Munshi Newul Kishore, of Lucknow, has just issued, for distribution among Lord Dufferin's friends and admirers, an Urdu translation of all the speeches—official and social—which his Excellency has delivered during his Viceroyalty of India, prefacing the volume with a summary of Lord Dufferin's public acts in his administration of the country, and frontispicing the whole with a well-executed photograph of the distinguished author of the speeches. The Munshi has also published Urdu and Persian translations of Lord Dufferin's Letters from High Latitudes. The Persian translation of this work was undertaken mainly with a view to afford Lord Dufferin an opportunity of reading his letters in that language of the East of which he has attained considerable proficiency.

THE Indian Witness, in taking farewell of the retiring Viceroy and the Marchioness of Dufferin, says:—"Lady Dufferin's work is immortal, for charity abideth for ever. Her memory rests in the hearts of India's daughters."

THE quantities of ore crushed and gold obtained at the five Kolar mines last month is as follows:—Lalaghat, 140 tons, 220 ounces; Consolidated, 514 tons, 119 ounces; Mysore, 1,447 tons, 1,214 ounces; Nundydroog, 408 tons, 757 ounces; and Ooregum, 318 tons, 622 ounces. Mysore also obtained 119 ounces of gold from 514 tons of tailings.

THE proceeds of nine sales of Bengal opium and eight months' pass duty on opium exported from Bombay amount to Rs. 6,15,44,730, or Rs. 17,99,230 better than the estimate. The whole gain has been made by Bengal, the Bombay returns being Rs. 7,73,550 below the estimate.

THE marriage of Mr. E. Colvin, Private Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, with Miss Bailey, daughter of Sir Stuart Bayley, was celebrated on Dec. 6 at St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, which was almost filled, the ladies forming a large portion of those present. The service was choral. Captain Rawlinson, Aide-de-Camp to the Lieutenant-Governor, acted as best man. The Viceroy and the Marchioness of Dufferin signed their names in the marriage register. After the wedding, the bride and bridegroom and a large number of friends drove to Belvedere, where the presents were displayed in a corridor.

I CANNOT understand, says Captain Hayes in his journal, how it is that we see so few Eurasian jockeys. The youths of this mixed race are naturally light in body, if not in head and morals, and their legs, as a rule, when young, are admirably fitted to show off a top boot. Then, why don't more of them join the jockey brotherhood? After all, perhaps the old idea is right, that a love of horses and a talent for riding has to be bred in a man. I believe in blood, "running blood," like that of Waxy, Pocahontas, Adventurer, and Hermit; "jumping blood," like that of Irish Birdcatcher and Cremorne. Old Jack Roberts remained for twenty years capable of giving any man in the world 300 out of 1,000 at the English game of billiards, and his son now does ditto. In acting, there were the Kembles, Keans, and Robertsons of histrionic blood. In swimming we have the Beckwiths descended from the old champion. Then there's Tom Cannon and his sons. As to singers and musicians, their name is legion. I don't "hold" much with "blue blood;" for we know from physiology that the cerulean tint is obtained by an excess of impurity in that fluid.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DEC. 30.

The past week has been marked by no political events of importance, and has been chiefly devoted to the celebration of the Christmas festivities. On Wednesday the new Viceroy was present at the races, and drove up the course to the grand stand in Royal State. He was cheered both on his arrival and on his departure.

The Lushai expeditionary force is composed of 250 of the 9th Bengal Infantry, 250 of the 2nd Bengal Light Infantry, a wing of the 2nd Goorkhas, and 200 of the 4th Madras Pioneers, with two guns of a Bombay mountain battery. Colonel Tregear commands the troops, and Major Channer, who recently won the Distinguished Service Order in Burma, commands the Goorkha wing. The force will be concentrated at Demagiri.

The central meeting of the Bengal Presidency Rifle Association at Meerut was closed yesterday, after a very successful series of contests during the week. Lieut. Davis, of the Allahabad Volunteers, won the championship badge. The Commander-in-Chief yesterday delivered a long speech, pointing out the urgent necessity, in view of the new requirements of modern tactics and the latest inventions in firearms, of soldiers studying the art of skilled musketry. He had, he said, recently tested the new magazine rifle. It was a thoroughly good weapon, with little or no recoil, and, owing to the great initial velocity obtained, the trajectory was so flat that point-blank range might be taken at 500 yards—a great advantage to men firing under a condition of excitement in actual warfare.

The conference of financial delegates of the various provincial Governments closed its session on Monday. The delegates decided that the local Governments should make the necessary grants in aid of the Imperial Government for the current year in the event of the Budget showing a deficit. The more important questions raised in the recent despatch of the Secretary of State relating to the system of adjustment of Imperial, provincial, and local expenditure, were left open for fuller examination and discussion.

The Crawford Commission still excites unflagging interest in Bombay. This is partly due to the scandalous disclosures of the venality and corruption of Native judicial officers given in evidence by the Government witnesses, under promise of a Government indemnity. This raises a very serious question of executive administration, totally irrespective of the guilt or innocence of the accused. The defence was opened at Poonah on Wednesday, the Council-hall being crowded with Natives and Europeans. The opening speech of the counsel for the accused will last seven days. The utmost satisfaction is expressed on all sides at the admirable manner in which the Commissioners are conducting this very onerous and protracted State trial. They have exhibited throughout perfect temper, courtesy, and impartiality, combined with skilled judgment and unwavering resolution in rejecting irrelevant matter, while sifting thoroughly every detail of each separate charge.

The Native Congress was opened at Allahabad on Wednesday. The chairman, who delivered a very lengthy address, confined his speech entirely to the advocacy of a reform of the Legislative Councils, suggesting that half the members of each should be elected, with the right of interpellation. He made no attempt to repudiate the seditious pamphlets issued for the Congress. Various resolutions were proposed, discussed, and adopted during the two succeeding days. The Rajah Siva Prasad, in the course of his speech, said that India was now more prosperous than ever; there had been no country in the world so happy. This expression of opinion was received, however, with loud cries of dissent, and when the speaker proceeded to protest against the distribution of inflammatory pamphlets he was groaned down and forced to leave the platform. The succeeding speaker, after making a sneering allusion to the opposition of the Rajah of Bhinga, Sir Auckland Colvin, and Lord Dufferin, insinuated that the Rajah Siva Prasad's protest against sedition had been actuated by a desire to secure a decoration from the Government.

Save for occasional instances of personal abuse, the whole proceedings have fallen rather flat. It has been felt by the responsible Natives throughout India that Lord Dufferin's recent masterly condemnation was thoroughly justified; and was an impressive pronouncement of a great Governor who had earnestly considered the subject in all its bearings and who expressed the result of profound and anxious study of the question. The speech was regarded as a serious warning of one who had earned the confidence of the Native community by constant and sympathetic endeavours to promote the welfare of India and secure the happiness of the numerous Indian races and sects. It will be long before the Rajpoots, Sikhs, Mahrattas, and Mahomedans will consent with resigned tranquility to accept Bengalee domination, even though bolstered up and fortified by British bayonets, in place of the existing "august impartiality" of British rule. This Allahabad meeting has probably proved useful in impressing a perception of the futility of the agitation upon the consciences of the "microscopic minority."

The latest news from Sikkim is that the negotiations are still proceeding with the Chinese Ampe, or, as the British soldier styles him, with a happy inaccuracy of expression, the "Chinese Umpire." This dignitary seems to be fully equipped with infinite resources for conducting dilatory diplomacy, and at present he is apparently engaged in employing Mongolian finesse to exhaust the patience of the British negotiators. The Tibetan Ministers are conspicuous by their absence, and it is very doubtful whether the Ampe is clothed with sufficient de facto authority to settle on a durable basis the conditions of peace.

The Hindoo convicted at last Sessions of the atrocious murder in cold blood, without apparent motive, of his child-wife, was executed yesterday. He made no confession.

Last Sunday a severe shock of earthquake was experienced in Calcutta and throughout Bengal. In Rajshahye large fissures opened, whence hot liquid mud was ejected. No loss of life is reported.

Professor Forrest has been appointed to continue the important historical work of editing the Foreign Office records of the Government of India.

The Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution supporting the appointment of Mr. Colquhoun on the commission for the delimitation of Burma along the Chinese frontier, in view of his special qualifications.

Lady Lansdowne has accepted the office of President of the Marchioness of Dufferin's fund in aid of the women of India, and has been presented with an address of welcome from the native ladies.

BURMA.

RANGOON, DEC. 29.

Sawlapaw, Chief of the Red Karens, has anticipated the attack of the troops despatched against him. A body of his men, about 500 strong, of whom only 300 were armed, attacked and looted the large village of Kyaukmyat, in British territory. Kyaukmyat was held by forty of the military police, who remained in their fortified barracks awaiting an attack. Colonel Harvey, commanding the column despatched from Lower Burma against Sawlapaw, sent a detachment to assist the police. When the troops arrived at Kyaukmyat, Sawlapaw's men had retreated.

Reinforcements have been despatched from Rangoon to Colonel Harvey, who has been ordered to delay his advance and protect the frontier. Two further engagements between the military police and Sawlapaw's followers are reported. The main force marching against Sawlapaw has left Fort Stedman, and will concentrate at Sayat to-day. The troops will advance towards Tawlon to-morrow. The Siamese frontier officials are co-operating most cordially with our troops.

A force has left Bhamo to join the military police at Mogoung in order to punish five of the Kachyen tribes. Captain Brooke, of the 17th Bengal Native Infantry, commands the column, and the detachment of the Hampshire Regiment with the force is commanded by Captain Macdonald. The military police, who constitute the main strength of the column, are led by Lieutenant O'Donnell, who has already done good service against the Kachyens.

Mr. Hildebrand, Superintendent of the Shan States, is about to visit the five trans-Slaween States formerly belonging to Burmah in order to establish our rule there.

The Rangoon Chamber of Commerce is sending a representative to accompany Lieutenant Daly and his party on their tour through the Northern Shan States with the object of developing the trade from Upper Burmah.

A serious outbreak is reported in Shwebo Gaol. The prisoners mutinied and tried to escape. The military guard defeated this attempt, seven prisoners being killed and three wounded, while one of the Sepoys was killed and four were wounded during the affray. The Mandalay Herald states that the prisoners who thus attempted to escape were members of a dacoit gang who had submitted and surrendered their arms on the understanding that they would be pardoned. They were, however, subsequently imprisoned.

In Upper Burma the Kyouksai and Mandalay districts are still disturbed by the dacoit band of the Sekkya pretender. The Pinyinmana district is troubled by dacoits. Ottama is still at large in what were Bohshway's haunts. Kemendine Mintha, the well-known dacoit leader in the Myingyan district, for whose apprehension a reward of Rs.500 was offered by the Government, has been killed by the military police, commanded by Inspector Hill. The police completely routed the gang.

Moung Ohn, C.I.E., late Second Judge of the Small Cause Court at Rangoon, has been appointed a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. It is to be feared that Sir Charles Crosthwaite has made an injudicious selection in recommending Moung Ohn, who, although personally respected, does not represent the Burmese. He is a Talaing, and between that tribe and the Burmans a hostile feeling has always existed.

DEC. 30.

An insurrectionary movement has broken out in the Yau country in Upper Burma. One hundred British Infantry and 200 Sepoys are marching from Pokoko to attack the insurgents, who are posted near Gungaw.

THE INDIAN NATIVE CONGRESS.

(FROM REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

ALLAHABAD, DEC. 26.

The preliminary meeting commenced to-day, one thousand Delegates being present. Mr. George Yule, a merchant of Calcutta, and an ex-President of the Chamber of Commerce there, was elected President of the Congress.

The President's inaugural address complained of the present system of government, and of the absence of free discussion or control over the Budget charges. The speaker dealt exhaustively with the proposed reconstruction of the Councils, declaring that, as regarded an increase in the number of members, perfect unanimity of opinion prevailed, the non-official Europeans agreeing with the Indians on this point. He reminded his hearers that the late Lord Beaconsfield, in 1858, suggested the election of the members of the Indian Council as a safeguard for Indian interests. In the present position of affairs the Indian Council in London had no power, while the House of Commons possessed power, but neglected to exercise it. He claimed that the concession asked was moderate—namely, that half the members of the Legislative Councils should be elected, and the remainder nominated by the Government, one-fourth being officials. The right of veto would remain with the Executive; but he desired the establishment of a right of interpellation. Such a system of Government as was proposed was no more than parallel to that which prevailed in England six hundred years ago, when Edward I., the Barons, and the Commons sat together, the King and the Barons holding sway. The Congress was willing to leave the settlement of the details to a Committee of three official Europeans and three Indian Natives.

DEC. 27.

Fourteen hundred delegates attended to-day's proceedings of the Native Congress. A committee of one hundred was elected in the morning, the members of which carefully considered various draft resolutions.

The sitting of the Congress was opened at two o'clock in the afternoon, when the Hon. Mr. Telang proposed "that the Congress do affirm the necessity for the expansion and reform of the Council of the Governor-General for making laws and ordinances, and also of the Provincial Legislative Councils, as already set forth in Resolution III. of the Congress of 1885-86 and in Resolution II. of the Congress of 1887, as an experimental scheme, which expansion and reform were suggested in Resolution II. of the Congress of 1886."

The motion was seconded by Surendra Nath Bannerjee, and supported by the Mohammedan, Rajput, and Hindu delegates.

Rajah Siva Prasad then rose, and after commending the meeting of the Congress, raised an objection to certain pamphlets and other vernacular papers, and submitted an amendment to the resolution under discussion, consenting to petition the Lieutenant-Governor of each Province to intervene for the suppression of such pamphlets, &c. The Rajah was listened to quietly, and was granted more than the customary time, but the amendment was ruled to be out of order and irrelevant.

After some further speeches the proposal of the Hon. Mr. Telang was carried by acclamation.

The majority of the speakers expressed fervently loyal sentiments, which were supported by the entire audience.

A resolution in reference to public service subsequently moved by Mr. Eardley Norton, and seconded by the Hon. Ferozeshah Mehta, affirmed the statement made at the Congress of 1886, claiming that simultaneous examination for the Indian Civil Service in India and England, and the raising of the limit of the age of candidates of twenty-three in the statutory service, had retained in the uncovenanted service professional men of proved ability and merit. The resolution concluded with the declaration that nothing short of the reforms suggested would satisfy the people of the country.

DEC. 28.

A conference of Social Reformers preceded the meeting of the Congress to-day. Reports were presented from all parts of India describing the advance made in the direction of social progress.

The Congress met at eleven o'clock, the attendance being about the same as on previous days. It was resolved to send a telegram expressing sorrow for the suffering which Mr. John Bright is undergoing and sympathy with him and his family. The discussion on the public service was then continued. Various amendments were proposed, and eventually one was moved by Mr. Manomohun Ghose, recognising the value of the labours of the Civil Service Commission, and praying for simultaneous examinations in India and England. This was accepted, and the original resolution was withdrawn.

A resolution in favour of the separation of executive and judicial functions, now vested in one officer, was moved by Mr. Howard, of Allahabad, and supported by the delegates from Berar, Sindh, and elsewhere, and was ultimately carried.

Resolution III. of the previous Congress, asking for trial by jury and for various other reforms of the criminal procedure, was proposed by Mr. Kali Churr Banerjee, and seconded by Mr. Chandavarker. A long debate arose on this subject, the words of the present Chief Justice of Bengal being quoted in support of the resolution, which was in the end carried.

A resolution was then agreed to condemning the police administration as unsatisfactory and oppressive, and calling for an immediate inquiry into the system.

Resolutions relating to the military colleges, the education and training of young men to the military career, and the Indian Army system, and demanding the adoption of volunteering under such restrictions as the Government might consider proper, were carried with enthusiasm.

A resolution disapproving the Abkari Excise Administration as tending to encourage intemperance, and calling upon the Government to take preventive and remedial measures, was carried by acclamation.

Speeches were also made in favour of the reduction of the taxable minimum of the income-tax.

DEC. 29.

The final sitting of the Indian Native Congress was held to-day, the attendance being as numerous as at the previous meetings. Six resolutions were adopted.

The first declared that it was the duty of the Government to foster and encourage education; and, pointing out that the recent resolution on the subject of education was calculated to promote a tendency to reduce Imperial expenditure on education and withdraw it from Government control, urged the Government not to decrease its grants and to continue to control educational institutions of all kinds.

The second begged the Government, having regard to the poverty of the people, the importance of encouraging indigenous manufactures, and the difficulty of introducing a system of technical education owing to the present imperfect information, to appoint a mixed commission to inquire into the present industrial condition of the country.

Resolution three suggested that the time had come for extending to the major portions of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, the North-West Provinces, Oude, and the Punjab a permanent settlement of land revenue.

The fourth called the attention of the Government to the hardships caused to the poor by the recent increase of the salt tax.

The fifth resolution declared that the preceding resolutions should be submitted to the favourable consideration of the Viceroy, and by him to the Imperial Government; that it was the humble request of the Congress that the reforms suggested in the said resolutions, based as most were on Her Most Gracious Majesty's proclamation of 1858, might now be effected, and that, should it be deemed necessary to institute an inquiry, a Parliamentary Committee might be appointed as speedily as possible.

The last of the resolutions stated that the Congress watched with interest and sympathy the abrogation of the laws relating to the State regulation of vice, and recognised with appreciation the desire of the Services to co-operate in the attainment of that laudable end.

Mr. Hume was re-elected general secretary, and the Congress then dissolved amid loud and repeated cheers for the Empress.

The next session will be held in the Bombay Presidency, either at Bombay or at Poona.

GOVERNMENT BILLS ON INDIA.—At the Bank of England on Saturday bills on Bombay to the amount of 1,70,000 rupees were sold at 1s. 4 9-32d., and 2,30,000 rupees in telegraphic transfers on Calcutta at 1s. 4 11-32d.

THE LONDON PRESS ON THE NATIVE CONGRESS.

The Standard.—

"If Englishmen want to arrive at a just notion of the spirit and aim with which many of the more ardent spirits have entered on the Congress enterprise, they must not be satisfied with a glance at the resolutions passed at Allahabad. They must ask to be supplied with the pamphleteering literature disseminated in the least enlightened districts, with the articles written for local consumption in the Congress Press, and the harangues which have been made by the itinerant orators. They will discover a vast and vital difference between what is prepared for English eyes and the stuff deemed serviceable for the 'silent millions' of India. Instead of suggestions—wise or unwise—for the reform of the system of Indian Government, they will find shameless misrepresentation of the character of English rule, and scandalous libels on individual officials. Nothing is too silly, nothing too monstrous, to be disdained by these artists in abuse. The only thing that can be said by way of extenuation is that very often the man who prepares the incendiary falsehoods is only a shade less ignorant than the man whose passions he hopes to stir. . . . The very title of the Congress is a misnomer. There is no nation of India; the people to which English rule—just because it is alien and, in the technical sense, despotic—secures peace and a measure of prosperity such as was never known before in the long history of Hindustan, is a vast congeries of differing and hostile races and creeds. To save our authority from any risk of weakness, or even discredit, is a question of life and death to millions upon millions who have been called into being by the calm which our supremacy bestows. Our Government exists solely for the Natives, and is largely conducted through them. But our duty to the people as a whole forbids us to admit for one moment the notion of striking at the secret of our strength, by encouraging a fantastic mimicry of Parliamentary institutions."

The Morning Post.—

"The members of the Indian National Congress, who have studied the methods of the Irish agitators, have adopted precisely the same tactics, for the same reasons. They know very well that if they openly avowed at their meeting the doctrines which some of them teach in private, English public opinion would manifest itself in stern opposition to the movement, and even the few Radical politicians who look with kindly eyes on any movement that tends to weaken British power, would be unable to express their admiration for the Home Rulers of India. Hence it is that the President of the Congress, in his opening speech, was careful to disclaim on behalf of the Association any ambitious schemes. So far as can be gathered from the brief reports that have reached this country, he seems to have thrown overboard most of the demands made by his predecessors in the Presidential chair. Such cries as 'India for the Indians' were discreetly forgotten, and the claims of the agitators seem to have been reduced to a simple request for a reconstruction of the Legislative Councils. That this moderate demand will be quoted in England as a conclusive proof of the harmless nature of the agitation, there is little doubt; and it is well to examine how far it can be taken to represent the real aims of those who have taken part in the movement. If we turn to the records of the previous Congresses we find that, in spite of the guarded tone which marked most of the speeches, much wider and more important changes than this were demanded—that, in short, the leaders would be satisfied with nothing less than full representative government, which would imply the end of the British rule. Furthermore, it is to be observed that men like Lord Dufferin and Sir Lepel Griffin, who had unrivalled means of information, pay little respect to the modest professions which it at present suits the agitators to make. They know well enough that the movement has had its beginning in the vanity and ambition of the Bengali Baboo, and that it is being carried on by means that may any day prove dangerous to the peace of the country and to the stability of British authority."

The Daily News.—

"No sane person who knows anything about India supposes that the enormous aggregate of multifarious races which it contains are fit for representative institutions, or even able for the most part to comprehend the idea. Progress in Eastern countries is very slow, and it would have been far slower in India but for the admirable manner in which the civil servants of the Crown have discharged their difficult and delicate duties. If the career of England as a Great Power came to an end to-morrow there is nothing upon which her eulogists would more gladly and properly dilate than the wise and humane discharge of her heavy obligations to the people of India. Many errors have of course been committed, and much injustice has been done. But, taken, as a whole, our rule has been an incalculable blessing to that great peninsula, and may challenge comparison with any similar achievement in the history of the world. . . . Macaulay, in one of his most famous speeches, pointed to the time when free institutions could be given to India as the proudest day in English history. That day has not yet come, and is not likely to come in the time of any man now living."

THE FEUDATORY ARMIES OF INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The decision of the Government regarding the part to be played by the Feudatory Chiefs in the defence of India has now been made public by the Viceroy, the Durbar at Patiala being an appropriate gathering for such a declaration. Offers of pecuniary assistance partake too much of the character of benevolences to be acceptable to a great Imperial Government; and it was a foregone conclusion that direct contributions in hard cash would be steadily, though gratefully, declined. This has now been done. There are, it is true, in the Native States of India lakhs of men who are nominally soldiers, but who are no more fit to go into action than the ordinary peaceable citizens of any of our large towns. One-half of them, probably, are old and worn-out; while of the other half it may be said that the majority are badly armed, only half-trained, and certainly not officered as they should be. But in certain States, and notably those of the Punjab, there is excellent fighting material already in the ranks; and it is this material that the Government desire to utilise. The co-operation of the Chiefs is of course absolutely necessary to ensure the success of any scheme that may be set on foot. In the Punjab this has been already secured, their views having been taken as to the manner in which their best troops can be made as efficient as ordinary regular regiments. The Chiefs have all a certain pride in their armies as they now exist, and they have no desire to lose altogether their power of control. As the Viceroy said: "Each force will remain a purely State force, recruited in the territories of its Chief and serving within them," but ready to fall into line with our regular troops when the word is given that they are required. The independence of the armies of the Feudatory Princes will thus be reserved, and if the spirit of emulation is excited we shall have each State vying with its neighbour in raising its selected troops to a high pitch of efficiency. At the same time such help will be given by the Indian military authorities as is best calculated to ensure success. British officers, specially selected, will at the outset advise each Chief upon the best method to be adopted in organising the one or two regiments to be maintained on a war footing. Their functions, thereafter, will be to inspect these regiments from time to time, so that the troops may be kept thoroughly up to their work. These officers will not actually be posted to Native States, but will have their head-quarters in British territory, the Chiefs thus retaining the direct control over their own forces. Further, the Government have resolved to issue Snider rifles to the armies in the Feudatory States; and in the case of the Punjab to give each Chief a battery of four guns. Detached batteries are not likely to be of much practical use in these days of massed guns; but the arming of the cavalry and infantry with breech-loaders will undoubtedly have a good effect. The brigading from time to time of the troops of Native States with the regular forces is an idea which is much favoured, and should it be found feasible both officers and men will undoubtedly benefit. The scheme is of course essentially experimental, and in the first year or two great results must not be expected. But if the Chiefs really show an interest in the work of reorganising their armies, and, as the Viceroy said, regard the acceptance of their offers as an honourable distinction, the defensive strength of India will in due time be increased by at least one army corps of 30,000 men. The material of such a force is undoubtedly available in the armies of the Native States, and it only remains to sift carefully and judiciously.

THE POVERTY OF INDIA AND ENGLAND.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Those who are never weary of descanting on the poverty of India would do well to give an occasional thought to poverty far more grinding and hopeless prevailing in the countries of Europe, and even in England, underlying as it does great wealth and all the appliances and developments of the most advanced civilisation. This aspect of the question does not strike the ordinary visitor from the East to the centres of European power and civilisation, but it has not escaped the observation of the Nawab Mohsin-ul-Mulk, who, during his recent mission to England, had the opportunity of seeing a good deal of town and country. He was struck, as every one is, with the visible contrast between the civilisation of the East and that of the West. The Nawab shows an unexpected faculty of shrewd criticism. Admitting that the East has a great deal to learn from the nations of the West, he points out that social progress is to be estimated by the general happiness of the people, as a whole, rather than by the wealth of certain classes and the magnitude of the armics which are ready to take the field. Judged by this test he declines to admit that Europe can teach India any lesson. "There is," he affirmed the other day in a speech at Hyderabad, "the appearance"—he might, perhaps have gone further and said that there is often the bitter reality—"of a poverty more pinching and of a misery more distressing in a single quarter of London than could be found in all the Deccan—yes, I believe, I might safely say more than in all India." And he very pertinently added that in India the poorest man can enjoy the sunshine, while in England the richest cannot buy happiness, where for weeks together the sun is never seen. This expresses in a striking form the difference between the lot of the poor in India and of the corresponding class in England. The sun gives to the Indian ryot a contribution in lieu of the clothes and fuel which the English labourer must procure or die. The Nawab very fairly strengthens his argument by pointing to the fact that while many Englishmen are content to spend their best years in India, not one of the Indian race would be able to endure any long sojourn in England. He was struck with the fact that both on the Continent and England the masses of the people are less contented because they are less happy than in India, and their discontent admits of no remedy. This is not the language of a detractor, for the Nawab is enthusiastic in his recognition of the power of England and grateful for the fact that her strength shields India not only from danger of internal commotion, but from the volcanic disturbances which everyone dreads from month to month in Europe, where all the great States are armed in anticipation of attack from within or without. On the whole Mehdi Ali sees that there is some reason to be satisfied that in India if there be a great deal to do a great deal has been done, and that this country is far from being in the evil plight which certain politicians profess to believe.

THE HYPOCRISY OF MANCHESTER.

(Bombay Gazette.)

We all know what "Brummagem" means, but the word will transfer its significance if Manchester should be persuaded to associate itself with hypocrisy, insincerity, and humbug. A few more such resolutions as that lately passed by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on the Factory law in India, and a city whose name used to be synonymous with all that is robust and straightforward, will come to be looked upon as the home of the shams and unrealities for which a name has been borrowed from Birmingham. Perhaps if the Manchester Chamber of Commerce had been guided by the local Press it would have avoided making so discreditable an exhibition of itself. The Lancashire Press has never concealed the fact that Lancashire views on this matter were biased by considerations of self-interest. . . . To those of us who are living on the spot, and who know what the conditions of Indian mill life are, it must seem astonishing that an intelligent Englishman should have given so utterly unreal an account of the matter as that with which Mr. Fielden endeavoured to support his resolution. The assertion, for instance, that there is no day of rest for the Indian toiler utterly misrepresents the actual state of the case. The day of rest is irregular, but it comes with every religious festival of importance, and above and beyond this there is the frequent sojourn which the Bombay mill hand makes in his village in the Deccan or the Concan. Mr. Fielden quite superfluously insisted upon the "physiological reasons for periodical rest." Had he come to Bombay seeking for guidance on this subject he would have heard of a periodical rest enjoyed by our mill operatives, of which Lancashire factory workers and even Lancashire millowners have no conception. The Chamber, we suppose, is well-to-do, and it might have done worse than send one of its members to find out for himself on the spot what this eighty hours a week means. The resolution of the Manchester Chamber is not more insincere than it is impracticable. They ask for a bodily transfer to the Indian Statute Book of the provisions of the British Factory Acts which relate to the employment of women, young persons, and children. No one acquainted with the habits and characteristics of the people of this country would have made such a suggestion. Here, where childhood ceases early and physical development goes on with a rapidity unknown in Europe, the age provisions of the English Act would be entirely inapplicable. Practically the acceptance of the Manchester resolution would lead to the subjection of a large percentage of the most efficient of our adult male labour to protection which the English legislature has deemed to be necessary only for women and children. Those portions of the English Act which would be applicable to our Indian mills, and would be of value here, have altogether escaped the notice of the Manchester Chamber. If Manchester wants to see our mills in ruins and our bazaars busily engaged in the distribution of Manchester goods, we may take leave of one of the most transparent hypocrisies of which commercial history has ever borne record.

THE EFFECT OF THE CURRENCY REPORT.

(Statesman.)

It would be unwise to speak too confidently of the results which the Currency Report may be expected to produce; but there is no reason why we should not congratulate those classes amongst us who are largely interested in the restoration of the rupee to its normal and proper value on the publication and the nature of the Report. We have never believed that the depreciation of its value would be more than temporary. The mistake made by the Government was permitting any depreciation to take place at all, when it had half-a-dozen simple means at its disposal for maintaining the normal value of the standard. What was really wanted was the ability to discern these means, and the courage to adopt them, by provisional legislation on the subject. The historian will ask how it was that the Indian rupee fluctuated so incessantly in value for years, and was at last driven down to the exchange value of 1s. 4d., while the silver dollar of America maintained its normal ratio of value to gold. He will inquire with still greater surprise, how it was that the English shilling maintained its standard value throughout these fluctuations in the market price of silver. The answer he will find to be the same in both cases. The statesmen of America had the wisdom to adopt provisional legislation on the subject, under which what is practically a seignorage of 25 to 30 per cent. is levied upon the coinage of silver, as an act of necessary justice to all classes. By the simple device of levying the seignorage upon a sliding scale—determined by the daily market price of silver at New York and San Francisco—Congress made it impossible for the value either of the gold or silver dollar to rise above its normal ratio to the other, the result being that it was a matter of indifference to all classes in the States, in which metal of the two they received or made payment.

What is so deeply irritating to men in India is the fact that the silver currency of the mother country has been protected throughout by the very same means as the Bland Act, without our Home statesmen being even aware of the fact. For under the currency law at home, silver is coined by the State only. In other words, it is a monopoly of the State. The device by which the silver coinage in England was reduced to the position of a token currency, was simply a Bland Act, under which our own statesmen, without knowing that they were doing so, have been levying a seignorage on silver under a sliding scale that unconsciously rose in their hands to 33 per cent. The fact that ministry after ministry was doing so unconsciously, does not alter the case. It is the statement of simple fact that, while forbidding the Government of India to adopt the same device as a provisional protection for the Indian rupee, they have gone on coining silver in any quantity that the Master of the Mint deemed necessary, at a seignorage of 30 per cent., while loftily scorning the suggestion that the same device was all that was necessary to rescue India from the embarrassment, and losses, it was suffering from their withholding this remedy therefrom, although it was asked for—provisionally only. Our purpose in writing this article, however, is to point out to such of our readers as are materially interested in the question, that the publication of this currency report will mark the lowest point of the long fall in the value of silver, and that we may reasonably now expect to see the metal recover its former ratio of value to gold. No international ratio of value is possible, but the old normal one of 15 or 15½ to 1. It is part of the wrong which the inaction of the Government has done to India, that the creditor class of the community must now expect to have the tables turned upon them. For the last thirteen years, it has been the debtor class that has been victimized by the incapacity of the Government. The same incapacity will now of necessity injure the creditor classes, who have for so long a period profited by the Government weakly permitting the scales to be falsely weighted, against the debtor class. It is but a rude sort of justice that will now ensue, and we know no remedy for it.

We advise, therefore, such of our readers as are materially interested in the matter, to weigh carefully what we now tell them. We say plainly, then, that we believe no ratio of value between the two metals is possible, but the old normal ratio of 15 or 16 to 1. It must be remembered that this ratio has been preserved all through, in other countries, by wise provisional legislation, and that even in England itself, our statesmen have unconsciously saved the silver shilling by the same means. It is in India only, that the ratio has been allowed to fall from 15 to 1 to 20 to 1. The Commissioners advise the Government to accept the American proposal of International action in the matter, but it is certain, we believe, that neither America, nor any of the European States, will consent to alter the ratio because we have failed to preserve it in India. Nor is it reasonable to expect them to do so, when even in England itself, the normal ratio has been maintained. Whatever inconvenience we may suffer, in bringing the Indian rupee back to its old normal value, has been brought upon us by our own strange want of insight and contemptuous disregard of the counsels of other nations. It will not be very long, we believe, before the rupee is back at its old value. The change cannot, of course, be made suddenly, but the national statesmanship must be very poor, if it cannot devise some means by which the restoration can be effected, with a minimum of loss to the classes whom the change will injuriously affect. Our Exchange banks and merchants can look after themselves, but it may save less-informed classes from serious loss if they remember to act upon the conviction that the Indian rupee will certainly regain its former value at no very distant date. The general effect of the change will be that all those persons in India who owe money in England, or have frequent remittances to make thereto, will find that, as the exchange rises, they will be able to discharge these home liabilities that they are under with fewer rupees than now. On the other hand, we think we may safely advise all those amongst us who have money owing to them in England, or property there which they can convert into gold, to do so at once, as they will now get a larger number of rupees for what is owing to them there than they can reasonably expect to get when the rupee becomes more valuable in exchange. Again, those persons who are owing money to England, and have the option of deferring payment thereof, should wait for the rupee to rise in value before discharging their debt. These dicta are of course simple, if not common-place, but they may be of value to some of our readers not versed in finance matters, and we therefore throw them out.

SOME ANGLO-INDIAN WIVES.—I.

BY SOME OF THEM.

(Pioneer.)

A writer in St. James's Gazette has brought upon himself a severe rebuke from "Anglo-Indian." He has been making remarks from the quarterdeck of a P. and O. that are not complimentary to "Anglo-Indian's" countrywomen. This was very wrong and very rude of him no doubt, and, viewed from "Anglo-Indian's" point of view, very unjust. Home truths are often rude, and it is always unjust to condemn a whole class for the faults of the few. Nevertheless I trust the St. James's will take heart and not be afraid to deal a few more blows at such Anglo-Indian women as he describes. That he should have struck all, his aiming at the many is a mere accident. If a doctor bungles at his work does not everyone rail against "those wretched doctors?" If a judge administers justice instead of the law, does not every lawyer declare that "these judges know nothing of the law?" If a woman makes a mistake, do not her male relations immediately exclaim about "you women?" Yet everyone knows that there are doctors who never bungle at their work, judges who are innocent of trying to administer justice, and women who are much too good to be included in the sweeping condemnation expressed in the terms "you women!"

The good women who were doubtless on board the St. James's P. and O. evidently did not attract his attention, but the reprobates were photographed on his brain. Perhaps his voyage on that P. and O. was his first experience of this description of reprobate, and like an honest man he speaks his mind, and condemns that which is certainly deserving of condemnation. My first experience of the class of Anglo-Indian women who have excited his indignation was also photographed on my brain, but the hundreds of good and true wives and mothers who have crossed my path since then have left no such lasting impression.

The Planet was not a large steamer, but there were passengers enough on board to supply the usual number of heart-rending scenes—many of them too real to be lightly spoken of: mothers parting from their children, wives from their husbands, true and loving hearts breaking at a separation that was endured only because it was inevitable. Other partings there were, very touching at the time, that acquired a strong touch of the ludicrous when viewed from the distance of a few days; notably the parting between two of the St. James's bête noirs and their husbands. Poor things! they were both young and good-looking, but neither of them rejoiced in a sufficiently sallow complexion to merit his description or to excite the pity of the fellow-passengers to whom they confided the sad fact that they were compelled to go home, as their health had given way completely, and they had barely escaped with their lives. It was affecting to see them cling with frantic energy to the partners of their Indian existence. Salt tears dimmed the brightness of their eyes and effaced all traces of beauty from their woe-begone faces. The parting over, they retired to indulge their grief in private, and I saw them no more for many days.

Sea-sickness is an obstacle to observation, but when the anchor drops one wakes as from a nightmare, and looks around. As the anchor dropped at Colombo my eyes were opened. The fortunate non-sufferers had doubtless been let down more gently, but I felt the full force of the shock when I beheld the inconsolables descend the side of the steamers, daintily attired, bestowing sweet smiles and tender glances on (forgive me, "Anglo-Indian;" the truth must be told)—on two attendant swains. The inconsolables were consoled! No. 1. was hurrying ashore with tender haste to send a loving telegram to her deserted husband, and perhaps the good-looking young doctor who accompanied her thought it unsafe to let her go alone; she might faint over it; it must have been a very long one—at least, it took them a long time to send it. No. 2. needed no excuse, and gave none; she intended to enjoy herself.

Again the obstacle to observation hid everyone from my view. At last the blessed stillness of the Canal enabled me to find my feet and bestow a little attention on things in general, instead of on myself and my family alone. I was carried captive to the upper deck and called upon to fulfil a promise to read a new book of nursery songs and rhymes to a group of eager little listeners. Finding as I thought, a quiet nook, free from intruders, I began to read.

Why did I not look behind the big wheel before I sat down? It was fate—it must have been fate, or why should I have neglected to look behind that wheel, and why should I have opened that book at the tale of the "Turtle Doves?"

"Coo," said the Turtle Dove, "I love you."

"Coo," said the Turtle Dove, "and I love you"—

There was an impatient shuffle, a rustle of female garments, the sound of a man's footsteps retreating rapidly down the small ladder that led to the lower deck, and consoled Inconsolable No. 1 swept indignantly past me and my small flock. Our Turtle Doves had disturbed another pair.

A lovely night. Oh! blessed calm. Oh! thrice welcome lakes, where we found a respite from that wretched obstacle to observation. The decks were flooded with the soft light of a tender young moon—the very time, the very place for love-making and romance.

"Will you come on the upper deck with me?" asked consoled Inconsolable No. 2, softly, looking at me with candid eyes—what bitter tears those eyes had shed at Garden Reach; how truthful and sweet they looked as she laid her hand on my arm, and gently urged me towards the steps. "I want you so much."

It is flattering for the middle-aged to be wanted by the young. My heart warmed towards her. No doubt she was feeling sad and lonely; the lonely moonlight recalled tender scenes to her mind, and she wanted to talk to someone who would listen patiently to her fond recollections of bygone days when her husband was by her side. The many good and gentle women on board had failed to win her confidence. No doubt they were too much occupied with their own troubles, or in taking care of their children. It was natural she should seek for sympathy from someone, and the fact of her seeking it from me showed very plainly that the malicious remarks concerning her and Mr. W— were without foundation. He would have been only too glad to go on the upper deck with her.

"I want to sit up there with Mr. W—," she whispered softly, as a tall figure stole quietly towards us, "and if we go alone people will talk so. Do come and play gooseberry for us."

"Yes, do come," urged Mr. W—, "you can go to sleep in Mrs. Smith's nice easy-chair."

"You don't mind, do you?" said Mrs. L—. How pretty she looked—how innocent.

"Oh, dear, I don't mind in the least, but how about Mr. L—? Does he like moonlight flirtations and sleeping gooseberries; if you are quite sure he would not mind —"

They were gone, and she never asked me to play gooseberry again.

II.

We deteriorate in India! Not a bit of it. To begin with, look at the fuss they make over us when we go home! Look how we are received with open arms by our various sisters and brothers, cousins and aunts. For months beforehand they talk about us as "coming home;" and when we do arrive we are quite the heroines of the hour. True, for the first fortnight after our arrival, we generally have to remain perdue, and only venture out in the seclusion of a closed carriage or four-wheeler to our dressmaker's and home again; but after that we emerge as butterflies, and we are more thought of than ever. Certainly, our immediate relations at home don't think we deteriorate in India, whatever may be the opinion of the general public. Then, out in this country, I should like to know what Indian society would do without us. It would be a very lively state of affairs if we took to shutting ourselves up, and only going for long solitary walks with our husbands instead of mixing with the rest of the world as we do now. What would all the poor bachelors do if there were no recherché little dinners for them to be asked to? What would become of all the love-sick youths if there were no energetic young wives to chaperone their respective young ladies to picnics and riding parties? Who would get up all the subscription dances for the young people if we were to retire from the scene? And what about amateur theatricals in this country if all the married ladies refused to act?

Then as regards our husbands (my husband's name is Jim). At first Jim did not like my giving such a number of dinner parties and picnic parties, and grumbled at the expense. But I very soon put an end to that. I put it before him that twenty years hence it would be quite time enough for us to retire into our arm-chairs with our toes in the fender and become old fogeys. And now Jim quite agrees with me, and enjoys his pool and billiards just as much as I do my dinners and picnics. Then about the balls and dances. Wives at home would dance just as much as we do if they had the chance. Out here we all subscribe liberally to public entertainments, and not only subscribe but go. At home "Society" does not approve of subscription dances as a rule, and very seldom goes to them. Jim did not like the balls at first either; but with him it was nothing but laziness and an absurd disinclination for turning out after dinner. I told him it would do him such a lot of good and would prevent his growing fat; but even that did not prevent him grumbling the whole way, and declaring he would rather pay twice to stay away. Jim cannot dance at all. We tried it once together, but he squeezed me so unmercifully in the effort to get me round that I barely had sufficient breath left to gasp out: "Hold me looser." Then he said "Don't nag," and stopped. He has never tried to dance since. Now-a-days, as soon as the dance begins, Jim disappears with two or three chosen friends into the whist-room, and I don't see him again until supper time, when he always looks supremely happy and not in the least anxious to go home.

Then as regards flirting. I am quite sure that we don't flirt a bit more out here than they do at home. Here all our flirtation is carried on at the "Club" or "Assembly Rooms" in the most open way possible; whereas at home the wives make their husbands get up select little shooting-parties and flirt away to their heart's content, without any outsiders being a bit the wiser. Then they accuse us of having bachelors to breakfast, bachelors to lunch, and bachelors to dinner. Our having guests into breakfast is what excites the non-Anglo-Indian lady more than anything. Ladies at home so seldom ride before breakfast, and they cannot understand the simple process of meeting a friend while out and bringing him back to the house at such an early hour. Then they declare (that we do nothing the whole morning, and that our visitors begin calling at twelve. But nobody can say that the visiting between twelve and one is any fault of ours; everybody knows that this is an Indian custom of many years' standing, and that when you are in Rome you must do as the Romans do. Supposing now it were possible for two or three gigantic ships to be built, and all the wives from every part of India were to make common cause and sail away together! What would be the state of affairs in Indian Society then? Think of the disconsolate bachelors condemned to dine every night at mess, volens volens. And, above all, think of the poor husbands!

Take Jim for an example. What would happen to poor Jim if I sailed away for two or three years? First and foremost he would have to go back to his mess, and not only turn out after dinner but before dinner too. Then he would have a grand fight with his bearer for charging double for everything; and ditto with the dhobi for cutting the name out of his silk pocket-handkerchiefs. And the bachelors? There would be rows upon rows of them sitting mournfully at mess, with nothing but the past to think of and the wives of India, both gone away together. No more cheery little Sunday dinners at Mrs. M's; no more rides got up for the young people; no more jolly picnic parties in the hills. And what would be the result? Why, general deterioration of course! But not on the part of the wives, only on the part of the husbands and bachelors, left to sigh for bygone days. And the wives? No doubt we should all be having a very lively time of it on board; but nevertheless we should be received with open arms and made much of on arrival, and we should prepare to make a long stay at home and—"What are you talking about, Jim? That you would fetch me out again by return mail? Well, I only agree to that on one condition; and that is that you contradict flatly the next person you hear saying that we wives deteriorate in India?" F. B.

THE VICEROY'S TASK.

(Indian Spectator.)

In welcoming the Viceroy-elect and Lady Lansdowne to India we can wish them no better than that they may realise in time the enormous difficulties of their position, and that they may be judged with sympathy and forbearance as human agents, with all their imperfections. There is hardly any position of trust in the world so difficult to fill as that of the servant of the British Crown and the agent of the British Ministry presiding over the destinies of a sixth of the human race. In India the office of the Viceroy and Governor-General may seem to be exalted enough to turn the head of a Napoleon. But the honours of the office are as nothing, compared with its responsibilities. The task of governing two hundred millions of races and creeds, as differing from one's own as from each other, of holding them in peace and contentment, and of rendering a weekly account of one's stewardship to a multitude of authorities—this is a work to which the Autocrat of Russia or the President of the United States would be loth to aspire. The task of the present ruler of India is, indeed, more difficult than that of his earlier predecessors, considering the state of public opinion in this country, of its finance and its foreign complications; considering, too, the exigencies of party government in England. And in five years the newcomer is expected to go through work which a lifetime would be all too short to devote to. Three out of the five years, if not more, he has generally to give to acquiring the details of administration, and just as he is beginning to feel confident he feels the reins of government slipping through his fingers. Altogether, the prospects are anything but assuring, and nothing but faith in Providence and a stern sense of duty could induce any English statesman worthy of the name to take upon himself the task of governing this vast continent. The utmost he could do for himself is to make the best of his position. The utmost he could do for others is to attempt the greatest happiness of the greatest number. These have become the essential conditions of British Rule in India. We hope the Marquis of Lansdowne recognises them, and that he will never allow himself to be guided by any but the legitimate ambition of doing good to his fellow-creatures, even as promised by our Gracious Sovereign. His work lies more at home than abroad. Financially and otherwise, India wants breathing time. She must recover her breath if a sudden collapse is to be averted. Lord Lansdowne was described to us about the time of his appointment, by one who knew him well, and whom we have mourned all these months, as "wise and fair-minded." This description covers almost everything that could be reasonably expected in a Viceroy of our own times. As to the Marchioness, she has splendid work ready to hand, peculiarly suited to her sex and her position, such as falls to the lot of few, even to the crowned heads of Europe. May she find herself equal to it in all ways.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

MAJOR GEORGE BROADFOOT.*

Major George Broadfoot was a good and gallant officer of the old East India Company Service, who fell at the battle of Ferozshah on the 21st of December, 1845, the last of three brothers who died for their country on the battle-fields of Asia. He died young, being only in his thirty-ninth year when the fatal shot which laid him low (the second he had received in that day's action) struck him to the heart as he was riding beside the Governor-General, Sir Henry Hardinge, to whose staff he was that day attached. In communicating the intelligence of the death of this brave and valuable officer to the Secret Committee of the East India Company, Sir Henry Hardinge wrote:—"I entertained the highest opinion of his abilities. He was second to none in this accomplished service; in every qualification by which the political or military interests of the East India Company could be advanced."

There is nothing of superfluous eulogy in this. Broadfoot's merits as a political and a soldier had been long recognised and acknowledged in public documents. Born in 1807, he obtained a cadetship in the 34th Madras Native Infantry in 1825, and after seven years' service in India, he was allowed leave to England for the unusually long period of five years, during which time he prosecuted studies in connection with his profession during travels in France, Germany, and Italy. He was an ardent and enthusiastic soldier, and nothing, perhaps, could give a better insight into his ideas of a soldier's duty than his remarks when remonstrated with for overworking, and told that his health would suffer. "Well enough to be food for powder, or to lead a company properly into action; but to command an army, to have the lives of other men dependent on you, is another sort of affair, and requires a different preparation. In India, when an emergency arises—and sooner or later it will arise—the men fit to meet it will be found out and brought to the front. No man can say what the work may be; to raise, organise, and command an army—to arrange a question of diplomacy, or to direct and assist in the Civil administration of a province. Hence the importance of being prepared."

* "The Career of Major George Broadfoot, C.B. (Governor-General's Agent N.W. Frontier, 1844-5), in Afghanistan and the Punjab." Compiled from his Papers and those of Lords Ellenborough and Hardinge. By Major W. Broadfoot. With portrait and maps. (John Murray.)

This definition of the possible duties of an Indian officer was not unrecognised by the authorities, for within six years after his return to India Broadfoot was called upon to raise and command a regiment of sappers; to fortify Jálálábád as garrison engineer; to reform the civil administration of the Tenasserim Provinces; and to conduct the diplomatic relations between the Government of India and the Punjab. He was fortunate at a very early period of his career to gain the notice and the friendship of Lord Ellenborough, and he enjoyed the confidence and friendship of Sir Henry Hardinge, to the hour that he fell on the field of battle. If to any soldier of those stirring times in India the Greek aphorism could be applied, "Call no man happy before his death"—it was not to George Broadfoot. He was basking in the sunshine of official approval, political and military, and would have been advanced to higher honours but for the Sikh bullet which cut short his career of further promise. It may be asked, therefore, why, upwards of forty years after his death, this book has been published? Broadfoot's memory did not suffer at the hands of the public or those of his friends, for besides the powerful friends he had at headquarters, he enjoyed the friendship of such men as the late Sir Henry Havelock, Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Vincent Eyre, Colin MacKenzie, and others. But it would seem to be the idea of some of his relatives or connections that in some way or another he was not done full justice to, especially in that part of his service when he rendered such valuable aid as one of the "illustrious" garrison of Jálálábád. Consequently private papers and diaries have been ransacked, and extracts given from them, heedless of what pain their publication may bring to others who cherish memories of their dead not less dearly than the friends of Major Broadfoot. Burnes, Macnaughten and others committed errors in that dire Afghanistan disaster for which they paid the penalty of their lives, but they should be allowed to rest now in peace in their not altogether dishonoured graves. Divided counsels may have jeopardised the garrison of Jálálábád, and Broadfoot's advice may have been the wisest tendered; but why should the memory of Sale, Dennie, and others be maligned because they did not at the moment accept that advice? So far as can be gathered from the context Broadfoot did not think that his services were sufficiently recognised in the defence of the city. "To Sir R. Sale, to his staff and to his regiment fell the chief rewards, and glory of the defence of Jálálábád." At this lapse of time such criticism is carping and out of place, but it strengthens the argument which we advanced when noticing the "Life of Sir Charles Magregor," that biographies of distinguished men should be written by stronger and more independent hands than those of near relations.

Nevertheless, there is much in the volume under review to commend it to the reader, for it throws some new gleams of historic light on certain dark passages in the troubled history of the Punjab during the time when Major George Broadfoot acted as Governor-General's Agent of the N.W. Frontier. It also gives, in some letters from the late Sir Henry Havelock, some interesting glimpses of character. Here is one concerning a report which had got abroad that there was a prejudice in high military quarters against Havelock on account of his religious opinions. He writes to Broadfoot:—"Old Willoughby, Cotton, and others, used to tell me that it was believed at the Horse Guards and other quarters that I professed to fear God as well as honour the Queen, and that Lord Hill and sundry other wise persons had made up their minds that no man could at once be a saint and a soldier. Now I dare say such great authorities must be right, notwithstanding the examples of Colonel Gardiner, and Cromwell, and Gustavus Adolphus (all that I can think of just now); but, if so, all I can say is that their bit of red ribbon (the Companionship of the Bath) was very ill bestowed upon me; for I humbly trust that in that great matter I should not change my opinions and practice, though it rained garters and coronets as the rewards of apostasy."

There are passages touching upon the characteristics of other eminent political and soldiers in those troubled times which gave so many noble names to the roll of England's Indian heroes, and these passages will have a charm for all readers of the volume to-day.

"The Captain of the Wight. A Romance of Carisbrooke Castle in 1488." By Frank Cowper, M.A. With illustrations by the Author. (Seeley and Co.) Mr. Cowper is already known to the public as the author of "Caedwalla, or the Saxons in the Isle of Wight." This is a story mainly written for the young, but gives much information about a romantic episode in our national history when Sir Edward Woodville, commonly called Lord Woodville, was "Lord and Captain of the Isle of Wight." "Noble and courageous," "Hardie and valiant," "A valiant gentleman and desirous of honour," who died upon the field of battle, valiantly fighting in the fatal expedition to Brittany in the reign of Henry VII., of England. The story is well told, and is also well illustrated by the Author himself.

"In his Name. A Story of the Waldenses 700 Years Ago." By Edward E. Hale. With many illustrations by G. P. Jacobbe Hood. (Seeley and Co.) There is an introductory by A. P. Peabody, dated, however, January 26th, 1874, in which he says, "I have never read anything better. It renewed, though with a far higher consecration, the intense feeling with which I read Dickens's first and last Christmas Story. You have not only performed the higher office of a spiritual teacher, entering into the inmost heart of the Divine Teacher, but, you have succeeded in the lower yet more difficult task of fidelity to the date and scene of your story. I could not detect a single anachronism." Mr. Peabody's praise of this work is high, but it is deserved. The story of the Waldenses has always been a thrilling one; and although often told, the readers of Mr. Hale's little book will find that it bears telling again, and loses nothing of freshness or interest at his hands.

"Nor'ard of the Dogger: being the Story of the Initiation, Struggles, and Successes of the Mission to Deep-Sea Fishermen." By E. J. Mather. With illustrations by J. R. Wells and C. J. Staniland. Thirteenth thousand. (James Nisbet and Co.) We have spoken of this book before, for it is not a new issue. But that the subject of which it treats has interest absorbing and abiding amongst Englishmen and women is patent from the fact that the present issue bears on its title-page thirteenth thousand. This unpretending volume tells of good deeds attempted and done under difficulties of no common character. It tells of triumphs which Christian love and labour have won amongst a class—the deep-sea fishermen—too little cared for by others, and it records its "victories of peace" in pleasant, modest phrase, in which cant has no part.

"Cassell's New Popular Educator," Part I., is an old friend with a new face. In the present edition the publishers have spared no pains or expense to keep up the well deserved popularity of this excellent serial.

The National Review (W. H. Allen and Co.) for January is a great improvement in the way of interesting articles than its predecessor for the month of December. "The European Outlook for 1889" is a thoughtful and able paper. "Islam as a Political System" is dealt with in a masterly manner by A. T. Sibbald, and Mr. Demetrius Boulger discusses forcibly on "The Value of the Chinese Alliance," a subject in which he is thoroughly at home. "The Higher Education of Women" is another article in this number which will well repay perusal.

THE LATE MR. DALGLEISH.—We had occasion to notice recently the interesting memorial of Mr. Dalgleish's melancholy death, brought back by M. Dauvergne. It seems that that gentleman, before he left the scene of Dalgleish's murder, gathered his servants together and, placing an upright stick in the ground with a piece of cloth attached, on the spot where the crime was committed, made them pile around it a pyramid of stones. The Lahore paper alluding to this says:—"We would ask, however, if this is all that is to mark the spot where one of our best and bravest pioneers sacrificed his life! Dalgleish did wonders for the English namethroughall that wild country and policy, to say nothing of gratitude, should cause the Indian Government to identify themselves with his loved memory by a lasting memorial and inscription on the spot. If the Government should neglect the opportunity, sufficient money for the purpose of erecting a simple inscribed slab of stone should easily be contributed by those who value British pluck, who honour Dalgleish's memory, and would perpetuate the kindly memories which he has left behind him in Central Asia."

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigny's MEDICATED PUMILINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance. Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d. ? Every man and woman suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1888.

INDIA IN 1888.

THE closing of the year was a fortunate and an unfortunate time for the Native Congress to hold its late sittings. Fortunate in this respect, that it being holiday time in England, and the newspapers here having no Parliamentary debates to report, or any very special sensational news to chronicle, ample space was found for the detailed telegrams sent through Reuter of the doings and sayings of the meetings held at Allahabad. But unfortunate in this respect, that at this time, when standing on the threshold of a new year, it is the special habit of many journalists to offer their readers a political and social retrospect of the past twelve months, and to strike a sort of balance between the good and evil done—the progress lost or gained. The habit is a very favourite one with Indian journalists, and it is unfortunate for the Congress agitators and grievance-mongers that the retrospect, so far as India is concerned, is one which must give every true friend of that country the deepest satisfaction at progress made in the past, auguring brighter hopes of progress in the future. But thirty years ago India, from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin, was prostrate from the throes of a Mutiny which spread distrust and dismay in every direction, and which loosened to the last strain any hold that England might have hoped she had on the good-will or confidence of the Natives. Thirty years in the life of a nation is but as the falling of a grain of sand through an hour-glass; and, yet, in thirty years India to-day has become revived, restored, loyal, happy, and contented under British rule. English statesmen and councillors, judicial and executive officers, merchants and traders, sailors and soldiers, have all in their respective ways worked in unison to keep up the good name of their country in the East, and to make British rule a synonym for justice and equity, and to win a respect for it that should be born of confidence—not of fear. That there have been some failures and several shortcomings in attempts to reach this standard means only that to err is human. But when all the shortcomings and failures have been admitted, there is a mighty mass of evidence to which Englishmen can point to show what a triumph justice, truth and moderation have accomplished for India under British rule to-day.

The Native Congress has met and had its say. Lip loyalty, so common with intriguers in Eastern lands, was plentiful enough; but we learn from the telegram of the Times correspondent this morning that the agitators declined to condemn the dissemination of seditious and inflammatory pamphlets and leaflets; and that, when one speaker, Rajah Siva Prasad, rose to protest against such dissemination, he was groaned down and forced to leave the platform. Native-like, the succeeding speaker, after making a sneering allusion to Sir Auckland Colvin and Lord Dufferin, insinuated that the Rajah Siva Prasad's protest against sedition had been actuated by a desire to secure a decoration from the Government. The same correspondent adds that, "save for occasional instances of personal abuse, the whole proceedings have fallen rather flat." This was only to be expected. The meetings have served their purpose of airing much Babú oratory, and of getting rid of some high pressure sentiments, which the utterers of them pretend to mistake for patriotism.

That an ex-President of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce and an ex-Bengal Civilian should throw their lot in with the discontented may occasion some surprise to Englishmen who do not know Mr. George Yule and Mr. A. O. Hume; it occasions no surprise to those who do. But so far as the charges against British rule are concerned, it is well to know that they are unfounded and untrue. The Star of India to-day is truly the Star of Hope, and the old year's shadows which are lengthening to-night but foretell the dawn of brighter and happier years for India and her peoples under British sway.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 11.)

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma arrived in Calcutta on the 3rd inst.

THE annual Turf Club Dinner was to take place at Calcutta on the 26th inst., and the annual Civil Service Dinner on the 29th.

COLONEL CONWAY-GORDON, the Director-General of Railways, has arrived in Calcutta.

MR. P. C. LYON has taken over charge of the office of Private Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal from Mr. E. G. Colvin.

LORD LANSDOWNE's Levée was to be held on Monday, the 17th inst., and the Drawing-Room on Thursday, the 20th inst. Trains are not to be worn on the occasion.

A RESOLUTION has been passed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce giving the Committee of the Chamber power to declare holidays under shipping orders and charter-parties. This will put an end to frequent disputes.

THE vast amount of good diffused among the general community by the Calcutta hospitals may be estimated from the fact that last year the number of patients amounted to 263,849. It was noticeable that, while the death-rate in the town has slightly diminished, the attendance at the hospitals has increased. From this it may be inferred that skilled medical attendance and admirable management are bearing down the resistance of caste rules and popular prejudice.

MADRAS.

(Dec. 12.)

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT leaves Madras for Bangalore on the 23rd. He will reside in camp at Bangalore for three weeks.

SIR HARRY and the two Misses Prendergast, who have been staying with Lord Connemara for the past week, have left for Bangalore.

CAPTAIN WYNDHAM QUIN, Aide-de-Camp to Lord Connemara, and Lady Eva Wyndham Quin have left for Calcutta and the North-West Provinces.

THE Earl and Countess of Jersey, who have been staying with the Governor, will leave on Wednesday for Tanjore and Madura, returning afterwards to Madras, en route to Calcutta.

ON the 3rd inst. his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of Madras, accompanied by an A.D.C., visited the Gun Carriage Factory, where he was met by Brigadier-General McLeod, the Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines, his deputy, Colonel Brereton, and Captain Townsend, the Superintendent of the Factory, and conducted through the whole yard, where he spent an hour in visiting the various machine sheds. His Excellency paid particular attention to the equipment (carriages and limbers), the first of its kind to be turned out locally for the 12-inch breech-loader guns, and with which the field batteries are in future to be supplied.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Dec. 12.)

THE death is announced, from cholera, of Dr. R. J. Polden, Civil Surgeon of Tipperah, one of the most distinguished and rising doctors of the Indian Medical Service.

COLONEL J. P. STEELE, R.E., has returned from leave, and taken up his new substantive appointment of Chief Engineer and Secretary to the D.P.W. of the North-West Provinces.

CAPTAIN F. C. CHAPMAN, a well-known landowner of North-West Provinces, has addressed a letter to his non-official countrymen on the subject of forming a non-official league at the end of the current relief season about April next.

AT Partabgarh the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces received two addresses, one from the Taluqdars of the district and the other from the Municipal Board. In the former the following paragraph occur:—"We are conscious of the advantages that accrue to the country from the occasional personal inspections of the head of the Government, and we are, therefore, grateful to your Honour for having, for the first time, introduced the system of an annual tour throughout the Province. We are highly thankful to your Honour for ordering the extension of the telegraphic communication to our district. We would respectfully beg your Honour to graciously provide us with railway communication as well. In the entire Province of Oudh the Rae-Bareilly Division is the only bad kismet, kismet, which stands devoid of railway communication with the world outside. It is a well-known fact that Rae-Bareilly is the seat of not only the Appellate Courts of the Civil, Criminal, and Revenue Departments, but also of the principal original Civil Court of this district; but it is matter of regret that no metalled road exists between the two places."

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 14.)

THE granting of one year's furlough on medical certificate to Mr. J. McLeod Campbell, C.S., is gazetted. He died a fortnight back.

COLONEL C. WODEHOUSE, C.I.E., Acting Political Agent, Kolhapore and Southern Mahratta Country, has been granted privilege leave for three months.

COLONEL A. M. PHILLIPS has been appointed Political Superintendent and Commandant of the Local Corps, Savantwadi, vice Colonel G. R. C. Westropp, retiring.

THE Honourable Mr. Kashinath Trimbak Telang, M.A., LL.B., C.I.E., has been appointed Government Professor of Law, vice Mr. E. T. Leith, LL.M., resigned.

MR. W. LEE-WARNER, C.S., Secretary to Government, Political Department, who accompanied H.E. Lord Lansdowne to Burhampore on Dec. 6, has returned to Bombay.

CAPTAIN C. F. HARRISON, 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment, has been appointed Adjutant of the 1st Battalion B. B. and C. I. Railway Volunteer Corps, vice Lieutenant C. R. Mallaby, resigned.

CAPTAIN L. L. FENTON, Staff Corps, Assistant Superintendent, Revenue Survey, Southern Mahratta Country (Acting Assistant Political Agent, Kattywar), has been granted four months' leave to Europe on private affairs.

MR. L. R. W. FORREST, having returned to Bombay, has resumed charge of the office of honorary secretary of the Endowment Fund of the European General Hospital, the duties of which were performed during his absence by Mr. C. E. Kane.

DURING the past week a number of thefts and burglaries have taken place at Poona. Colonel Beecher, Equerry to H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, has been the last victim. On Friday night his cash-box, containing Rs. 100, a gold ring, and private papers, were stolen. The same night three further daring thefts are reported to have been committed.

MAJOR LEBRETON, the Examiner of Public Works Accounts, has introduced a new system of auditing accounts in that department, and a committee, consisting of Mr. T. D. Little, M.I.C.E., Superintendent Engineer, N.D., Khan Bahadoor M. C. Murzban, A.M.I.C.E., Executive Engineer, Presidency, and Mr. Lund, Deputy of Public Works Accounts, have been appointed by Government to report on the new system of accounts, and how it could be extended so as to reduce clerical and audit work.

NATIVE PRESS.

LORD DUFFERIN'S SPEECH AND THE NATIVE PRESS.

(Translated from the Englishman.)

A DISAGREEABLE SHOCK.

The Scotchmen of Calcutta held a dinner on Friday last in honour of St. Andrew's. Lord Dufferin was invited on the occasion. After the dinner was over several speeches were delivered. Of these the speeches made by the President, Sir A. Wilson, and Lord Dufferin were the best. Sir Alexander eulogised Lord Dufferin to the best of his abilities, and after that Lord Dufferin began to speak. We were surprised on reading that speech in Saturday's Englishman. We believed that the reporter of the Englishman might not have been able to follow the Viceroy, and that there might be mistakes in the report. After a while we opened the Daily News and the Statesman, and found our supposition to be incorrect. The publication of the speech in three newspapers as to uniformity no doubt removed our surprise, but caused our great regret for Lord Dufferin. We will not now say anything about that portion of Lord Dufferin's speech in which he has strongly supported his own administration of India. His lordship is at full liberty to support his own policy. But we say that, whatever he may observe in support of his policy, and whatever praise the Anglo-Indians may shower upon him, he will have to admit at least that the Native subjects in general are not pleased with his administration.—Sangbad Provakar.

THE JUBILEE SPEECH.

In last Friday's speech his Lordship said that he has no sympathy with the Congress, but he has shown no clear reason for entertaining this view. Only like Sir Auckland Colvin he has found fault with the publication of the "Catechism." It was on this account he wanted to show that the Government is not prepared to grant any of the prayers made by the Congress, and will not do that. Then he wanted to prove that only the educated people joined in the Congress, and that the educated classes of the country have no connection with the masses. Therefore, he said, that the prayers of the Congress cannot be listened to, so long as the men and women of India are not educated. After that he made many erroneous, worthless, and unjust assertions regarding the object of the Congress. Then he dwelt upon the prayer of the Congress, for reforms in the Legislative Council. This, he said, the Government is not prepared to grant. After that he suggested that, abandoning politics, the Congress ought to devote its whole attention to social reforms, sanitation, emigration, and technical education. Then he admitted the necessity for reforms in the police, and for the separation of the judicial functions from the executive, but that, he said, is not being done for want of money. Lord Dufferin is, of course, at liberty to change his views. But this sort of change of views is very wonderful! After speaking of the Congress in the aforesaid manner, and condemning the present aspirations of the educated classes, his Lordship said that, "I still adhere to what I stated in my Jubilee speech." What a mysterious affair! We never heard such inconsistent assertions from the mouth of any Viceroy before. We only hear this for the first time. We are not sorry for the opinion which Lord Dufferin has expressed about the Congress by changing his views. But we are sorry for the appearance he makes in the eyes of the educated classes just on the eve of his departure.—Ibid.

A MICROSCOPIC MINORITY.

We know that the Babu class is very small. But Lord Dufferin has made arrangements for strengthening that class. The Congress will not be stopped at the instance of Lord Dufferin. But the officials will have to try to stop it. Many provincial rulers are trying to do so. But will our ruler, Sir Stuart Bayley, be able to avoid that course? He is very popular. Will he be put to much inconvenience all on a sudden? We are not strong admirers of the Congress. We do not consider the Babu class as representative of the country. The more the Babu class is weakened the more, we think, the country will be benefited. But we are afraid that the opposition of the Viceroy will rather make the Babu class stronger than weaken it. The force of agitation will become more strong. Some more Anglo-Indians will join Hume and Norton's party. In England Bradlaugh and Digby's party will become more strong. Will not the problem be more difficult to officials? In his dinner speech Lord Dufferin only repeated what the Englishman and the Pioneer have so long been stating. Since the Viceroy has shown hostility towards the Congress, the Congress cannot be an insignificant thing. Will not this belief become stronger in the minds of the Babus? Lord Dufferin ought to have kept silence over the matter.—Dainik and Chandrika.

SOCIAL REFORM.

At first, in his speech at Bombay and then in the speech he delivered on the occasion of the Jubilee, Lord Dufferin in a manner encouraged the Congress. His Lordship has now interpreted the meaning of those speeches in a contrary sense. For this he is being blamed by the public. Besides, he being the Viceroy, his hostility towards the Congress has enhanced the importance of the movement. By this he has paved a way for increasing the numbers in the camp of the Babus. The Viceroy, in endeavouring to meet both ends, has acted very improperly. The Congress-wallahs were advised to take up the question of social reforms. Does it mean the abolition of child-marriage and the strengthening of Rukma's party and the promotion of widow marriage. Alien friend, better go to your country silently! There is no necessity for your giving advice. Suggestions have been made for encouraging technical education. But so long as you encourage English manufactured articles, no one, however clever he may be will be able to encourage Indian arts and manufactures. Why do you accumulate sins by holding out vain hopes? Suppose the Congress-wallahs give up politics, and combine to oppose the sale of English clothes. You, Earl of Ava, will you be able to support that? We are neither surprised at nor apprehensive of the language used by Lord Dufferin in his dinner speech. We also know very well that at the time he had no fear in his heart. But the Viceroy has acted very improperly by giving rise to fear unnecessarily. This sort of diplomacy will do no good either to the people or to the Government. It will produce an evil effect on the contrary.—Ibid.

BETRAYED BY SWEET WORDS.

St. Andrew's day is a day of great festivities with Scotchmen. On such a festive occasion the Scotchmen of Calcutta hold a dinner. This dinner was given on Friday night, and Lord Dufferin was present. After the dinner several speeches were made. Lord Dufferin made a lengthy speech on the occasion. He said a great deal about his own administration by way of explanation, and then he spoke against the Congress with great warmth. The eyes of those who were betrayed by the sweet words of Lord Dufferin will now be opened, and they will know what kind of man his Lordship is.—The Nababibhakar and Sadharani.

THE NEW VICEROY.

The Rast Gofar says:—Lord Lansdowne will set foot on these shores amidst the welcome of the people and their hearty good wishes. Our new Viceroy comes here with a full consciousness of the enormous responsibilities of his exalted office. It is an office, as Lord Dufferin may assure us any day, of hard, unrelenting toil and anxious cares, where the possibilities of failure are far greater than those of success. Both nature and favourable circumstances must combine with statesmanlike qualities for the achievement of success. Complications on the frontier, a greater fall in exchange, and, worst of all, a year or two of famine may confound all calculations, and baffle the wisdom of the best of statesmen. In circumstances like these, failure may be due to anything but the shortcomings or wickedness of the personage who is at the head of the administration. Lord Lansdowne has not behind him, like his illustrious predecessor, a brilliant rôle of past achievements to speak for him. He has, however, done enough to prove himself a valuable servant of the Crown, fully deserving of the exalted trust which is now reposed in him; and it ought to be the earnest hope of everyone of Her Majesty's subjects that a kindly Providence will help the Viceroy in all his endeavours to promote the well-being of the teeming millions of India.

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—The general public are on the tiptoe of expectation as to what will be the answer of the new Viceroy in reply to the address that will be presented by the Municipal Corporation of this city. In his reply the Viceroy is expected to lay down general outlines of future policy that he intends to pursue, and the public will therefore be anxious to learn what his views are in the matter of the administration of this vast country.

The Yezdan Parast says:—The path of the new Viceroy will be strewn with difficulties and danger, and it is but fair, therefore, that the Natives of India should co-operate with him cordially in threading his way out of them. We have heard nothing but good of the new Viceroy, and we sincerely wish that everything said about him will be realised in its entirety.

Native Opinion says:—To-morrow (Monday) morning his Excellency Lord Lansdowne will set his foot on Indian shores, and will be greeted as usual with all the honours due to his exalted position. His stay is to be short, most of which may be spent in visits and return visits and inspection of the several local institutions of importance, official and non-official; besides his Excellency will be asked to lay the foundation stone of a new wing to be attached to the Sakarbai Hospital for sick animals. Lord Lansdowne succeeds to a Viceroyalty weighed down with a large deficit, a heavy expenditure, and increased anxiety on account of an extended frontier. His Excellency's Viceroyalty in Canada may serve as a novitiate to his Indian career, but both the administrations are essentially different, and as a consequence the principles underlying the Canada administration may not be applicable here. Generally nearly half the time of every Viceroy is spent studying the intricacies of Indian questions, and the consequence is that there is only half the time at his disposal, if he wishes so to do, to evolve from his accumulated experience some new scheme of administrative reform. But in the case of Lord Lansdowne there is this advantage: most of the schemes have been well nigh threshed out, the frontiers settled, and the question of the armies of Native States grappled with, and therefore his Excellency has almost only to select what reform would best suit the present condition of the Indian people. Under the circumstances, his Excellency will have only two questions to solve:—Our financial position and the introduction of some representative institutions leading to a proper control and adjustment of our revenues. With a proper settlement of these questions India will advance in the scale of national progress. In his Jubilee speech the returning Viceroy has emphatically expressed his approval of a reform in our legislative councils, and we sincerely pray that Lord Lansdowne may pick up the requisite courage to launch the scheme with the high expectations of complete success. With these few remarks we offer the Viceroy-elect our humble tokens of sincere respects.

PROPOSED ADDRESS TO LADY DUFFERIN.

The Kaiser-i-Hind says:—It is passing strange that the Bombay society should not as yet have taken steps to recognise the disinterested services of Lady Dufferin in connection with the Indian Medical Women's Fund. Whatever may be the opinion of the Native public about the friendly administration of Lord Dufferin, there can be no two opinions about the feelings of Lady Dufferin towards the Natives of India. People in different parts of India have already presented addresses to the distinguished lady, and we see no reason why Bombay should not follow suit with them. What has become of the proposal recently made by a correspondent of the Times of India about a memorial being set on foot in honour of the Countess of Dufferin? If the people of Bombay will remain apathetic in the matter, it will not speak much about their public spirit and enterprise.

Miscellaneous.

THE BENGAL FACTORIES.—The Government of India has, it is said, directed that Government medical officers in Bengal shall no longer be paid fees for certifying under the Indian Factories Act. The report on the operation of the Factories Act in Bengal for the year ending June last shows that the work of inspection was satisfactorily performed. There were thirty-three factories coming within the definition of the Act, of which thirteen were jute mills, four cotton mills, three Government military factories and two dockyards, besides a jute press, a railway factory, rice mill, silk factory, a shellac factory, a sugar refinery, an iron foundry, gas works and a paper mill. There were altogether 148 accidents reported during the year, of which twenty-five occurred in the Kidderpur Dockyards. Of the total number of accidents only seven ended fatally.

FROM a brochure on the cocoanut palm, which has recently been published at Madras by Dr. Shortt, formerly Surgeon-General in the Madras Army, it appears that when George Herbert wrote:—

"The Indian nut alone
Is clothing, meal and trencher, drink and can,
Boat, cable, sail and needle, all in one,"

supplies man with starch, sugar, oil, wax, wine, resin, astringent matter, edible fruit, fibrous tissue (coir), ornaments, utensils, food for cattle, clothing, &c. It grows best in an alluvial and loamy soil on the sea-shore and when about 80 trees are planted to an acre. It is indigenous to India, but grows throughout the South Seas and in Brazil. It has been estimated that there are 280,000,000 trees in full bearing in the world. In South America there are 1,000,000 acres under the cocoanut palm, in Ceylon 500,000, and in British India 480,000 acres. The export trade of Ceylon in all cocoanut products is worth £800,000 per annum. A single tree in India is put down as being worth a rupee a year, omitting the profit from the fibre and from the green and dry fronds. Taking bearing and non-bearing trees together, the average number of nuts produced is about 100. A large number of trees are bled for "toddy," the sap which comes from the flower spathe, and which when fresh has a pleasant, sweetish taste, but obtains a sharp acid taste after being kept a few days and allowed to ferment. If kept longer it passes into the various stages of fermentation of spirits and vinegar. It is generally used for yeast, and is also boiled for sugar. The outer skin is used for fuel when dry, or is cut into a substitute for scrubbing-brushes. The shell of the ripe fruit is hollowed out by filling it with salt water and burying it in the sand for a time, when the kernel rots and is washed out, and the shell can then be used as a vessel. It is sometimes beautifully carved into cups, bottles, lamps, ladles, &c. The kernel or flesh is often cut into the shape of flowers or fruit, and worn in the hair or formed into garlands for the neck by the Hindoo women. The oil is much used for making candles, and, owing to the chemical changes which take place, is called stearine, and is also, after treatment, used as hair oil. The wood of the tree is turned to a great variety of purposes, for it is hard, durable, and looks well. It is known as porcupine wood, and is used for veneering. The hard stem is converted into drums, gutters, water-pipes, boats, rafters, walking-sticks, &c. It takes a high polish, so as to resemble agate, and is supposed to last fifty years. The roots are masticated by the Natives with betel as a substitute for areca nut. Insects, rats, squirrels, a kind of cat and dog, and a flying fox all do much damage to the tree or fruit. In ten years the trade of the Madras Presidency alone in cocoanut produce amounted to about 816 lakhs of rupees, the nuts producing 145, the kernels 127, the oil 306, and the coir fibre 237 lakhs. Dr. Shortt adds that the name cocoa is a contraction of Macaco, the Portuguese word for monkey, which seems to have been applied to it because of the supposed likeness of the end of the nut, with its black scars, to the face of a monkey.

THE Indian Daily News hears that there is likely to be a considerable shuffling of the cards among the higher administrative appointments under the Government of India almost immediately after Lord Lansdowne assumes office. Mr. Mackenzie is not, as has been stated, going to Hyderabad. The appointment, in the first place, is to be offered to Mr. Fitzpatrick; and, failing him, Mr. Westland, the odd man out in the Financial Department, is to try his prentice hand with the Nizam. Sir Charles Crosthwaite, who is at present in Calcutta, will, if he returns to Burmah, only do so to receive Lord Lansdowne. Sir Charles has been suffering some time from his eyes, and requires rest. He will proceed home for a year, by which time, if Burma is raised to a Lieutenant-Governorship, he will probably return. In the meantime, Mr. A. P. Macdonald, the present Home Secretary, is likely to be Officiating Chief Commissioner of Burma.

TIME was when Commanders-in-Chief in India were the proud and hospitable occupants of houses worthy of their rank at their respective Presidency capitals. But that time has passed away, and at the present moment H.E. Sir Frederick Roberts has no home in Calcutta; H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught is the guest of Captain Hext, the Director of Indian Marine, at Bombay; and H.E. Sir Charles Arbuthnot is encamped on the glacis of Fort St. George. The permanent location of Army Head-quarters at pleasant rather than suitable stations is responsible for this change, but it would undoubtedly be for the welfare of the Army if the order were issued to the Chiefs of "As you were."

THE net value of gold imported to this country from the beginning of the official year to the end of October was Rs. 1,34,68,859, and that of silver imported was Rs. 4,42,53,248, making the total net imports of the precious metals Rs. 5,77,22,107. The assay value of coins and bullion received in the Indian Mints during the same period was Rs. 4,24,56,985, and of the same coined and examined Rs. 4,42,77,623.

THE Minister of Hyderabad and the Financial Secretary, the Nawab Mehdi Ali, were honoured by a long interview with the Marquis of Lansdowne in Bombay, one result of which, says the Pioneer, will be to strengthen the hands of the Nizam in such action as, according to all present appearances, he may be compelled to take against the Concessionaires of the Deccan Mining Company.

LORD CONNEMARA, with the Earl and Countess of Jersey and party, returned to Madras from the Seven Pagodas. The party were the first to occupy the Public Works, Bungalow, which has just been built there, and the signatures of His Excellency and party opened the new Bungalow book, for which Lady Jersey supplied the title-page with the following lines :—

And Shiva o'er his dusky race bears sway,
Sleeps on the lake the lotus flower divine,
Whose petals hold the pink of parting day.
Here where the Past can sculptured glories boast
The Present doth a welcome kind display
For which the grateful travellers thank their host
And wish him Fortune on his future way.”

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

LIEUT. R. M. RAINEY, Bengal Staff Corps, employed in the Military Police in Upper Burma, has been deputed to India to raise nine companies of Hindustanis for the Chin Levy, and to supply the place of men withdrawn from the Railway Battalion for service in other parts of Burma. Lieut. Rainey will make Lucknow his headquarters, transferring them to Delhi or Agra as may be desired, and he will enlist Hindustanis of the best fighting classes only, such as Jats, Rajputs, &c. Colonel May, Commandant 5th Bengal Infantry, Lucknow, and Colonel Stead, 11th Bengal Infantry, Fyzabad, will assist him. When six companies have been raised further orders will be sent.

At the end of the current Relief Season, that is to say by about April next, the military garrison of Burma will be composed of British and Madras troops only, with the one exception of the 17th Bengal Infantry. The whole of the cavalry also are to be withdrawn, as the mounted infantry is now well organised. Bengal and Bombay will thus be relieved from sending in future any of their native troops to Burma, Madras furnishing all that are necessary. With the various frontier levies and the strong body of military police, there need be no question about the maintenance of peace, as the people generally are becoming more law-abiding under Sir Charles Crosthwaite's strong rule.

THE abolition of regimental paymasters in India is to be carried out, their duties being performed by committees of paymasters on an allowance of rupees five per day. The change will be introduced as vacancies occur. Corps coming to India will not bring paymasters.

THE transfer of Fatehgarh from Meerut to the Allahabad command has been formally notified in Army Circulars.

It is notified that officers of the Staff Corps and Indian Army appointed to be colonels on the staff will have to vacate their appointments on attaining the colonel's allowance.

ORDERS have been issued for the formation of an active reserve for Native mountain batteries. The reserve will consist of six gunners and eight drivers per battery—only men of good character and eight years' service being allowed to volunteer. The conditions are one month's training per year, with pay at Rs. 3 a month, and pension after a total of twenty-five years' battery and reserve service.

THE Pioneer remarks that a full half of the population of the Madras Presidency are drinking less spirits than they drank ten years ago. Twenty-five million Englishmen yearly drink into the national exchequer about twenty millions sterling. Thirty million Madrassees contribute but little more than half a million sterling.

THE BROAD ARROW
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE NEW OR SECOND SERIES OF

BY

COLONEL W. F. B. LAURIE.

"No better reading can be recommended for the use of young men than the lives of distinguished Anglo-Indians."—Standard.

"Colonel Laurie continues admirably the work which he so well began."—Globe.

"Bristling with illustrious names. . . . We have here nine substantial biographical sketches, together with brief notices of two dozen or more names also 'well worthy to be filed' on fame's eternal bead-roll."—Daily News.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Estatesman, October 1888.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KARE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

COUGHS, COLD,
ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This system is necessary, as many persons have been purchasers by false representations.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1890.

Dear Sir.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Gt. Russell St., W.C.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep, WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1yd., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Gt. Russell St., W.C.

Wanted, at home and abroad, travellers, agents, canvassers, shopkeepers, timekeepers, foremen of work, clerks, and others, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved, to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Our naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers are invited to apply for the post. The means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service.
